Given Next Saturday.

Given Next Saturday.

OTTAWA, Dec. 16.—After delivering judgments in the Supreme Court yesterday Chief Justice Ritchie announced that the decision in the Manitoba crossing case would be given next Saturday morning at 11 o'clock.

Judgment was given in the Joliette election case confirming the judgment of the court below, unseating Mr. Guilbault on the ground of bribery by agents.

In Presper v. the Queen, an appeal from the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, the appeal was dismissed, Judges Strong and Fournier dissenting. This was an appeal on behalf of Preeper, who is sentenced to be hanged on Jan. 4 for the murder of Feter Doyle, on the ground that certain evidence taken at the trial should not have been admitted.

Brisbois v. the Queen—Appeal dismissed, Judges Strong and Fournier dissenting. This was an appeal on behalf of F. X. Brisbois, sentenced to death for murder at St. Scholastique. An appeal from the judgment of the trial-judge was made to the Quebec Court of Appeals on the ground that one of the jurymen was not qualified to act, having taken the place of another man of the same name, but the appeal was dismissed. An appeal was then made to the Supreme Court and was dismissed on the ground that the court did not have jurisdiction. Chief Justice Ritchie held that the Court of Appeal at Montreal had no jurisdiction to try the case and consequently the Supreme Court had no jurisdiction. He advised that the only way for Brisbois to proceed was by writ of error. Foote v Ecote—Appeal in a will case from Nova Scotis, dismissed with costs.

Trainer v Black Diamond Steamship Company—An action to recover damages for damaged goods, Trainer's appeal dismissed with costs.

McArthur v Brown, et al.—Dismissed

Immigration returns to Nov. 30 show the total number of arrivals for eleven months 156,180, being an increase of 18,018 over the same period last year. The bankruptcy of the Panama Canal surprises nobody here. What does surprise people is M. de Losseps' resignation, which is regarded as a final confession of failure. The intervention of the French Government is considered a desperate expedient to avert a catastrophe for the moment only.

Unionists dislike it because it favors aspirations for Home Rule. Nationalists dislike it because it condemns beyochting, the Plan of Campaign, and other illegal methods which the nationalists deem essential to success. Whether the report will have much practical effect is disputed.

The Maidstone election does but little toward clearing up the political situation. The Tory majority is reduced by hard work on the Liberal side and the Liberals claim a moral victory. The Tories, who set less value on moral victories, are satisfied to retain the seat.

The breach of privilege case which made such a stir in the House of Commons a fortnight since has collapsed. Mr. Sheehy is no longer either a hero or a martyr, and Mr. Sullivan is not destined to become a victim or spend the rest of his days in the Clock Tower. The committee adopted a mild report, but one clause seemed to Mr. Smith so objectionable that he opposed Mr. Whitbread's motion that the House should concur in the report, which was accordingly tabled and is dead. The Moroney case, too, has ended quietly with the release of the bankrupt by Judge Boyd on motion of the landlord who had made him a bankrupt. His champions in the House for some reason declified to agk, the court to release him. Prisoner or otherwise, no more capital is now to be made out of him.

the sand Beach express there arrived here the most important seizure of opium, ever made in the Huron district. It may be remembered that last summer a little schooner, the Emma, owned by Capt. Harry Durant, was seized at Sand Beach on a charge of participating in the opium smuggling trade. Capt. Durant was arrested, but was let off at the time, the government pefering to wait bigger game that appeared to be in prospect. A watch was set on Capt. Durant, and he was kept under strict surveillance by the officers under the direction of Special Agent S. W. Dey, who had complete charge of the case.

Shortly after nightfall on Thursday Harry Durant was seen on horseback at Sand Beach headed for Port the Capt. Shortly after nightfall on Thursday Harry Durant was seen on horseback at Sand Beach headed for Port Hope. Detective Day and his deputies followed him. After about twenty miles of travel they game to a dreary woodland, miles from a house and leading there was no telling where. They had not gone far on the road before they divided, the gang single file, some distance apart. The leader, after some traveling, heard some one coming toward him and quickly returned to his companions, who secreted themselves by the roadside. Durant came up cantiously, revolver in hand, and occasionally uttering a sharp whistle, as though he expected some one. As he came near at hand, the file and is dead. The Mornov case, too, the manded the concurrence of the bankrupt by Judge Boyd on motion of the land of the hankrupt by Judge Boyd on the House for some or capital is now to be made out of him.

The National Liberal Club troubles at trace more and more attention. Lord Hartington has actually resigned. A Fight in Court.

JACKSON, Tenn., Dec. IC.—During trial before Squire Essem in this county yesterday over a settlement between Tom Brown and a colored family named Hicks, Will Hicks cross-examined Miss Fannie Brown in a rather abrupt manner and was told by her brother Tom to be more careful. The negro replied with an oath and knocked Brown down. Other negroes and Peter Brown, brother of Tom Brown, joined in a general fight. Toh Brown cut one or two negroes with his knife and stabbed the mother of Will Hicks in the throat. Tom Brown and his brother were also badly hurt. At last accounts the negroes were arming and there was much excitement.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 16.—The body Irene Hawes was found in the lake at of Irene Hawes was found in the lake at Lakeview near Birmingham yesterday. There were no marks of violence. The find caused no excitement as people had expected for a week that it would be found near where the mother's body was discovered. When told that the body of his other missing child had been found Hawes had nothing to say except to ask in an indifferent sort of way where it was. He then refused to answer any questions. No trouble is expected, but the guard at the jail has been increased as a matter of precaution.

The Work of the Year.

Mrs. Haultain, the Secretary, read her annual report, as follows:—
It must always be a solemn thought to Christian workers that each year as it passes leaves its record with Him who weighs every action in a just and righteous balance. The year 1888 has now closed upon this Auxiliary—its exportunities have lorever passed, its work if iil done can never now be altered nor can any good it has been permitted to perform be fully known till Christ returns in the glory of His kingdom bringing His saved ones with Him. In presenting this report your committee most humbly pray that the weak endeavors of this society to hasten on that kingdom may be accepted by the King as done in His name for those who shall with themselves form the "one flock under the one Shepherd." The minutes of the past year show a steady advance in membershaving been added—while subscribers for the Missionary Leaflet have increased, and the average attendance at the monthly years. Early in the year the auxiliary sustained a severe loss in the removal by death of Mrs. McEwen, of Lakefield, President of its Presbytereal Association—her resence and excellent address at our last annual meeting will long be remembered.

of the general society held in Gueiph. Her report, full, concise and interesting well merited the vote of thanks accorded to it. In May Miss McGregor, tately a missionary but now on furlough from India, accepted the invitation of the committee to visit this auxililary, and gave an instructive and interesting public address, which was well attended. The letter received from the resident missionary on the Assimaboline Reserve, Indian Head, N.W.T., to whom the boxes of clothing, etc., sent from the auxililaries of this and other Presbyteries were conveyed, is full of expressions of grateful thanks for the bounting supplies forwarded in 1837, and it is but fair to say that through the efforts of two or three indefatigable members the Peterborough box will not fall short this year, one lady alone having collected a large sum of money with which new material was purchased. The collecting is a work involving "the taging up the cross," but it will presently receive its reward. The resignation of the Secretary ship early in the year, held for several yearly whise Haultain, called forth mutual expressions of regret, at the unavoidable severance of pleasant ties. A successo was appointed pro tem. The annua thanksgiving service was held in October but from unknown causes it was not as well attended as on formar occasions. Erroneous There is one error in the descriptive part of the new directory published by Mr. J. R. stratton, which we wish to point out. It is Stratton, which we wish to point out. It is stated that the Examiner is the "largest town daily in the province." This is not correct, as the Review is an eight column, four-page daily, and as large as the Examiner. Errors are, perhaps, inseparable from a work of this character, but where the facts are so easily obtainable as they were in this case, such inaccuracy is inexcusable.

She furned round with an ashen face, but with a proud look in her clear eyes.

"My darling," she said, with the tears treaming down her white cheeks, "whatver the world may say, you are always learnest of all to me."

Brian kissed her passionately, and then moved away, while Madge fell down at her lather's feet in a dead faint.

COUNSEL FOR THE PRISONER.

Brian Fitzgerald was arrested a few mintes past 3 o'clock, and by 5 all Melbourne as ringing with the news that the perpetator of the now famous hansom cab murrhad been caught. The evening papers are full of the affair, and The Herald went rough several editions, the demand being in the excess of the supply. Such a crime id not been committed in Melbourne since a Greer shooting case in the opera house, at the mystery which surrounded it made even more sensational. The committal of e crime in such an extraordinary place as hansom cab had been starfling enough, but e discovery that the assassin was one of a most fashionable young men in Melurne was still more so. Brian Fitzgeralding well known in society as a wealthy was still more so. Brian Fingerian well known in society as a wealthy er, and the future husband of one of thest and prettiest girls in Victoria, it o wonder that his arrest caused quite ation. The Herald, which was fortubough to obtain the earliest informa-out the arrest, made the best use of it, oblished a flaming article in most sen-l type, somewhat after this fashion: d type, somewhat after this fash HANSOM CAB TRAGEDY. LEST OF THE SUPPOSED MURDERER Startling Revelations in High Life.

It is needlest to say that some of the re-viers had painted the lily pretty freely, but e public believed everything that came out the papers to be gospel truth. Mr. Frettiby, the day after Brian's arrest, de long conversation, with his days belong conversation with his daughter, santed her to go up to Yabba Yallock n until the public excitement had some-subsided. But this Madge flatly refused o do.

"Tm not going to desert him when he most eeds me," she said, resolutely; "everybody has turned against him, even before they have beard the facts of the case. He says he snot guilty, and I believe him."

"Then let him prove his innocence," said her father, who was pacing slowly up and lown the room; "if he did not get into the ab with Whyte he must have been somewhere else, so he ought to set up the defense the call."

"He can easily do that," said Madge, with a ray of hope lighting up her sad face; "he was here till 11 o'clock on Thursday night."
"Very probably," returned her father

"Very probably," returned her hands dryly; 'but where was he at 1 o'clock on Friday morning?"

"Besides, Mr. Whyte left the house long before Brian did," she went on rapidly. "You must remember—it was when you quarreled with Mr. Whyte."

"My dear Madge," said Mr. Frettlby, stopping in front of her with a displeased look, "you are incorrect—Whyte and myself did not quarrel. He asked me if it were true that Fitzgerald was engaged to you, and I answered yes. That was all, and then he left the house."

the house."
"Yes, and Brian didn't go until two hours after," said Madgo, triumphantly. "He never saw Mr. Whyte the whole night."
"So he says," replied Mr. Frettiby, significantly.

"So he says," replied Mr. Frettiny, signincantly.

"It believe Brian before any one else in the world," said his daughter, hotly, with flushed checks and flashing eyes.

"Ah! but will a jury?" queried her father.

"You have turned against him too," answered Madge, her eyes filling with tears.

"You believe him guilty."

"I am not prepared either to deny or affirm his guilt," said Mr. Frettiby, coldly. "I have done what I could to help him—I have en gaged Calton to defend him, and if eloquence and skill can save him, you may set your mind at rest."

"My dear father," said Madge, throwing

"My dear father," said Madge, throwing her arms around his neck, "I knew you would not desert him altogether, for my sake."

tering voice, as he kissed ner, "there is nothing in the world' I would not do for your sake."

Meanwhile Brian was sitting in his cell in the Melbourne jail, thinking sadly enough about his position. He saw no hope of escape except one, and that he did not intend to take advantage of.

"It would kill her; it would kill her," he sadd feverishly, as he paced to and fro over the echoing stones. "Better that the last of the Fitzgeralds should perish like a common thief than that she should know the bitter truth. If I engage a lawyer to defend me," he went on, "the first question he will ask me will be where was I on that night, and if I tell him all will be discovered, and then—no—no—I cannot do it; it would kill her, my darling," and throwing himself down on the bed, he covered his face with his hands.

He was roused by the opening of the door of his cell, and on looking up saw that it was Calton who entered, He was a great friend of Fitzgerald's, and Brian was deeply touched by his kindness in coming to see him. Duncan Calton had a kindly heart, and was anxious to help Brian, but there was also a touch of self interest in the matter. He had received a note from Mr. Frettlby, asking him to defend. Fitzgerald, which he agreed to with avidity, as he foresaw in this case an opportunity for his name becoming known throughout the Australian colonies. It is true that he was already a celebrated lawyer, but his reputation was purely a local one, and as he foresaw that Fitzgerald's trial for answer.

"She declines to believe you guilty, and will not hear a word said against you."

"God bless her" said Brian, fervently; "she is a true woman. I suppose I am pretty well canvassed" he added, bitterly.

"Nothing else talked about," answered Calton, calmly. "Your arrest has, for the present, suspended all interest in theatres, cricket matches and balls, and you are at the present moment being discussed threadbare in clubs matches and balls, and you are at the present moment being discussed threadbare in clubs and drawing rooms."

Fitzgerald writhed. He was a singularly proud man, and there was something inexpressibly galling in this unpleasant publicity. "But this is all idle chatter," said Calton, taking a seat. "We must get to business. Of course you will accept me as your counsel."

"It is no good my doing so," replied Brian, gloomily. "The rope is already round my neck."

"Nonseuse," replied the lawyer, cheerfully;
"the rope is round no man's neck until he is on the scaffold. Now, you need not say a word," he went on, holding up his hand as Brian was about to speak; "I am going to defend you in this case whether you like it or not. I do not know all the facts, except what the papers have stated, and they exaggerate so much that one can place no reliance on them. At all events, I believe from my heart that you are innocent, and you must walk out of the prisoner's dock a free man, if only for the sake of that noble girl who loves you."

only for the sake of that notoe garyou."

Brian did not answer, but put out his hand, which the other grasped warmly.
"I will not deny," went on Calton, "that there is a little bit of professional curiosity about me. This case is such an extraordinary one that I feel as if I were unable to let ship an opportunity of doing something with it.
I don't care for your humdrum murders with the poker, and all that sort of thing, but this is something clever, and therefore interesting. When you are safe we will together look for the real criminal, and the pleasure of the search will be proportionate to the excitefess you killed him?"

"No," with an angry flush, "but there are ding myself."

To be Continued. That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger airpassages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, wour lungs cannot half dotheir work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it.cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Galt, Dec. 18.—On Saturday the Session of Knox Church, Galt, and the Assessors appointed by the Presbytery, met here to take action in regard to the well known holiness case, referred to them to deal with by resolution of the Presbytery. The accused were all present with the exception of David Caldwell. They still held to their former belief and on motion of Rev. Dr. Wardrope, seconded by Rev. Dr. Middlemiss, they were suspended from membership in the Presbyterian Church, Mr. Caldwell's case will be dealt with in two weeks. On Sunday Rev. Mr. Jackson read the resolution, suspending six of the accused parties, Porry Hore, Dec. 18.—Rev. Canon O'Meara dropped dead at the Grand Trunk railway station yesterday morning while waiting for a train. For over twenty years he had ministered to the spiritual wants of the congregation of St. John's Church here, and during that time he had endeared himself to the people of all denominations. A conscientious Christian with a broad faith that was too large for the restrictions of any denomination he, by his labors and sympathy, did much to further unity of endeavor among the Protestant churches of the town, and was ever foremost in any work that had for its end the advancement of Grirsi's church at large. He occupied a position in the hearts of the people here that only such rare characters can hope, to possess, but his influence and usefulness had a wider reach and in the Synod of his church his kindly voice, and wise, liberal counsels will be sorely missed. He was nearly 80 years of age and had been a member of the Synod for 40 years. For almost 20 years he labored among the Indians of the Lake Superior districts giving to his missionary work all his wonderful vigor, among other of his achievements being the translation of the New Testament into the Indian language. His wife, the faithful help-mate of his missionary and rector's work, died a little over a year ago; his family are Rev. Canon O'Meara of Winnifestion of the Canon O'Meara of Winnifesting are Rev. More Fighting in Prospect.

New Orleans, La., Dec. 18.—A special despatch from Columbus, Miss., to The Picayme asys: Several gentlemen reached this city yesterday morning from Artesia bringing news of the wholesaie slaughter of a constable's posse near Wahalah, a small station on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad near Macon, Miss. On Friday last a negro and a white boy got into a fight. The white boy's father attempted to separate them when he was set upon by the negro and terribly beaten. On Sunday the white man swore out a warrant for the negro's arrest and Constable Seth Cobb went to the negro's house to execute it when he was attacked by a number of negroes and beaten. He then summoned a posse of 12 men and went Sunday evening to arrest the negro. The posse were fired upon from ambush and five killed outright and six wounded more or less seriously. The news spread rapidly and the negroes were strong-ly reinforced. Wahalah telegraphed along the line for help and Meridian responded with about 75 well armed men. They were joined at every station and reaching Wahalah marched immediately to the scene of bloodshed. The negroes were barricaded and refused to surrender or give ny the dead whites. At noon the forces were supposed to be about equal and what the result is, no one here knows. Yesterday afternoon news was received that the beligerent negroes have retreated to the swamps and are stubborn, while the non-eldest boy, a bright lad of 14 years, had been fatally kicked by a horse while visiting at his uncle's, and was dying. Mr. Noice him as a candidate for the mayoralty. Mr.

Denne is generally known as a straight-forward, outspoken gentleman, who says what he thinks, and I would not have referred to him had he not before a public audience of our townsmen, seen it to express himself as "opposed to keeping up" our high schools. Any careful reader of in the school board will give me credit for a desire to improve our public and high schools. I am glad Mr. Denue has so clearly disclosed his position. He says he is in favor of i increased efficiency in our public schools and for better accommodation. I concede this claim to him, and in it I am heartily with him, for I hold that our best teaching should be in the very lowest forms, and then if the various public school forms are well conducted and taught, the education will be thorough and good; and whether the pupil be thorough and good; and whether the pupil is with the high school or not the object.

THE STREET AND BRIDGE COMMITTEE.

Mr. Jas. Bogue said that if Mr.
Hilliard, Mr. Stevenson's Lock Works, and auch were to be exempted from taxation it would certainly be the rich men who would get a free education. However, they had met that night to discuss municipal and not school matters. They should give these their attention and see whether the Counciliors were proper men to be sent back next year. The Council had met on Saturday night to consider a statement of the expenditure, but had not done so, and therefore they could not judge-stat part of the sfair. He could only find fault, he said, with the Street and Bridge Committee. He complained that a great majority of the moneys spent went to benefit certain individuals who were exempted from taxation, and he mentioned the Dickson Mills as one of these. He thought there had certainly been a ring in the Street and Bridge Committee and the money had not been spent to the best advantage. Lumber had been bought without competition and work done by parties which others could have done cheaper. He was decidedly against rings and said no man should be kept in the Council for a number of years, as this had been shown in Toronto.

Address to the Electors. To the Electors of the Town of Peterboro

To the Electors of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN,—At the request of a large number of the electors, I have consented to become a candidate for the Mayor's chair for 1889. In accepting this candidature, I have been influenced by various reasons.

In the first place, Mr. Stevenson openly declared last year that he would not again be a candidate for the position. He not only stated so publicly, but has repeatedly assured me personally that he would on no consideration consent to become a candidate for another term, and that, as another member of the council was anxious for the position, he (Mr. Stevenson) preferred that I should be the candidate.

In the second place, I do not think that it is in the interests of the town that any one man, no matter how go ad a man he may be, should occupy the positions of Mayor of the Town, Chairman of the School Brard, Chairman of the Town Trust Commission, President of the Gas Company—all directly affecting the interests of the ratepayers.

These different concerns involve a large expenditure of the people's money, and it is decirable, and it is obviously proper, that the necessarily conflicting personal and corporation interests that are at issue should be administered by an official, not personally concerned in getting the best end of a bargain at the expense of the town.

In the third place, I am opposed to the large expenditure in connections with the Collegiste Institute, of which my opponent is the foremost champion. I am not in favor of educating rich men's sons at the expense of the poor, but, on the other hand believe that the m'est liberal expenditure of money is justifiable in maintaining and adding to the efficiency of our public schools. I am in favor of having the public schools. I am in favor of having the public schools. I am in favor of having the public schools brought to so bigh a standard that when a poor man's een is compelled to leave them, as he has to do at the age of 14 or 18 he mas he candidate.

schools. I am in favor of having the public achools brought to so high a standard that when a poor man's son is compelled to leave them, as he has to do at the age of 14 or 15, he may be thoroughly equipped with a practical education that will fit him for any business career he may see fit to enter upon. Those who wish to go higher in the educational scale, have access to a provincial university, maintained at the public expense.

I am opposed to the importation of outsiders to fill places of trust intown, when as good men, if not better men, are available at home. I could cite many flagrant instances of disregard of this fair principle, but have not space in this brief address to advert to them.

There are many other questions, such as the assement of the homes of the middle clean to their highest dollar of valce and placing a half assement on the palatial homes of the wealthy, thu tending to the adoption of a policy for making the poor man poo, er and the rich man richer, there are of interest to the ratenayers, upon which, if I receive the confidence of the public, I will always be found arrayed on the side of the people, as a sgaint-cliques, corporations and monopolies of all kinds.

I need only to mention, in order to enforce,

"We hat nonsense," retorted Calton, sharply;
"as if any circumstances should prevent a man from saving his own life. But never mind, I like these objections, they make the nut harder to crack—but the kernel must be worth getting at. Now, you have to answer me certain questions."
"I won't promise."
"I'won't promise."
"Well, we shall see," said the lawyer, eheerfully, taking out his note book and resting it on his knee. "First, where were you "Can't tell you."

"Oh, yes, you can, my friend. You left St. Kilda, and came up to town by the 11 c'clock train."

"Eleven twenty," corrected Brian.

Calton smiled in a gratified manner as he noted this down.

"A little diplomacy is all that's required." he said, mentally. "And where did you go then?" he added, aloud.

"I met Rolleston in the train, and we took a cab from the Flinders street station up to the club."

"What club?"

"The Melbourne club."

"Yes?" interrogatively.

"Rolleston went home, and I went into the club and played cards for a time."

"When did you leave the club?"

"A few minutes to 1 c'clock in the morning."

"And then, I suppose, you went home?"
"No; I did not."
"Then where did you go?"
"Down the street."
"Rather vague. I presume you mean Collins street?"
"Yes."
"You were going to meet some one, I suppose!"

"I never said so."
"Probably not; but young men don't wan der about the streets at night without some object."

"I was restless, and wanted a walk."
"Indeed! How curious you should prefer going into the heart of the dusty town for a walk to strolling through the Fitzroy gardens, which were on your way home! It won't do; you had an appointment to meet some one."
"I'thought as much. Man or woman?"
"I'then I must find out for myself."
"You can't."

"You can't "You for "You can't "You can't "You can't "You don't know where to look for her." "Iler," cried Calton, delighted at the success of his craftly put question. "I knew it as a woman."

"Oh! gon know it, then?"

"Well, yes."

"And you won't tell me?"

"No!"

"No!"
Calton, however, had found out two things that pleased him: first, that Fitzgerald had in appointment, and, second, it was with a woman. He went on another line.
"When did you last see Whyte?"
Brian answered with great reluctance, "I aw him drunk by the Scotch church."
"What! you were the man who hailed the ansown!"

slightly, "I was!"
The thought flashed through Calton's brain as to whether the young man before him was guilty or not, and he was obliged to confess things looked very black against im.

"Ah!" Calton drew a long breath-here "You did not know it was Whyte when you found him lying drunk near the Scotch

"No, I did not. Had I known it was he I

"Of course you recognized him afterward!"
"Yes, I did. And, as the paper stated,

"Why did you leave him so abruptly!"
Brian looked at his questioner in some sur-

"Because I detested him," he said, shortly. "Why did you detest him?"

No answer.

"Was it because he had admired Miss Frettlby, and, from all appearances, was going to marry her?"

"Well, yes," sullenly.

"And now," said Calton, impressively, "this is the whole point upon which the case turns—Why did you get into the cab with him?"

turns—Why did you get into the cab with him?"

"I did not go into the cab."

"The cabman declares that you did."

"He is wrong. I never came back after I recognized Whyte."

"Then who was the man who got into the cab with Whyte?"

"I don't know."

"You have no idea!"

"Not the least."

"You are certain?"

"Yes, perfectly certain."

"He seems to have been dressed exactly like you."

"Very probably. I could name at least a dozen of my acquaintances who wear light coats over their evening dress, and soft

"No, I don't; I know nothing about him, beyond that he came from England a short time ago with a letter of introduction to Mr. Frettlby, and had the impertinence to ask Mades to marry him."

SHE FELL IN A FIT.

New York, Dec. 18.—Annie Smith has the art of falling into a fit down to a fine point. Shortly after midnight last night a young woman who appeared to be fittoricated, accosted Antonio Campiglia, an Italian, retiding at No. 239 Mulberry arted, at Mulberry and Blocker-streets, asking him how he was "fixed." She became very affectionate, throwing her arms around the at Mulberry and Blecker-streets, asking hit how he was "fixed." She became very affectionate, throwing her arms around the Italian's neck and hugging him. Antonis was very drunk and did not object to the display of affection, which he found moment later had cost him $110. The money had been taken from his vest pockeduring the hugging process. He bellowed lustily, raising his musical voice to its highest pitch, and this attracted Officer Hogan's attention. The woman was arrested, but all at once dropped on the street in a fit. The money was found on her person, and she was removed to Bellevue Hospital in a hand cart. She gave her name as Annie Smith, aged 26, but refused to state where she lived.

The Spee Was Leaded.

EASTON, Pa., Dec. 18.—A customer in the shoë store of J. O. Woslavyer noticing that an obstruction prevented her pulling on a shoe informed the clerk, and an investigation brought forth a small purse containing two negotiable notes together worth $1250. They were made payable to Mrs. Mary Smith. This occurred several weeks ago.—Mr. Wolslayer wrote to a man living near Ackermanville to enquire of Mrs. Mary Smith, a neighbor, if she had lost her purse. Word was returned in the negative. Being convinced, however, that Mrs. Smith was the owner of the notes, as she had visited his store, Mr. Wolslayer wrote to the lady himself, explaining the situation. She answered that she had not lost any notes. However, yesterday she had occasion to look over her papers, when she discovered her purse was gone. Then she remembered

Hyde Park Has a Whitechapel Fiend.

Chicago, Dec. 18.—Now it is the women of Hyde Park who live in nightly terror. The wandering maniac, who has made two deadly assanits within the last week and is called by some the murderer of Eva Mitchell, is responsible for this. The women say he larks around their houses at night, trying fastenings, tarning door knobs, ratting blinds, and peering in at windows with a horrible leer. Stories of his mysterious appearance and weird doings are on everybody's tongue up in Hyde Park. He came near killing Hulda Johnson last night. She gave the police an accurate description of the maniac, but the old sleuths of Hyde Park have not traced him. Many of the villagers aver a belief that he is the veritable Whitechapel fiend, but the detectives think he is only a crazy man, who has been affected by reading the Whitechapel stories. War office Plans for Cipher Telegrams—A Beputation of Loan Company Managers Interview the Minister of Finance.
OTTAWA, Dec. 18.—The Railway Committee of the Privy Council met to-day, Hon. J. H. Pope presiding and Sir Heeto, Langavin, Sir John Thompson, and Hon. John Carling being present. At the request of Mr. Gormully, who appeared for Attorney-General Martin, the application of the Manitoba Government for approval of the plans of two bridges across the Assiniboine River at Winnipeg and Portage la Prairie was postponed until the next meeting of the committee, as the plans had not arrived from Winnipeg. The application of the Lake Eric, Essex and Detroit River Railway Company to cross the track of the Canada Southern Railway at Pelton and Colchester was granted, the two companies having agreed in the matter. The applications of the Canadian Pacific Railway and Colchester was granted, the two com-panies having agreed in the matter. The applications of the Canadian Pacific Railway for permission to cross the street railway track at London, and of the Ontario and Quebec Railway Company for approval of the plans of the first ten miles of the road from Richmond-street, London, were post-poned until the next meeting of the com-mittee on Jan. 4.

Last evening the tail pedestrian marched down Water-street into a hardware store and bought an axe. He was followed by his friends, and the party proceeded to Farrell's keno rooms, where Merrit chopped tables, chairs and everything else in the place into kindling-wood. No arrests were made.

Essis and Stanley.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—Mr. Thomson, the African explorer, writes that is sonly too probable that the Mahdi has captured Emin, but was annihilated with his whole party in the region to the wast of the Albert Nyanza. In this region, he says, there are dense forests and swamps, and Stanley and his followers must have had to march single file and to fight for their daily food. The absence of news, he says, is quite natural, because there is no slave or trade route by which an Arab merchant could carry the news. The disaster was wholly due to the selection of the Congeract. Why that route was resorbad still requires an explanation.

Mr. Troups, the transport officer of the Stanley expedition, writes that there was not a single Snider rife nor any ammunition for that kind of rifle in the whole caravan when is left Yambunas.

The chimney, which rose about 30 feet above the foundry, itself 60 feet high, made a big jagged hole in the roof, breaking through two flats, smashing the central shaft and reaching the basement an enormous pile of brick, mortar and splintered wood. Words of Commendation The following letter which explains itself has on handed to us for publication:—

The following latter which explains itself has been handed te us for publication:

My. Adam Danason:

My Dana Sir.—I have just read a Peterberough paper with an account of your Monday evening meeting, and I am taking: a few minutes from a busy morning to write you that it was with pleasure I saw the word you put in for higher education. Education on the lines of the greatest good to the greatest number ought to need no defence in these days. Even on selfash grounds workingmen ought not to say that our national education is for the rich instead of the poor. Every man has a duty to his neighbor, for no man is deing his duty who livelit to and for himself alone. The tide of national life ought to bear up every man. Perhaps it is not a good time to form opinions during the time of an election campaign, but you did well to express an honest opinion in the face of some whose partviam may have run away with judgment. Perhaps in sober moments men might think twice before blowing up every institution against which their oratory is directed during campaigns. Mind you, I do not say our system is perfect—strange if it were. The great problem of the near future is how to unite manual labor with education. All honest work is noble, and, though their callings be different, men's dignity is the same. Do you not think, too, that levelling up in this matter would be better than levelling dozes. The man of ideas and the man who gives these ideas practical shape in wood or stone or iron are brothers. As to education, I think labor organizations would do well to direct attention to the establishment of technical schools or the introduction of manual training as options instead of Latin and Greek. A knowledge of geometry, purspective drawing and architecture would make a better builder surely. To a practical man this may seem visionary, but theory and practice are but two owners. Parhaps you will be surprised at receiving this, but when I read the account of that meeting I thought I would lake to greet you.

CAPT. DURANT IN SARNIA

The Alleged Opium Smuggler Denies Being Implicated.

Port Huron, Dec. 19.—It will no doubt surprise many to learn that Capt. Harry Durant, the alleged snuggler who so cleverly escaped from Government officers near Port Hope, Mich., on Friday night, is now cosily located in the Belchamber house at Sarnia. Being called upon by a reporter, he denied having had anything to do with the snuggling. A couple of shots fired by the officers went uncomfortably close to him. When asked how he got away from Michigan, he

The Negroes who Did the Killing on Sunday Not to Be Found.

Mendran, Miss., Dec. 18.—There is no change in the situation at Wahalak. The village is crowded with men from the surrounding country. Parties have been searching the swamps and every locality where the negroes who did the killing on Sunday night were supposed to be secreted, but none of them were found. It is supposed they have left the country. All the parties who left Merdian yeaterday for the scene of the tragedy have returned and report everything quiet at Wahalak. Nothing remains of the cabins occupied by the negro Geo. Manry and his confederates but their smouldering ruins. All the stock owned by him was killed and everything burned sround the premises.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 19.—Judge Ross, in the United States Court, yesterday rendered an interesting decision as to the rights of Indians living on their own reservation to exercise their tribal laws and pass sentence of death. The case was that of Bill Whaley, Poncho Franco, Scott, Luke, Pete and Jason Chino, Tule River Indians, charged with the murder of their medicine man, Juan Baptista, because twenty of his patients had died under his care. They were allowed to plead guilty of manslaughter, but their counsel raised the point that the Court had no jurisdiction. Judgo. Ross in his decision stated that under an act of Congress of 1855 all Indians committing crimes are amenable to the laws of the United States, whether living on their own reservation or not. The defendants were sentenced to five years' imprisonment and fine of $1 each.

Woodstork, Dec. 19.—The annual meeting of the Oxford Beekeepers' Associatio was held here yesterday afternoon. Hall, Dr. Duncan, F. A. Gemmil. Delegates to the Ontario Association—J. E. Frith and S. T. Pettit. It was decided to hold the spring session on May 21, 1889. The afternoon was taken up with a discussion of various questions of interest to beekeepers.

Durant would not say anything that in any way implicated him. He seemed somewhat worried over what some sensational papers said, and added that there was two sides to the story. He particularly enquires about the officers, and may have a big debit account against them for future settlement, at least for those who fired the close shots. He is satisfied the officers shot to kill. Music Stores, 323 & 423 George-st., Peterbor-Musical Goods & Sewing Machines died at his residence, Rockland, on the border of the town, from old age, not suffering from any disease whatever. He was one of Peterborough's best known and most respected residents, as he for so many years held the office of Town Clerk and Tressurer, and by his dealings in performing the duties of his public office and his life as a private clitizen, his honesty and integrity were known to everybody.

The deceased gentleman was $2 years old at the time of his death. He was born in Leith, Scotland; in August et 1806, and received his education at Portsmonth, England. In 1819 he emigrated to Canada with his parents, who settled on the banks of the Ottawa in Clarence Township. About 1822 Mr. Edwards was one of the party on the vessel which carried the surveyors in search of the water boundary between the United States and Canada. He came to Peterborough county to settle in 1838, and was first engage I as teacher in the Indian Village at Chemong Lake. Afterwards he came into town and followed the building trade and it was he who built the first three storey brick house ever erected in Peterborough. This building stood on Hunterst. just opposite where St. John's church is now. In the year 1837 Mr. Edwards was appointed town clerk and treasurer, a combined position, the duties of which he faithfully performed until the appointment of the Mr. C. D. MacDonald as clerk in 1877. Mr. Edwards was appointed town clerk and treasurer, and was one of those gentlemen who advocated the opening of the Uriversity of Toronto to the poople. He has been for many years secretary-treasurer of the Little Lake Cemetery Company, and was in town only two weeks ago on business connects.

was a staunch Liberal and in his early days took a very active part in political costasts. He was a member of the Baptist church, and was slawsys most steadfast in his professed doctrices. He was married in 1831 to Miss Phetor Cameron, who preceded him to the world unknown two years ago. They celebrated their golden wedding, however, in 1881 and were the head of a family of seven sons one of whom died in infancy, and five daughters, ten of whom still survive. The male members of the family are J. W. Edwards, who has for many years been on the Pacific Coost where he went at the time of the gold fever, J. G. Edwards, of Lindays, C. H. Miss Harper, who acted as court reporter at Greenfield's trial, has a report of the evidence nicely written out with a type-writer. The evidence is given verbatim, and the manner in which it is reported the questions and answers and the cross-firing of counsel and witnesses—shows that Miss Harper is an expert phonographer who practices the art as well as she teaches it.

Cobourg's Opportunity.

The Cobourg Sentinel-Star revives the question of building a railway from that town through the northeastern townships to Hastings and thence to the Cadadian Pacific railway. It says that a number of Cobourg's citizens have the scheme in view, that an engineer has been over the route and that the time has come when a determined effort should be made to carry it out.

To the Electors of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN,—At the request of a large number of the electors, I have consents of to become a candidate for the Mayor's chair for 1889. In accepting this candidature, I have been influenced by various reasons.

In the first place, Mr. Stevenson openly declared last year that he would not again be a candidate for the position,—He not only stated so publicly, but has repeatedly assured me personally that hewould on no consideration consent to become a candidate for another term, and that, as another member of the council was anxious for the position, be (Air. Stevensor) preferred that I should be the candidate.

In the second place, I do not think that it is in the interests of the town that any one man, no matter how good a man he may he, should occupy the positions of Mayor of the Town. Chairman of the School Beard, Coairman of the Town Trust Commission, President of the Gas Company—all directly affecting the interests of the ratepayers.

These different concerns involve a large expenditure of the people's mency, and it is desirable, and it is obviously proper, that the necessarily conflicting personal and corporation interests that are at issue should be administered by an official, not personally concerned in getting the best end of a bargain at the expense of the town.

In the third place, I am opposed to the large expenditure in connection with the Collegiste Institute, of which my opponent is the foremost champion. I am not in favor of educating rich men's sons at the expense of the poop, but, on the other hand believe that the mat liberal expenditure of money is justifiable in maintaining and adding to the efficiency of our public schools brought to so high a standard that when a poor man's son is compelled to leave them, as he has to do at the sage of 14 or 15, he may be thoroughly equipped with a practical education that will fit him for any business career te may see fit to enter upon. Dr. Beers' Address on Annexation Delivered at Syracuse.

At a meeting of the District Dental Society held at Syracuse, New York State, Dr. Beers, of Montreal, was present and gave an address. In response to a number of requests for it, we give it in full. In reply to the toast "Professional Annexation" Dr. Beers spoke as follows:—"Mr. Chairman, ladles and gentlemen, I must confess to a good deal of embarassment in replying to a toast which is intended to be both professional and political, but I have been specially saked to do so by the chairman, and if I should offend any one, as I must say exactly what I think, I can only offer to settle on the spot by inviting you, as the boys say, to 'to come out in the alley!" THE OUTRAGES IN ALASKA. U.S. HOUSE COMMITTEE.

Reither the Laws of God Nor ManShocking Instances of Immerality.

Washikoron, Dec. 19.—Several of the witnesses subpcenaed by the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries testified today regarding the selleged outrages in Alaska.

Wm. Gavitt, a special treasury agent in the Seal Islands in Behring Sea, swore that the Alaska Company's agents at the Island in their conduct respect neither the laws of God nor of man. They had furnished liquor to abandoned women on the Island, not openly, but in an underhand manner. He could not say how it was brought on the island. Mr. Webster, the agent of the Alaskan Company, had said to witness that he would give liquor to the natives whenever he desired to do so. Witness not also seen cases of habitual drunkenness on the island. Regarding the natives witness and they were peaceful, law-abiding people, but there seemed to be dissatisfaction with the company's unangement of affairs in the winter time. The witness said that the whole island was a place of licentiousness from one end to the other.

Witness gave several instances regarding the charges of immorality against the company's agents. At one time a Mr. Kirk said he would whip any Government officer who interfered with his business, meaning his business with women. Another case was that in which an agent of the company had deelared he would break a man's head if he retued to bring his wife to him. Witness said that if he owed any apology to the Government, if he owed any apology to the Government, if was that he did not have Webster, the company's agent, shot.

In response to questions the witness admitted that the social relations of the natives on the island were peculiar and that the women were probably loose in character. He said he would rather serve a term in the penitentiary than go through again what he and his wife experienced on the island. Witness offered several affidavits which he said supported the statements he had made concerning the company's agent, shot.

Witness said the Gov

THE FLOUR OUTPUT.

That For the Same Period In 1887.

MINEAPOLIS, Dec. 19.—The Northwestern Miller to-day says: "The mills running last week were seriously bothered during the last four days by low water and floating ice. On this account the output was kept below the amount that the mill in operation would ordinarily make. The week's production was 64,000 barrels, against 58,000 the week before, and 119,000 for the corresponding time in 1887. The water power is again poor this lweek and acts as an agency for keeping the output restricted to small limits. Low water and floating ice were especially bad during Monday and yesterday and few of the mills running could do much. These obstacles were somewhat less troublesome to-day and there were 10 mills moving, grinding at the rate of about 11,000 barrels daily. Two of them are using steam to some extent and a third would be running with the same kind of power had it not met with an accident. Next week most all the mills will shut down on account of the holidays. It is a question not definitely settled as to what will be the full extent of production after Jan. I. Stocks of flour in the country are evidently smaller than a year ago. The visible supply is rather larger on the Atlantic coast but is smaller in the interior. The invisible supply in many parts of the interior is notoriously small. How much is held by small dealers throughout the interior is at best largely a matter of speculasion. Bradstreet's flour stock estimate of last week has been found radically wrong and has the past week been corrected, reducing the visible supply to 580,900 barrels froin the statement a week ago. Most millers report the flour market excessively dull and say that they do not look for any change for the better until the holidays are over." Last Week' Production Little Over Half That For the Same Period in 1887.

church Sunday school room last evening and which was advertised under the name of "Toy Sinfonie" proved to be very good. The audience was not exceedingly large in its proportions, but the programms was exceeded and was enjoyed immensely. A stage or platform had been raised at the end of the room and a draw curtain run across. The first number announced on the programme was a solo and chorus, "Jingle Bells," the solo part being excellently taken by Mr. Chas. Shaw and the chorus by Messrs. Budden, Charters, Huston, Schofield, Brown and Johnston. Then number two was a pretty vocal solo "Sabbath Bells," by Miss Lillie Jackson, which was encored, and followed by a recitation by Miss Gorman, entitled "The Women of Mumble's Head," which was given in good style and elicited great applause. Next came a vocal quartette, "Virginia Rosebuds," by Miss Errett and Mrs. Stapleton and Messrs. Shaw and Budden, which was greeted with much applause. The next time the curtain was drawn it exposed to view the group from which the entertainment derived its name. There were thirteen instruments under the leadership of Mr. J. W. Miller, and included two violins, played by Prof. Doucet and Mr. Pearce, a bass vile, the plano, the kittle drum, and the rest were toy or so-called toy instruments. The musle produced by this bakers' dozen was by no means unpleasant and was greatly enjoyed. The curtain next parted to allow the rendering of another solo and chorus, "Away up in the Mountains," the solo by Mr. Budden and the chorus by Miss Errett, Miss Chaddle Errett and Mrs. Stapleton and Messrs. Charters, Schofield, Shaw and Houston, was splendidly rendered. Little Lillie Jackson then gave another vocal solo, "Little Red Riding Hood," and was again encored. Then a quartette consisted of shadow pautomines, which were well put on and were very amusing. "Golden Sumbers" in fine style and received well deserved applause. The last feature of the programme was not the leatest, and consisted of shadow pautomines, which were well put on and were very a The official recognition of Mr. A. V. R. "Did you threaten him?"

"Yes, I did. I told him that I would kill him if he persisted in his plan of marrying Madge."

"Ah! if the landlady can swear that she heard you say so, it will form a strong plece of evidence against you. As far as i can see, there is only one defense, and that is an easy one—you must prove an alibi."

No answer.

"You say you did not come back and get into the cab?" said Calton, watching the face of the other closely.

"No; it was some one else dressed like me,"

"And you have no idea who it was?"

"No, I have not."

"Then, after you left Whyte and walked along Russell street, where did you go?"

circumstances of the case and the dramatis persons. When any new evidence came to light, Rolleston was the first to know all about it, and would go round to his friends and relate it with certain additions of his own, which rendered it more piquant and dramatic. But when asked his opinion as to the guilt of the accused he would shake his head sagaciously, and hint that both he and his dear friend Calton—he knew Calton to not to—could not make up their minds upon the matter.

"Fact is, don't you know," observed Mr.

The corporation of Winnipeg having reused to reapond to the call of the Deputy Adjutant-General for the payment of expenses in calling out the local millitis during the recent railway trouble, the matter has been referred to the Department of Justice for an opinion, as to the liability of the city, as although the scene of trouble was not actually within the limits of the city, the requisition was signed by the Winnipeg magistrates. In this connection it might be interesting to note that a riotoccurred at Lusignan Mines, N.S., in 1883 and the militia were called out. The local municipality refused to pay the costs, $1400. The matter was taken to the courts and brought up to the Supreme Court of the province and in each case the municipality lost. They notified the Millitia Department a few days ago that they were willing to pay the $1400 at once and stop proceedings.

Lord Salisbury continued: "As long as the Khedive desires it we shall maintain the Red Sea ports. We are bound under the promise made by Mr. Gladstone's Gyernment to do so. A feature of the fighting was the determined rush upon the trenches by the blacky and Egyptians. The dervishes fought with the utmost bravery, a great many of them dying in the trenches. The charge of the Hussars is also especially mentioned. When the dervish cavalry saw them ceming they dismounted from their horses and planted their spears in the ground, but these proved no obstruction to the Hussars, who swept down upon the dervish horsemen like an avalanche, cut through their ranks and left half of them dead upon the ground. The Hussars then re-formed and charged the remaining dervishes, who fied. A large portion of the rebel force was not engaged in to-day's fighting, being absent camping at Handoub and the wells beyond that place. It is believed the rebels will be reinforced and make an attempt soon to retake their lost position.

The circular complains that the Montreal company has partially failed to maintain the lessees in exclusive and peaceable possession of certain lines, and offers in case of the reduction being granted to deposit with a bank at Montreal as additional collateral security a majority of the shares of the Great North-western Tolegraph Company.

To this the President of the Montreal Telegraph Company responded yesterday:

"The subject matter having been carefully considered by the board, and the contents of the circular having been found to be misleading and incorrect, the directors are constrained to withhold their consent and countenance to the distribution of matter evidently intended to create uneasiness in the minds of the shareholders, any reason for which the board believe does not exist.

As soon as the circular was made public the stock of the Montreal Company became weaker and sold off \(\frac{1}{2} \) to 91 with fairly active dealings.

The press voice the general indignation of the public. The Gazette says: "Mr Erastus Wiman is the brigand of the telegraph world. His letter to the directors of the Montreal company is at once characteristic and unique. Only Mr. Wiman could have indited it. Reading it one can readily understand how its author so quickly became a millionaire. Given time and opportunity he may be depended upon to rival his friend and brother manipulator, Jay Gould. Pointing his pistol at the shareholders whose property he a few years ago obtained control of, he tells them that he has decided that he will no longer pay them the price bargained for, that he has them at his mercy, and that they may take what he offers or nothing."

The Herald says that it "looks very much like an attempt on the part of people in the confidence of the Western Union and Great Northwestern, to "bear" Montreal Telegraph stock with a view of buying it up and securing absolute control of it independent of the agreement and lease of August, 1881. In other words the partial cheek on monopoly secured by that agreement is to be broken by the buying up of the stock by the Americans. That secured the agreement and lease of Canadians to consider whether they should not take steps to prevent such a consummation, by retaining control of Montreal Telegraph stock, and to insist upon the Great Northwestern and Western Union implementing the strict letter of the agreement of tion, by retaining control of Montreal Rec-graph stock, and to insist upon the Great Northwestern and Western Union imple-menting the strict letter of the agreement of August, 1881, in default of which they should at once resume possession of the Montreal Telegraph Company's lines and thus break down the partial monopoly now Clause 3 was in reference to representation in county councils. As the law stands the power to reduce the number rests with the comed and the deputy reaves are the parties who would be cut off in the case of any change. It was considered advisable to take this power out of the hands of the council and relegate it to the people. The report was referred back for this change. Discussion on the different reports was resumed during the afternoon session and taken up again this evening.

went hissing through the floor of the boy's room, through the dress-making establishment, through the floor of that room and liattened itself out on the hard chestnut deak in Mr. Green's store. The escapes from death were remarkable. Not one minute before the gun exploded Miss McManas was seated at ner sewing machine in the dressmater's room, and had just arose and crossed the room when the leaden pellet from the room above passed directly over the spt. where she had been seated, and Miss McManus would most assuredly been bored through and through had she remained at her machine for another minute. Then in the store beneath Mrs. Green had only left the desk where the ball struck and stopped, and, as the desk is a small one, the person writing at it must have been struck about the crown of the head, and would have been killed without ever knowing what had struck them. Mr. Green entered the shop as the dust from the ceilling was still in the air, and was intending to do some writing immediately, so that if the thoughtless youth on the third thorey had delayed fills "amuse have struck Mr. Green on the head with fatal results.

When the boy realized what he had done, fearing the consequences, he immediately made himself scarce, so much so that the father has been on the seach for him ever since and has not found him. There is a lesson in this for fathers not to leave shooting irons of any kind laying around.

Mr. Jas. Stevenson, M.P., responded to the toast, touching on the Ganadian House of Parliament and claiming for the members intelligence and patriotic zeal for the good of the Dominion. In a retrospective way Mr. Stevenson referred to past times and claimed that the country was as prosperous as it ever had been and possibly even more so. He complimented Peterborough Lodge on its activity and enterprise and the zeal to draw together a large fellowship. The objects were good and he looked for a useful future for the Lodge through the efforts and attention of the brethren.

Mr. J. R. Stratton congratulated the society on holding its first annual dimer had feeling that the field was open looked for successful progress from year to year. He commented briefly on the Dominion and Provincial Parliaments, contending that the Legislature was a more representative body than the Dominion House. Rolleston, however, in spite or his asrations, had no grounds for his belief that gerald was innocent, and in his heart of

of those people who, having either tender

m he is down; but if one half of the dl does not in such a brutal manner, the the is down; but if one man of the does act in such a brutal manner, the consoles the prostrate individual with pence. So, taking things as a whole, gh the weight of public opinion was against the innocence of Fitzgerald, he had his friends and sympathizers, stood up for him and declared that he been wrongly accused.

who stood up for him and declared that he had been wrongly accused.

Calton was very much annoyed at Brian's persistent refusal to set up the defense of an alibi, and, as he felt sure that the young man could do so, he was anxious, to find out the reason why he would not do so.

"If it's for the sake wif a woman," he said to Brian, "I don't care who she is, it's absurdly Quixotic. Self, preservation is the surelly Quixotic. Self, preservation is the first law of nature, and if my neck was in danger I'd spare neither man, woman nor while to sure it."

danger I'd spare neither man, woman nor child to save it."

"I dare say," answered Brian; "but if you had my reasons you might think differently."

In his own mind the lawyer had a theory which sufficiently accounted for Brian's refusal to answer for his doings on that night. Fitzgerald had admitted that he had an appointment on that night, and that it was with a woman. He was a haudsome fellow, and probably his morals were no better than those of other young men, so Calton thought that Brian had some intrigue with a married woman, and had been with her on the night in question; hence his refusal to speak. If he did so her name would be brought into the matter; the outraged husband, whoever he might be, would interpose, and the whois affair would probably end in a divorce court. "It's better for him to lose his character than his life," argued Calton, "and that woman ought to speak—It would be hard on her, I admit; but when a man's neck is in danger she ought to risk anything rather than Calton leaned forward, and took her hand.

"Do you want to save his life?" he asked.

"Save his life?" he reiterated, starting up out of her chair with a cry; "God knows, I would die to save him."

"Pish." murmured Calton to himself, as he looked at her glowing face and outstretched hands, "these women are always in extremes. The fact is," he said aloud, "Fitzgerald is able to prove an allbi, and he refuses to do so."

"But why?"

Calton strugged his shoulders.

"But why?"
Calton strugged his shoulders.
"That is best known to himself—some uirotic idea of honor, I fancy. Now, he crases to tell me where he was on that night; serhaps he won't refuse to tell you—so you nust come up and see him with me, and peraps he will recover his senses, and confess,"
"But my father," she faltered.
"Did you not say he was out of town?"

'Yes," hesitated Madge. "But he told me

"Stop! will it do any good?"

Calton hesitated a moment, for he thought that if the reason of Brian's silence was, as he surmised, an intrigue with a married woman, he would certainly not tell the girl he was engaged to about it—but, on the other hand, there might be some other reason, and Calton trusted to Madge to find it out. With these thoughts in his mind he turned round.

"If Fitzgeraid is not a fool he will certainly tell her, all—that is, of course, if he is able to —queer things these women are—I quite agree with Balzac's saying that no wonder man couldn't understand woman, seeing that God, who created her, failed to do so."

Madge came back dressed to go out, with a heavy veil over her face.

"Shall I order the carriage?" she asked, pulling on her gloves with trembling fingers.

"Hardly," answered Calton dryly, "unless you want to see a paragraph in the society papers to the effect that Miss Madge Frettly visited Mr. Fitzgerald in jail, no—no—we'll get a cab. Come, my dear," and taking her arm he led her away.

They reached the station, and caught a train just as it started, yet notwithstanding Madge was in a tever of impatience.

"How slow it goes," she said, fretfully.

"Hush, my dear," said Calton, laying his hand on her arm. "You will betray yourself—will arrive soon—and save him."

"Oh, God grant we may," she said, with a low cry, clasping her hands tightly together, while Calton could see the tears falling from under her thick veil.

"This is not the way to do," he said, almost roughly: "you'll go into hysterics soon—control yourself for his sake."

"For his sake," she muttered, and, with a powerful effort of will, calmed herself. They soon arrived in Melbourne, and, getting a hansom, drove up quickly to the jail. After going through the usual formula they entered the cell where Brian was, and, we the warder who accompanied them opened the door, found the young man seated on his bed, with his face buried in his hands. The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easily put out of order. Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings healt and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a tottle. Seventy-live cents.

man, he would certainly not tell the girl he was engaged to about it—but, on the other hand, there might be some other reason, and Calton trusted to Madge to find it out. With these thoughts in his mind he turped round.

"Yes," he answered, boldly, "if may save his life."

"Then I will go," she answered, recklessly.

"He is more to me than my father, and if I can save him, I will. Wait," and she ran out of the room.

SUPREME COURT'S JUDGMENT

Text of the Judgment.

OTAWA, Dec. 22.—The Supreme Court judges caused general surprise this morning by unanimously deciding in favor of Manitoba in the railway crossing case. The impression, partly caused by expressions dropped by the judges during the argument, that the case would go against the province had become so general that little interest was taken in the formal decision, and few persons were present when judgment was given. The lawyers in court were Hon. William Macdougall, Q.C., Mr. Sedgewick, Q.C., Deputy Minister of Justice O'Gara, Q.C., Mr. Clark, solicitor for the Canadian Pacific Railway, and Mr. Sinclair.

Chief Justice Ritchie read the question submitted by the Railway Committee of the Privy Council as follows:

Is the said statute of Manitoba, passed last before evacuating he must wait for the Mahdi to prove the legitimacy of his claim to the province.

Stanley in the meantime applied himself to restoring order among the troops and distributing stores and munitions. Emin told Stanley that he did not desire to leave Wadelal.

The entire route to the east coast was most dangerous on account of the incessant agitation among the tribes and the hostility of Mwangs.

Toward the middle of April and hearing that a force of Mahdists was coming. Emin ordered his advanced posts between Dufile and Lado to retire to Wadelal and Stanley sent messengers to the Kings of Uganda and Unyoro. About the end of April, when the traders left Wadelai, Stanley was anxious owing to the absence of news from the rear guard on the Aruwhimi and was arranging to send a stronge detachment in search of them along the route which he himself had followed. Stanley also again urged Emin to leave Wadelai with him and regain the coast.

Stanley sent out several couriers with news for Europe. One was the courier who was sent by the foreign consuls at Zanzibar to apprise Emin of the departure of the relief expedition. This courier had remained at Wadelai and was sent back to the East Coast after the arrival of Stanley. Another courier was sent in the direction of the Aruwhimi.

The St. Thomas Bespatch Confirmed.
BRUSSELS, Dec. 23.—King Leopold has recived from St. Thomas a telegram confirming the report of the arrival of Stanley and Emin Pasha on the Aruwhimi.

More Confirmation.

BRUSSELS, Dec. 23.—Official despatches to the Government of the Congo State confirm the report of the arrival of Stanley and Emin Pasha on the Aruwhimi river.

The Khedive's Letter.

SUAKIM, Dec. 23.—The copy of the Khedive's letter to Emin Pashs forwarded to General Grenfoll by Osman Digna proves to be an exact reproduction of the original. A spy from Handoub reports that the village is crowded with wounded Arabs, among them being several Emirs.

outside Berlin, where he reviewed two battalions of the Guards in going through a series of new manœuvres under the new drill regulation.

A perplexed interest has been created by the Emperor's order summoning at the same time Baron Plessen, the military attache at St. Petersburg, and Baron von Huene, the military attache at Paris. Both arrived on Thursday and had an interview with the Emperor without delay.

Duchess Adelaide of Schleswig-Holstein, the mother of the Empress, is seriously ill at the castle of Lomsenbourg. Her 'illness is the result of a tall in her bedroom and adds graveness to the court circles.

The somt-official press continues its attacks on the character of Sir R. D. Morier, the British ambassador at St. Petersburg. The apparent object is to prevent the acceptance of Morier at Vienna under the pending charges of English ambassadors. Morier asks through the British minister here for an official contradiction of The Cologue Gazette's assertion that he held communications with Marshal Bazaine during the war of 1870 and was seeking to betray the German army. Morier, though heartly disliked by Bissharck, will probably get the contradiction he desires. Bismarck knows him as holding views on German politics similar to those of the Emperor Frederick. The English Government proposed him as an ambassador at this place four years ago, but Bismarck promptly rejected him. The Chancellor probably has cause to suspect him of intriguing against German interests since the time of his rejection, but the charge of acting as a spy for Marshal Bazaine is incredible.

The Empress Augusta has offered a prize of 10,000 marks for a portable military Bazaine is incredible.

The Empress Augusta has offered a prize of 10,000 marks for a portable military hospital. The German Red Cross Society holds an international exhibition here in June next, when the Empress gift and other prizes will be awarded for surgical aids in campaigning.

The address of the Bavarian bishops to the Pope does not allude to the position of the Roman Catholic Church in Bavaria. Referring to the subject of temporal power the bishops say: "We suffer with you, with you we claim the re-establishment of your rights of liberty and temporal power. We must condemn what is being tried against the liberty of the supreme chief of the church, and we will work with inexhaustible zeal to restore the holy father true and complete independence." The address concludes with a prayer that God will permit His Holiness to remain inviolable in the motropolis of Catholic Christians.

Teachers Remembered.

The teachers of the schools in Peterborough are popular with their pupils. Mr. Walkle, of the Central, received a companion from his class, with an address, and in the South Ward Mr. Stirling, the headmaster, and Misses Irwin, McLeod and Martin were pleasantly remembered, by their pupils in a similar way. Miss Connell, teacher in the fourth division of the Murray-st. The Mystery of a Hansom Cab

By PERGUS W. HUME. ly FERGUS W. HUME.

She threw back her veil, and he was astonshed to see the sudden change which had one over her. There were no tears now, ind her eyes were hard and glittering, while her mouth was firmly closed. She looked

"I am going to save Brian in spite of himself," she said very distinctly.

"In the first I may tell you that I do not under-Brian's statement that he keeps silence may sake, as there are no secrets in my sat can justify him saying so, but the of the case are simply these: Brian, on tight in question, left our place, at St. at 11 o'clock. He told me he would the club to see if there were any letter him, and then go straight home."
ut he might have said that merely as a

"But he might have said that merely as a bilind."
Madge shook her head.
"No, I don't think so. I never asked him where he was going, and he told me quite spontaneously. I know Brian's character, and he would not go and tell a deliberate lie, sepecially when there was no necessity for it. I am quite certain that he intended to do as he said, and go straight home. When he got to the club he found a letter there, which caused him to alter his mind."
"But who did he receive the letter from?"
"Can't you guess?" she said, impatiently. "From the person, man or woman, who wanted to see him and reveal this secret about me, whatever its. He got the letter at his club and went down Collins street to meet the writer. At the corner of the Scotch church he found Mr. Whyte, and on recognizing him left in disgust and walked down Russell street to keep his appointment."
"Then you don't think he came back?"
"I am certain he did not, for, as Brian told you, there are plenty of young men who wear the same kind of coat and hat as he does. Who the second man who got into the cab was I do not know, but I will swear 'hat it was not Brian."
"And you are going to look for that letter?"

was not Brian."
"And you are going to look for that letter?
"Yes, in Brian's lodgings."
"He might have burnt it."
"He might have burnt it."
"He might have done a thousand things, out he did not," she answered. "Brian is the most careless man in the world; he would put he letter into his pecket, or throw it into the waste paper basket and never think of it is Rolleston coming down the active.

Sak him now.

The cab was just passing the Burke and Wills monument, and Calton's quick eye had caught a glimpse of Rolleston coming down the street on the left hand side. The cab drove up to the curbing, and Rolleston stopped short, as Calton sprang out directly in front of him. Madge lay back in the cab and pulled down her veil, not wishing to be recognized by Felix, as she knew that if he did it would soon be all over town.

"Hallol old chap," said Rolleston, in considerable astonishment. "Where did you spring from?"

"From the cab, of course," answered Calton, with a laugh.

"From the cab, of course," answered Calton, with a laugh.

"A kind of Deus ex machina," replied Rolleston, attempting a bad pun.

"Exactly," said Calton. "Look here, Rolleston, do you remember the night of Whyte's murder—you met Fitzgerald at the railway station?"

"In the train," corrected Felix.

"Well, well; no matter, you came up with him to the club."

"Yes, and left him there."

"Did you notice if he received any message while he was with you?"

"Any message" repeated Felix. "No, he did not; we were talking together the whole time, and be spoke to not be but me."

"Was he in good spirits?"

"Excellent; made me laugh awfully—but why all this thusness?"

"Oh, nothing." answered Calton, getting back into the cab. "I wanted a little infor-

"I never saw anything like these lawyers," he said to himself. "Calton's a perfect whirlwind, by Jove."
Meanwhile Calton was talking to Madge. "You were right," he said, "there must have been a message for him at the club, for he got none from the time he left your place."
"And what shall we do now?" asked Madge, who, having heard all the conversation, did not trouble about questioning the lawyer about it.
"Find out at the club if any letter was waiting for him on that night," said Calton, as the cab stopped at the door of the Melbourne club. "Here we are," and with a hasty word to Madge, he ran up the steps. He went to the office of the club to find out if any letters had been waiting for Fitzgerald, and he found there a waiter with whom he was pretty well acquainted.

"Look here, Brown," said the lawyer, "do you remember on that Thursday night when the hansom cab murder took place if any letters were waiting here for Mr. Fitzgerald."
"Well, reality, size," hositeted. Brown, "it's

Davis-was sitting near the boiler, and a few feet from the doorway which connect the Gas Company's premises. A few moments before the first explosion William Sinclair, foreman of the gas works, Dr. Schmidtburn, and Obarles Steinmeyer, analyst for the Ammonia Company, were standing near the agitators conversing. They moved out into the yard and we e looking at the wells containing the refuse water when the first explosion took place. The three men were hurled to the ground, a brick from the parting wall striking Mr. Sinclair in the add and accelerating his fall. He and his companions scrambled to their feet, and started across the yard towards the furnae room of the Gas Company. It was then that the two other explosions occurred, following quickly in succession, enveloping the yard and neighborhood in a huge cloud of blue vapor, while sprays of ammonia spouted in all directions.

A Crown Presented to the Katser—Berlin's Christman Budget.

Berlin, Dec. 25.—The burden of the Christman comment of press and pulpit reverts to the anxieties prevalent at the same period for the last three years and to the existing prespects of peace. Germany holds the festival breathing peace while conscious that the war drum still rolls afar. The weather has not been Christman-like. Instead of a crisp frost there has been a prolonged period of damp, cold and rainy weather and the streets of the Capital abound in mud. Tradesmen's hearts have been made lighter for the past few days by an influx of buyers that exceeded all expectations.

The Empress has been actively engaged in buying presents for the Court and the royal family. Last evening after the imperial dinner at the palace the gifts were distributed. The household officials of the Empress and the Dowager Empress Augusta made nunusually large purchases for distribution attiong the poor.

When the Emperor visited the Vulcan shipbuilding works at Bredow on Saturday he was greeted by 3000 workmen, who lined the approach to the works. A crown of laurels was offered to his majesty, who in accepting it said, "If thank you. These are the first laurels that have been offered to me, I am happy to think that they are the laurels of peace."

The Chancellor's illness, which has given rise to alarmist rumors in the Progressist press and the French newspapers, does not hinder this work. He has wired his congratulations to Lord Salisbury regarding the English victory in Snakim.

Prince Bismarck ignores the appeal of Sir R. D. Morier, the British ambassador at St. Petersburg, to authorize an official contradiction of the charges recently made by The Cologne Gazette of his having anti-German leanings, and of having while at Darnistadt is 1870 sent the first news of the advance of the Germans across the Moselle to London, whence the news reached Basano.

Well Attended—The Munic.

Well Attended—The Munic.

Yesterday was rather a dreary Christmas in a country like this Canada of ours. To make a really jolly Canadian] Christmas there must be snow, sleighing, skat. ing, etc., for the jingle of merry sleigh bells has for so long been the favorite note in our Christmas without them. Yesterday, however, it was the dropping of the rain and the splashing of the mud that greeted the pedestrian or driver. Of course there was the usual family gatherings and rejoicing on which the weather does not and never will, it is hoped, have any damaging or dampering effect on the annual family re-unions.

The Angelican and Methodist churches had special services morning or evening and these were all well attended for Christmas services and considering the weather.

The METHODIST CONGENGATIONS.

The union services of the two Methodist congregations in the George-st. church at 10.30 in the morning was attanded by a large congregation considering the weather. Special music had been prepared and the Eart. S. J. Shorey preached a child and appropriate sermon. The chair during the service and especially of the two anthems was excellent. Miss Butcher gave a solo. "It came upon the Midnight," in good voice, and the duet by Mrs. Hamilton and Mr. John Millar was spiendidly rendered. The collection was for the poor fund of both churches and was elebrated in St. Peter's position of runit sensor trustees so place at noon to-day. The retiring members were Mr. English in No. One, Mr. Wrighton in No. Two, Dr. Burnham in No. Three, and Mr. T. Rutherford in No. Four. The nominations were as follows:—

for the poor fund of both churches and was a liberal one.

AT ST. PETER'S.

Mass was celebrated in St. Peter's eathedral in the morning. His Lordship Hishop Dowling officiating. At 10:39 Farmers' Mass was sung by the choir with organ and grand orchestra under the leadership of Prof. J. A. Doucet. The service was successfully performed, the music being grand. In the qui tollis Miss Yokome rendered the soic on her violin with great credit. The music of the choir under its first-class training was exceedingly creditable. At the evening service His Lordship again officiated at grand vespers. Miss M. McFadden sang a solo, "O Salutaris," in exceedingly good voice, and the services concluded with grand taum ergo Labillottis by the choir. The congregations at the services were very large.

ST. LUKE'S.

St. Luke's congregation turned out in good numbers to the two services held there yesterday, and the services were most successful and the music grand.

ST. PAUL'S.

A special Christmas service was held in St. Paul's Church at 11 o'clock in the morning, when a fair congregation turned out. Rev. E. F. Torrance, who is suffering from a severe cold, was assisted by Mr. Joseph Glimour, who is attending McMaster Hall. Mr. Glinnour gave a good discourse and the choir, under the leader-ship of Mr. Parker, the organist, rendered a couple of fine anthems, and the singing was good throughout the antire service.

one stone was thrown a distance of about 130 feet and broke Mr. Fallis' window on the main street.

The Rikk.—The rink was opened here about a week ago, with the band in attendance, and now the young people of the village spend a few pleasant hours on their skates, or the older heads amuse themselves at shooting the "stanes."

SCHOOLS.—The schools closed here on Friday, the 21st December, and will not open till January the 7th. The promotion examinations were held and all the results announced before the close in each room. MUNICIPAL.—From the appearance of things at present it is quite likely that we shall have a number of aspirants for municipal honors, and the contest for the keevenip will no doubt be a sharp one.

The GRIST MILL.—Mr. Needler has his mill in first-class running condition now, and the roller process seems to please all who have tried it. On account of the mill being idle for some time while the rollers were being put in, the farmers were about starved out in this locality, and the result is that there has been a general rush since the mill began work; but by running day and night, the demand for the staff of life has been fully supplied.

Tran Merting.—A very successful tea meeting was held at the Nogle's Creek Mothodist Church, on Monday evening isst.

The Revs. Messra: Wilson, Maliet and Modamond, and Mr. Stratton, M.P.P., and Wr. Hall, from Peterborough, gave excellent addresses. The choir also rendered good service.

Special Services.—Revival meetings have been held in the Methodist church during the last three weeks. Some thirty-seven or eight have determined to liee from the wrath to come.

That is to say, your lungs. Also ail your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger airpassage, but the thousands of little tubes and eavilies leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to the them, our lungs cannot half to the work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call toold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and ones and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. Catton gave nim a sovereign.

"Oh! If's not that, Mr. Calton," said the raiter, pocketing the coin, nevertheless.

"Int' I really do forget,"
"Try and remember," said Calton, shortly.

Brown made a tremendous effort of memry, and at last gave a satisfactory answer.

"No, sir, there were none!"
"Are you sure?" said Calton, feeling a hrill of disappointment.

"Are you sure?" said Calton, feeling a thrill of disappointment.

"Quite sure, sir," replied the other, confidently. "I went to the letter rack several times that night, and I am sure there were none for Mr. Fitzgerald."

"Ah! I thought as much," said Calton, heaving a sigh.

"Stop!" said Brown, as though struck with a sudden idea. "Though there was no letter came by post, sir, there was one brought to him on that night."

"Ah!" said Calton, turning sharply. "At what time?

"Just before 12 o'clock, sir,"

"Who brought it?"

"A young woman, sir," said Brown, in a tone of disgust. "A bold thing, beggin' your pardon, sir, and no better than she could be. She bounded in at the door as bold as brass, and sings out, if she him? "Get out, I says, 'or I'll call the perlice.' 'Oh no, you won't,' says she; 'You'll give him that,' and she shoves a letter in my hands. "Who's him? I asks. "I dunno,' she answers. 'I's written there, and I can't read; give it him of once.' And then she clears out before I could stop her."

"And the letter was for Mr. Fitzgerald?"

or An Hour They Dodged A New York Salounkeeper's Ecvolver.

New York, Dec. 25.—In a low dive at No. 139½ West Twenty-fifth-street at 4.50 Sunday morning Alexander Gilman, a colored expressman, 29 years old, of No. 97 Crosbystreet, was shot in the left shoulder by George Carroll, the white proprietor of the place.

At that hour a man reported at the West Thirtieth-street station that there was a riot in Carroll's saloon and that a number of men were killing eack other. Officer Samuel Magrane found a scene of confusion in front of the saloon, The windows were smashed in and the door was broken and there was the wildest confusion inside. The glasses, bottles and a mirror behind the bar were all smashed to pieces, while the proprietor, in his shirt-siecves, torn and bloody, stood upon the debris of shattered glass, with a 32-calibre revolver in his hand, as if waiting for an attack from some quarter. He did not know whether it would come from under the counter, where two men were, or from over the bar, where he had slready shot Alexander Gilman.

The proprietor and eight people found in the place were placed under arrest and arraigned at Jefferson Markat yesterday. A charge of felonious assault was made against Carroll. Gilman had been removed to the New York Hospital. Justies Forliheld Carroll in $2500 bail, but when he was informed that Carroll had been robbed sixteen times and he was only defending his place this time bail was reduced to $1000. He was also placed under $100 bail for violating the Excise law.

Carroll is a stout man, slightly bald. He said that he had been robbed only two $1000. He was also placed under $100 ball for violating the Excise law.

Carroll is a stout man, slightly bald. He said that he had been robbed only two nights before and the contents of the till carried off. Gilman and the other colored man arrested entered his place late on Saturday night and played several games of pool. He wanted them to leave the place as they quarrelled among themselves. He finally told them he wanted to close up, and the men began fooling and chased one of their number behind the bar. Then another came behind and would not leave. He saw that "it was "a put-up job," as he said, to rob him, and he sent his son-in-law to get the police. Then a third man tried to get behind the counter, but Carroll would not let him.

the police. Then a third man tried so behind the counter, but Carroll would not let him.

The third man tried to jump over the counter, but Carroll drew his revolver and told him to stand back. Then Carroll turned his pistol at the men behind the bar and they crouched down on the floor. For an hour he kept covering the three men with his weapon, first the one over the counter and then at the men under the bar. Every time a move was made by any one of them the pistol was pointed towards him. All this time Carroll's relatives were out looking for a policeman to come along.

At last the man outside the bar, who was Gilman, got hold of a cue and raised it to deal Carroll a blow on the head. The cue struck the chandelier and smashed it. Carroll shouted to him to stand back, and, as he did not do so, fired oneshos, which struck Gilman in the left shoulder. Just then one of the men behind the counter jumped through the glass of the show-window and escaped.

Carroll told the police as they took him out of the saloon that there was a man hid den under the window. The police went to the saloon, but the man was gone.

GENTLEMEN,—At the request of a large number of the electors, I have consented to become a candidate for the Mayor's chair for 1889. In accepting this candidate, I have been influenced by auticus reasons. Mr. Stavenson openly declared lost the position. He not only stated so public by the have readedly assured me personally the have used to no consideration consent to become a candidate for the position, he (Mr. Stavenson) presented that I should be the candidate.

In the second place, I do not think that it is in, the interests of the town that any one man, no matter how good a man he may be, should occupy the positions of Mayor of the Town. Trust Commission, Fresident of the Gas Company—all directly affecting the interests of the ratepayers.

These different concerns involve a large expenditure of the people's money, and it is desirable, and it is obviously proper, that the necessarily confincing personal and corporation interests that are at issue should be aluminated by an official, not personally concerned and the town. In the third place, I am opposed to the large expenditure in ownection with the Collegiate Institute, of which my opponents; the formost champion. The Marblehead Fire.

Marblehead, Mass, Dec. 27.—Yesterday was one of intense sorrow in this town. With the single industry of Marblehead swept away by the fire of Christmas night, much suffering must ensue and men and women are beginning to fully realize the situation. Thousands of curiosity seekers have visited the ruins. The local military company has kept guard over the large piles of furniture that have been placed in public places. It was after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon before the fire engines left their position and the dense smoke cleared away. One of the saddest incidents of the fire was the death of Mrs. Sally Evans who had been ill for several days. She became insensible and was taken from her home to that of. a neighbor where she died from the shock. Town Clerk Steven William Frost was badly injured about the face. William Frost was badly injured about the head. J. Edward Blaney was sinjured about the head and face. As there were many wooden buildings in Marblehead and the weter service and fire department were not very efficient the insurance companies had generally taken but small risks, say from $500 to $2000, so that a great loss will not be sustained by any one company. The total loss by the fire is over $500,000.

CONVENTION OF DAIRYMEN

A DOMINION DAIRYMEN'S ASSOCIATION.
In letters to come the reader will see that of the factors in the improvement of ying abroad has been organization. A ying of the history of Canadian dairywill teach him that organization has most effective here.

Such organization involves meetings of enterprising, active and representative field high all parts of the country, discussions of general questions, and such action as seems to the assembled wisdom in the general interests. The most promising means of attaining these ends appeared to the writer to be

Abamining these ends appeared to the writer to be

A DOMINION DAIRYMEN'S CONVENTION.

The place for holding such convention should be Ottawa; and the time, this winter diring the coming session of Parliament, agriculturally inclined—and there are a good many such would take an active interest in the meetings and their services would be availed of by their constituents, to assist delegates, or seen to act as such.

The cordial approval by many prominent fairfyma, in all parts of the Dominion, has made the proposed convention a practical certainty. The desire to make the work of months productive of practical results has led the writer to commit himself to the idea of such a convention, which means doing everything in his power to make it a success. It is not too much to ask of Canadilly dairymen that each one of them do his part towards making the success hope for, and the writer has abundant faith in a hearty response to the opportunity here presented to perhaps give the dairy industry a great impetus.

I made an effort to secure the co-operation of the fruit industry in the profosed convention, which has resulted in a suggestion that one day, at least, be set apart for the consideration and discussion of such a guestions as will equally serve the fruit interest, say the questions of marketing, cold would naturally be of a general rather than of a local character, such as markets, markoling, packing, peckages, storage, refrigeration, transportation, inspection, grading, butter v. cheëse, co-operation, various systems of co-operation, ducational work, dairy schools, technical aspects, etc., etc.

It is to be hoped that anyone interested and possessed of valuable ideas in this connection will be prepared to offer them; not necessarily in a long paper, but rather written or spoken in sharp, crisp form and to the point.

While abroad I made a few purchases which promised to possess for such an occasion a certain interest, and perhaps value, all of which will be freely placed at the use of the convention; notably, in this collection a milk testing apparatus, which I found in successful use in the Copenhagen Milk Supply establishment, and only there.

There are many dairymen who MAY CONTRIBUTE SOMETHING

who may contribute something in this way to the needs and usefulness of such a convention. Even the contributions of manufacturers and dealers would be of value; and those would serve their own interests, legitimately, in offering anything in their respective lines.

Were it carlier in the season, I would further propose that butter-makers in different parts of the country send in samples of their product, especially where these samples could be accompanied with full particulars of their manufacture. These products would serve several important purposes. They would indicate what are the various and the product of the country serve several important purposes. would serve several important purposes. They would indicate what are the various methods adopted throughout the Dominion in butter-making. They would put their products as prepared to the test of transportation, comparison and valuation. They would afford contrast of the different methods in vogue, and, by bringing into view the best, would afford suggestion of what might be adopted more generally. They would afford object lessons for the convention, of greatest possible value. These samples, also, would afford immediate means of carrying out certain experimental work in transportation abroad and marketing. It is possible that there may be available some few samples of this character, but the suggestion must not be lost sight of in future years.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger alreasages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be get rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid to them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a best tile. ANOTHER RIGHROND IN THE FIELD.

There is an old adage that "like draws to like," and the antithesis of this would probably be that unlike keeps as far away from unlike as it possibly can. Sometimes, however, Fate, who seems to take a malignant pleasure in worrying humanity, throws them together, and the result is an eternal conflict between the uncongenial elements. Mr. Gorby was a very clever detective, and got on well with every one with the exception of Klisip. The latter, only the other hand, was equally as clever in his own way, and was a dorby was a very clever detective, and got on well with every one with the exception of Klisip. The latter, on the other hand, was equally as clever in his own way, and was a favorite with every one but Gorby. One was fire and the other water, so when they came together there was sure to be trouble. Klisip, in his outward appearance, was quite different from Gorby, being tall and slender, whereas the other was short and stout. Klisip was dark and clever looking, Gorby was not, his face wearing a complacent and satisfied smile, which one would not expect to find on the features of a man who was looked upon as a clever detective. But it was this very smile that was Mr. Gorby's 'greatest add in getting information, as people were more ready to tell a kindly and apparently simple man like him all they knew than a sharp looking fellow like Klisip, whose ears and eyes seemed always on the slert.

They each had their followers and admirers, but both men cordially detested one another, seldom meeting without a quarrel. When Gorby, therefore, had the hansom cab murder case put into his hands, the soul of Klisip was smitten with envy, and when Fitzgerald was arrested, and all the evidence collected by Gorby seemed to point so conclusively to his guilt, Klisip writhed in secret over the triumph of his enemy. Though be would only have been too glad to have said Gorby had got hold of the wrong man, yet the evidence was so conclusive that such a thought had never entered his head until he received a note from Mr. Calton, saking him to call at his office that evening at 3 o'clock, with reference to the hansom cab murder. Klisip haw that Calton was counsed for the prisoner, and instantly guessed that a clew had been discovered, which he was wanted to follow up, and which might prove the prisoner innocence. Full of this idea, he had determined to devote himself, heart and soul, to whatever Calton was counsed for the prisoner innocence. Full of this idea, he had determined to devote himself, heart and soul, to whatever Calton wa man to have laid your hands on that hansom cab imurderer so quickly."

"Yes; I flatter myself I did manage it pretty well." said Gorby, lighting his pips.
"I had no idea that it would be so simple—though, mind you, it required a lot of thought before I got a proper start."
"I suppose you're pretty sure he's the man you want?" pursued Kilsip, softly, with a brilliant flash of his black eyes.
"Pretty sure, indeed!" retorted Mr. Gorby, scornfully, "there ain't no pretty sure abova it. I'd take my Hible oath he's the man. He and Whyta hated one another. He says to Whyte, 'I'll kill you if I've got to de it in the open street. He mests Whyte drunk, a fact which he asknowledges himself; he clears out, and the cabman swears he comes back; then he gets into the cab with a living man, and when he comes out leaves a dead one; he drives to East Melbourne and gets into the house at a time which his landlady can prove —just the time that cab would take to drive from the grammar school on the St. Kilda road. If you ain't a fool, Kilshp, you'll see as there's no doubt about it.
"It looks all square enough," said Kilstp, who wondered what evidence Calton could have found to contradict such a plain statement. "And what's his defense!"
"Mr. Calton is the only man as knows that," answered Gorby, finishing his drink; "Dut, clever and all as he is, he can't put anything in that can go against my evidence."
"Don't you be too sure of that," meered

"I don't believe you've got the right man," emarked Kilsip, deliberately.
Mr. Gorby locked upon him with a smile of

er would trust her minute. And that was so valuable to as I ever saw. Any mother would trust her daughter to her care in a minute. And that is the reason Mrs. Judson was so valuable to her employers. She would get a little party of bright, pretty girls together, train them thoroughly in the art of soliciting subscriptions, make out lists of places for them to visit and remain always with them to cheer them up when they were downhearted. That was the secret of her success and ours. It is the most hearthreaking work in the world. If we came home in the afternoon, having made sales that would net us $10 in commissions, there was the same down hearted feeling the next morning. Each day's work was usually preceded by a fit of weeping all around, and but for Mrs. Judson's good practical counsel and cheerful views of the situation we would have given up to our feelings of repugnance for the work, and probably be today pale and sickly "salesladies" in in some shop at $2 a week.

Well, I consented to give the work a trial, and after a course of preliminary training from Mrs. Judson I set out one bright summer morning irreproachably dressed, and, if I do say it myself, looking several points above par, as women go. In an expansive new moroceo case with oxide clasps I carried a copy of "American Etiquette," and had been instructed by Mrs. Judson to the effect that I ought not to sell less than twenty copies in the wholesale establishment located at No. — Morroe street. The price of the book was $1, and my commission on each sale was 40 cents.

"Forty cents each on twenty books is $8," I

My instructions were to the top.

"Get the proprietor first," Mrs. Judson had said repeatedly, "and when the underlings see his name at the head of your list they will fall in without urging."

So I requested a young man near the door to direct me to the proprietor. He was a homely, morose, sorrowful looking creature, but I smiled on him sweetly. He gave me an ugly leer, and pointed to a sign which hung near the door and read:

book agents."
"Pardon me, sir," I answered; "I did read it, and my principal reason for disregarding it was that I wished to tell you that it is a shame to you and a disgrace to the establishment."

"All right. This is getting interesting. Go

"Why, side by—or crossed, I mean, of course."

"Lost!" I said, triumphantly. "Put your name right down here, please."

He didn't stop to argue the point, but put his name down with the best grace possible. Then he went with me to the floor walker, to whom he said that I was an exception to the rule and was to have the freedom of the house. The floor walker was unable to conceal his curiosity, and I lost no time in capturing him. The proprietor's name at the head of the list was irresistible. It was the entering wedge, and I forced the campaign with vigor. The bookkeepers and salesmen ceased winking at each other and put down their names like little men. When I left the store at lunch time I had twenty-two names on my list and was $8.80 ahead! But, notwithstanding the phenomenal success of my first plunge, I went home in a state of abject misery, vowing never to solicit another order it it was to save me from starvation. One little incident the like of which is the perpetual horror of the female book sigent's existence spoiled all the triumph of the morning.

In Brief and to the Point.

MR. STEVENSON'S REPLY. Although I had aimost definitely decided to retire from active and efficial participation in municipal matters, yet the desire, as expressed in the foregoing requisition, seems to be of so general and representatives a character, that I feel that I would be doing less than my duty as a citizen II I failed to respond to it, therefore, though I do so with personal rejuctance, in compliance with the formal demand for my services, I hereby consent to become a candidate for the mayorative of Peterborough for the year 1880. In so doing think I have a right to feel that my past services have been employed in the best interests of the town, which could hardly be otherwise, when it is borne in mind that, have no small share of material interests of the otherwise, when it is but the hare no small share of anaterial interests to be effected by the administration of the municipal affairs of the town. It is, therefore, my own interest to use my best efforts to secure economical and prudent management of civic matters, and I think my past course is a sufficient guarantee that the public interest will not meet with neglect at my hands. I might suggest that my efforts in promoting manufacturing industries shows that mayor, assured that I can count upon your assistance in securing my return.

Wife-Mursterer Webb Executed at Brandon-He Meets Beath Calmity.

Brandon, Dec. 28.—Webb, who murdered his wife on Sept. 1, was hanged this morning. Yesterday he took a last farewell of his children, and the scene was very affecting. Webb, while on his knees, encircled his three little girls in his arms and prayed that God would guide and keep them. Rev. Mr. Flewellyn remained with the prisoner all night, and Sheriff Clement was with him until 2 o'clock this morning. At the sheriff was leaving, Webb said, "Don't fret about me; I am all right." At 6 o'clock last night he ate his usual meal, and at midnight partook of a small lunch. At 8 o'clock the hangman entered Webb's cell, and at 8.03 the procession walked up the scaffold. Webb walked with a firm step. The black cap was drawn over his face and the noose put round his neck. Rev. Mr. Flewellyn commenced the Lord's Prayer, and at the words, "Thy kingdom come" the drop fell. Death was almost instantaneous. Not a muscle moved nor was there a twitch of the body noticed. After hanging about forty minutes the body was taken down and the usual inquest held. Rev. Mr. Flewellyn has made application to the Attorney-General for Webb's body, and intends to have it decently buried.

American Wheat Experts to the United Kingdom Falling Away.

New York, Dec. 28.—Special telegrams to Bradstreet's report a universally quiet movement on the part of staple goods. Funds inclined to increased firmness at the larger centres, Merchants at most of the leading points of distribution look confidently for an active revival of business early in 1889. The improvement in the railroad situation gives a stronger tone to stock speculation at New York. Bonds are strong and an increasing investment demand is anticipated.

The New York money, market is strong on the disturbance of loans caused by the January disbursements. Call loans were quoted as high as 8 per cent., but the average rate on Friday was 5 to 6 per cent. Foreign Exchange is lower on the appearance of some bills against wheat shipments; demand sterling, $4.88 to $4.88 $5.

Total exports of wheat from the Atlantic ports this week were but 38,000 bushels and from the Pacific coast about 630,000 bushels and from the Pacific coast about 630,000 bushels for wheat was exported, both coasts, which gives an aggregate as wheat for the week of 1,229,141 bushels against 1,487,720 bushels last week and as compared with 1,524,000 bushels in the closing week of 1887. The total exports (wheat and flour) both coasts since July 1 are 51,230,000 bushels against 2,487,720 bushels last week and as compared with 1,524,000 bushels in the loaing week of 1887.

The principal source of Indian corn supply for the United Kingdom for the next three months will be the United States, owing to quick transit and cheapness. The probable British wheat deficiency for the year ending Aug. 1, 1889, is now calculated only 10,240,000 bushels, which may be easily covered by English reserve stocks. American wheat exports to the United Kingdom for three months past have fallen away to one-half the total of one or two years ago, while those from Russis have indicated and not yellow the stronger with the summard of Pittaburg by cheap southern irons speaks for itself. CONGRATULATIONS!

We desire to extend to our Myriads of Patrons, far and near, the Compliments of this Merry Holiday Season, and to wish them, one and all, Many Happy Returns.

TAUTE ET.

We also desire to say that the Laurels we have won during 1888 for Cheap Goods, will be retained during 1889 if Low Prices count for anything. For this reason the Sale of the SHEPPARD BANKRUPT STOCK will be continued, with the determination to offer still Greater Bargains in Dry Goods, Carpets, Clothing, etc., at Sheppard's Old Stand, Opera House Block.

Another startling upheaval in Ready-made Clothing, Gents Furnishings and Boots and Shoes has commenced in our two Big Stores, No. 377 and 379 George-st. The dividing wall has to come tumbling down, and other improvements made, so that the Prices of Goods must suffer another Sweeping Reduction, in order to clear them out of the road.

Ghosts in Jall.

In various parts of China there is a belief that the souls of very atrocious criminals who have either been executed or died in prison are sent back from Hades by Yenlo, the judge there, to undergo a further term of imprisonment, one death not being enough to expiate their orimes. When the second term of imprisonment is judged to have expired the district magistrate beseches the tutelary deity of the city to accompany him to the prison in order to acquaint the ghost of his release. The order is supposed to reach the imprisoned by burning it, a ceremony which is solemnly carried out in the jail. On Aug. 19 last the district magistrate of the city of Soochow had placards posted up inviting subscriptions of imitation money for the ghosts then in the city jail. This was all duly burned and thus converted into cur Ghosts in Jail.

Ly PERGUS W. HUME. At 8 o'clock on that argue the soft rotten and soft voiced detective presented himself at Calton's office, and found the lawyer impatiently waiting for him. Klish closed the door softly, and then taking a seat opposite to Calton waited for him to speak. The lawyer, however, first handed him a cigar, and then producing a bottle of whisky and two glasses from some mysterious rocess he filled one and pushed it toward the detective. Klish accepted these little attentions with the utmost gravity, yet they were not without their effect on him, as the keen eyed lawyer saw.

ir effect on him, as the keen eyed lawyer falton was a great believer in diplomacy, I he practiced what he preached, and wing that Kilsip had that feline nature ich likes to be stroked and made much of, paid him these little attentions, which he ow would make the detective willing to do srything in his power to help him. Calton o knew the dislike that Kilsip entertained Gorby, and so, by dexterous management, he calculated upon twisting him, wer as he was, round his finger, and as sequent events showed, he had not recked wrongly. Having thus got into a symbletic frame of mind and in a humor bend his best energies to the work he anted him to do, Calton started the convertion.

"But how?"
"God bless my soul, Klisip! How stupid you are," cried Calton. "Can't you under-stand—that paper came from one of the back-slums—therea ore it must have been stolen."
A sudden laght flashed into Klisip's eyes.
"Palbot Villa, Toorak," he cried quickly, restricting up the letter again and examining it with great attention, "where that burglary took place."

"Exactly," said Calton, smiling complacently, "Now do you understand what I want—you must take me to the crib in the back slums where the articles stolen from the pointing to the letter—"is part of the swag

"I understand," said Kilsip, with a gratified purr. "There were four men engaged in

CORRESPONDENCE.

The Mayoralty.

To the Editor of the Review. SIB,-I would like to ask you what merita Mr. Denne has for seeking to be placed in the Mayor's Chair. With all his services on the Council or School Board, I am sure he cannot show any one particular lin which he remedied any of the evils about which he is just now so blatant, nor even has he taken note of them. On or off these Boards he has never been On or off these Boards he has never been a benefactor, or shown a public spirit whatever. Whether he has a great or a small stake in the town I know not, but I do know that in its welfare and advancement he has been mute, and in an endeayour to promote the development of its splendid resources he has had no concern. I sincerely trust the electors will reflect on the and compare his action, or rather inaction, in this particular with the unceasing efforts of Mr. For the labour interest of the town I have the greatest possible respect and consider-

James Stevenson.

For the labour interest of the town I have the greatest possible respect and consideration, and I feel confident that, throwing out the half dozen noted cranks that all others treat with contempt, the rank and file will hesitate long before parting gith a Mayor who, it is confessed, is the most active and trusted man in the whole community, and in accepting in exchange a retired gentleman, whose record is sid, and who by mere clap-trap, button-holing, most undignified conduct and misstatements expects to become Chief Magistrate of Peterborough. A man with ambition for so high an office should have a little pride and by open and public statement alone seek the suffrage of the people. Let him cease this petty and mean kind of persuasion and like a man call a public meeting of the electors, invite his opponent openly and not in stealth and deceitfully as he has been doing, show better right, if he can, than our present Mayor, to represent the town. If he fails to respond to this request, I ask the electors to pay no regard to him, but to stand by the old ship, which in fair weather and foul, sunshine and shadow has borne us safely over, for no man, save the above cranks, will dispute that Mr. Stevenson, above and beyond all others, deserves well of the people. He has unequalied municipal experience, has never betrayed his trust, has vast interests in the town's weltare, and as our M. P. has secured and can again secure for us advantage no other man could hope to gain. The present is in-

ONTO, Dac. 31.—At 2.40 Saturday soon an Englishman samed Joseph sorth, employed as a laborer on the control of th Malisorth, employed as a laborer on the Don extension, near Doncaster, was hown to piecessby the explosion of dynamite. While thiswing out the explosive one of the boxes ignified. He saw what had happened and ran forward in an attempt to save it. He had scarcely got his hand on the box when it exploded, killing him instantly. He had a hole blown through his head, both his legs were broken and his arm was shattered. He was an unwarried man and recently came from Hamilton.

About 5 o'clock Saturday evening Alfred W. Seeger, aged 13, was playing with some other boys around a building which is feeing erected opposite his fathers residence on Bank-street, Prockton. Young Seager was on a ladder, up a considerable distance, when he lost his hold and fell to the ground, breaking his neck and dying in a few moments.

Another watchmaker and dealer in jewelry has folded his tent and silently stolen away. John Clark, who for three years past has kept a store at 452 Queenstreet west, went out of the city last Monday night to eat his Christmas dinner with his father, who is a retired farmer of means living at Silver Creek, near Georgetown. Clark has not since been heard of, and his disappearance is mourned with about $8000 worth of sorrew by a dozen or more wholesale jewelers. Clark came to the city four years ago when he was about 22 years of age and worked a year with A. Kleiser, King-street east. His father then gave him money to start in business for himself. He didn't do a rushing trade but was apparently living a careful quiet life and credit was extended him. He was a meek and modest youth in the city, but all "unbeknown" to his creditors a gay Lotharic when he left its restraining precincts. He frequently went to Georgetown where lived a dressmaker named Miss Aiken to whom he paid court with all the devotion represented by an unpaid livery bill of $35. This affair resulted in the girl's coming to the city a couple of weeks ago to have an operation performed on her, but it, was found to be too late, and she is now in the city walting until she may return home.

Ogilyte's Explorations-The Yukon River

Ogilvie's Explorations—The Yaken Rives and its Tributaries.

EDMONTON, N. W. T., Dec. 31.—William Ogilvie, who has been engaged by the Government since 1887 in exploring extreme Northwestern Canada, has arrived, as already announced, at Edgerton via Lac Labiche and Victoria. The route pursued by the party was from the Pacific Coast up Chilkat Inlet by steamer over the Taing Pass to Lake Lyndeman on the Lewis River, the main branchof the Yukon, down the river in canoes' to the international boundary line. It has always been supposed that the Lewis was the main stream of the Yukon, but the Hootilenque, which joins the Lewis from the east about 200 miles from the coast, is the main stream proper.

The party went into camp on the Yukon, near the international boundary, in the latter part of September. The greatest cold was in February, when the thermometer registered 575 below zero. Camp was struck on March 4, when they descended the Yukon 35 miles to the head of Porcupine River, another of the main branches of the Yukon. This pass is 3200 feet above sea level. The Porcupine joins the main river at old Fort Yukon in Alaska. The Porcupine was descended to its confluence with Bell's River, coming in from the east. This was ascended to a pass in the Rockies about $4 miles long, with nothing to prevent a first-cla.s railroad being built through it. From the east end of the pass a small mountain stream was followed to its junction with Peel River, flowing into the Mackenzie. On this stream coal of good quality and an abundant outcrop of asbestos were seen. The distance from the foot of the Rockies to where they entered the Peel was 17 miles in a straight line. The total distance traveled from the Xukon at the boundary to the Peel River, flowing into the Mackenzie. On this stream coal of good quality and an abundant outcrop of asbestos were seen. The distance from the foot of the Rockies to where they entered the Peel was 17 miles in a straight line. The total distance traveled from the Xukon at the Peel.

A Steamer Burst.

Newfort, R. I., Dec. 31.—The steamer Bristol of the (did Colony line was larger at her dock here Sunday morning and is a total loss. Some of the passengers still on board did not understand the meaning of the first alarm and were only aroused by the crackling of the flames near by. All succeeded in escaping, but some without a portion of their clothing and others by crawling over the railing near the bursing timber. There was a fire insurance of $300,000 on the Bristol which will probably cover the loss.

Anether Steamer Scorched.

New York, Dec. 31.—At 9 o'clock last night fire was discovered in the hold of the steamer City of Mexico at her dock at the foot of Dey-street. She arrived from Havana Safurday. At midnight the fire was under control. The main part of the cargo was tobacco. Half of it had been removed and the rest was a total loss. Tenafiremen were overcome by the tobacco fumes but none suffered permanent injury.

They had done a great deal of work at the Little Lake, and he wished to have more done. One goes and get $10,000 worth of goods and owes for half of them, and he is assessed for only $5,000. The other buys a farm and pays $5,000 and borrows $5,000, but he has to pay $5,000. The other buys a farm and pays $5,000 and borrows $5,000, but he has to pay state on the full value of the farm. That was wrong and was against the poor man, as it operated in the same way against a man who built a house. The debenture debt of the town was $185,000. Of that $77,000 was municipal loan fund debt. Mrs. Solomon heard her boy's cry and ran toward Lexington-avenue. Mr. Solomon was in his bare feet, and quickly caught her by the hair. He swung her around, put the pistol to her breast and fired. She fell to the pavement, and he-fired two more shots at her, one of which passed through her right hand. Being satisfied that his wife was dead he knelf beside her, placed the revolver to his forehead and sent a ball into his brain. He fell dead over his wife's body.

Policeman Egan heard the shots and ran to where the shooting had taken place. Some firemen from Insurance Patrol No. 4 had already taken the dead man off his wife and carried her into their house. She was unconscious, but speedily revived. She asked for her children and said she wanted to die. The death of her husband was kept from her. She said that the cause of the shooting was jealousy and that her husband had threatened on several occasions to kill her before. She was taken in an ambulance to the Presbyterian Hospital, and the house surgeon said that her wounds were mortal.

New York, Jan. 1.—Matters are rapidly assuraing a more acute stage in Samoa and may lead to an open conflict between the German colonists on the one band and those of the United States and of England on the other. Sanguinary engagements have taken place between the army of the rebel chief, who is openly supported by Germany, and the troops of the rightfully elected King, who is equally openly supported by the Americans and English. No quarter is shown on either side. The rebels are supplied with ammunition and provisions by the Germans, while the King's soldiers are cared for in the same manner by the English and Americans.

The Year in Europe.

Benlin, Jan. 1.—The year closes with militarism still rampant in Europe, Germany, Austria-Hungary and France having greatly increased their armaments. Two Hohenzollerns have been followed to the grave. Leo XIII has celebrated his golden jubilee and the Emperor of Austria the 40th anniversary of his coronation. While Mr. Gladstone has been struggling almost single-handed in behalf of Home Rule for Ireland, the Salisbury Government has held its ground and enacted two great legislative measures. In France Boulangism has become a formidable political force, menacing the existence of the Republic. Russia's oredit has improved in Paris, but its prestige in Southeastern Europe is steadily declining. Italy, drawn into a powerful slikance with Germany and Austria-Hungary, has steadily increased its military and naval armaments and assumed an attitude of provocation toward France. A spirit of unrest prevails in the Balkans.

A Maid Who Carries the Mails.

Oregon has a woman mail carrier. Her name is Miss Minnie Westman, and she carries Uncle Sam's mail from the head of navigation on Siuslaw river over the Coast Ranga mountains, following up the river to Hales postoffice station, within fifteen miles of Eugene City. Her route is twenty miles long, and is situated right in the heart of the mountains. She rides horseback and carries a trusty revolver. Miss Westman is a plump little brunette, and is just 20 years old. On one of her trips last year she found three good sized bears in the road. The horse, on empring them, became frightened, threw his rider to the ground, and, turning around, ran back the road as he came. Miss Westman started after the runaway, and, overtaking him, remounted and rode right through the savage cordon, and, strange to say, she was not attacked.—Portland Oregonian. A Maid Who Carries the Mails

Drunken Quali.

A man living near Davis & Cowell's lime kilns has been catching quali in a peculiar way. For three weeks he has been spreading grain in the road near his place, where quali abound. On the day the law was out he put wheat in the place as usual, but had previously soaked the wheat in whisky. Watching the place, he saw the quali come out, cat, get drunk, and in a short time lie down stupefied. He then went to them and gathered about 100 into a sack that he carried with him. A few that were not fully drunk were easily caught by his dog. He has practiced the same method since successfully.—Santa Crus Surf.

A City of the Past.

Somewhere in the thirties, remarks The Savannah (Ga.) News, St. Joseph, Pla., was a thriving city of several thousand people. There was also a railroad running from Iola, on the Apalachicola river to St. Joseph. Today there is not a vestige of the city remaining nor of the railroad. William Samuels, an old colored man, who lives near Bainbridge, Ga., said that many years ago he lived in St. Joseph, and traveled thence by the railroad from Iola; also stating that it was the first and the last time in his life he ever rode on the cars.

Three suspicious looking parties having boarded the train at Stanbridge this morning an officer in pursuit of the burglars telegraphed to Captain P. On arrival at Berville they aftempted to get of the train, but being prevented one of them drew a revolver and threatened the men in charge. There are no new developments in the St. James-atreet tragedy of Sunday last. Singer, the man who was shot by Benson, is still at the hospital and is improving rapidly.

Dr. Alexander Crevier has died at the age of 66 years. The notoriety which his name obtained in the case of the late Mrs. Ward in October, 1885, his arrest on the charge of criminal malpractice and his release are still fresh in the minds of all.

Lawis Horner, charged with embezzling $19,000 from his employers in Chicago, has voluntarily consented to go back, and left for Chicago last night, accompanied by Isaac Horton, a relative and member of the firm alleged to be defrauded.

Mr. Girouard recommended payment under protest, and a notarial protest has been rerved. Should the courts decide that the company need only pay 6 per cent. in future the extra 2 per cent. can be obtained back. Mr. Dwight returned to Torohoto last night.

Reception to Principal Grant.

Kingston, Jan. 3.—Owing to the fine weather an excursion was run down among the Thousand Islands yesterday. The trip was enjoyed thoroughly. It is not often that the weather permits of an excursion at this time of the year.

At a meeting of the students, graduates and professors of Queen's College, it was decided to give Principal Grant a reception on Friday of next week. There will be a torchlight procession through the streets, followed-by addresses and music.

Peter Beaupre, Patrick Kennely and Henry Burk have been elected Separate school trustees at Portsmouth.

The value of imports and exports, with collections, during the month of December, was: Imports, $73,806; exports, $63,224; collections, $11,226.50.

Am Accurate Translation of Mr. Gladstone's Letter in Eggard to the Pope-Lively Eviction Scenes in Donegal.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Mr. Gladstone's telegram dislaiming the accuracy of the translation of his letter suggesting that the position of the Pope be made the subject of international arbitration, has led to correspondence on the subject, which appears in The Tablet to-day. Mr. Cox, editor of The Tablet, says that the letter of Mr. Gladstone clearly refers to the present position of the Pope, and he places side by side Mr. Gladstone's letter in Italian and the translation in English, proving the accuracy of the translation which Mr. Gladstone's words in writing to the Marquis DeRosa are as follows:

"I consider the question of the Pope's position of such importance as to merit the international arbitration. I boast that I was the promoter of the international arbitration in connection with the Alabama question. By such a method it would be possible to unlock the difficulty relating to the Vatican.

The Pall Mall Gazette upholds the accuracy of the translation and asks Mr. Gladstone to explain what he means if he does not mean international arbitration on the Pope's position.

The Bradford Murder,

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Chief Coustable Withere of Bradford asserts that the evidence against Barrett, the milkman, as the murderer of the boy John Gill, is of the most serious character. He has decided to withhold the details of the evidence for the present, but states that Barrett laughs, sings and occasionally by a wild look in his eyes and in other ways indicates his insanity. Sufficient testimony was taken yesterday to warrant the interment of the boy and the inquest was adjourned until Jan. Il pending the investigation of clues disclosed by yesterday's proceedings.

Eviction Scenes in Donegal.

Donegal, Jan. 3.—The evictions on the Olphert estate in Donegal yesterday were attended with a series of exciting scenes. The house of Blacksmith O'Donnell was strongly barricaded. The bailiffs were repulsed, and then the police attempted to capture the place. Sergt. McCombe was disabled by being wounded with a pitchfork in the cheek and leg and struck on the head with a stone. Ringing cheers greeted each successful repulse. Finally the soldiers having been ordered to fire the besieged, on the advice of Father Stephens, surrendered. Ten persons were arrested. The defenders were cheered by a large crowd. Father MeFadden was among the spectators, and joined in the cheering.

The prisoners were arraigned before Squire McKillop at West Lorne, and committed to Elgin jail for trial. They were arraigned before Police Magistrate Leonard yesterday morning, and Watson pleaded guilty to firing the shots and was remanded till Saturday for sentence. London, Jan. 3.—Engineer Jennings of the Canadian Pacific Railway was in the city yesterday and inspected the work on the western extension. He declares that had he known that the season would be so open as it is he would have had 1000 men at work between here and Hyde Park. He will shortly increase thegangs considerably. The presence of Major Coombs in this city during the past few days has had the effect of rousing the local Salvationists, and big meetings have been the result. Last night a torchlight procession through the streets, headed by a brass band, was a feature of the precedings.

ENGLISH DAIRY METHODS.

A REMEDT MAY BE APPLIED.

First, young people may be taught by means of schools how to do dairy work. This question of dairy schools, and the training of dairy schools, and the training of dairy states well be left for fuller discussion is a later letter.

Second, parents should see to it that the more intricate rule-of-thumb process of days gone by, gives place to the simplest and basisst process known to the progressive workers of to-day, and one best adopted to the changed conditions under which we are living. Make the age which gives you a dairy suited to the new conditions which these other things have helped to bring about. This has been and can be done. I have in mind a mother who has provided herself with the best implements she can get, and has adopted the best process she can letter of. Having no daughters, the has made her youngest son a most efficient sheep. He is now able to churn.

the most of that great corrective of its dediciencies—the co-operative dairy. Let us see what our English friends have to say shout this question.

One speaker favored "small dairying" because it had been more profitable than frain growing. His "corn" return (grain rrowing) "did not pay his labor bill," Prof. Long expressed himself as doubtful about the establishment of creameries, swing to the low prices of dairy goods. He lavored the Normandy system of buying up butter and "blending" it in a packing ghouse. Others, however, favored co-operation. Said one speaker:
"It is next to impossible to manufacture a uniform sample of good butter in the farm flarires to compete with that indae in fackorles, the buildings and fittings are quite unsuitable. If factories were established on large estates for the use of tenants, or elsewhere on co-operative principles, either milk, cream, or butter could be collected or delivered there in bulk and treated and distributed in accordance with the tastes of modern consumers. Butter could be graded at the factory and consumers would know what they bought; indeed, a local industry might be re-established were the factory system extended."

Another speaker (Mr. Howman) also favored creameries, where the farmer would send his milk to be separated, leaving the cream to be dealt with, and taking back the skim to be used on the farm. He said:
"The great difficulty in competing in the butter market is caused by the butter that is made in farm houses being not only small in quantity, but variable in quality and color, and I am convinced that if we combined together and formed butter factories we should be in a 'much better position to compete with the foreigners who now cut us out in our own markets."

Professor Sheldon, who is so well known in this country, was not at the conference at May, but in 1886 he read a paper on this subject which took a dark view

THE CO-OPERATIVE PRINCIPLE

It is, and is likely to be, a large factor in the problem before us. The factory has not replaced the home dairy to the extent that men have expected, either in England or in Canada. Belleving this to be true, I am an advocate for the improvement of the home dairy. Prof. Sheldon's reasons for believing it will not improve yet not conclusive. Because things go in badly when no adequage attempt is made to improve them, "is net proof that they will not mend when the efa of improvement sets id. There was a time, in the history of Demmark, when there was more need than prospect of improvement. There came a time when there was less need than realization of improvement. We need only to show that the home dairy is a permanent factor in our problem here, to realize the pocessity of urging its improvement so far as improvement is possible.

EXTENSION OF THE PACTORY SYSTEM.

While believing in the largest possible improvement of the home dairy, I would urge the largest possible.

EXTENSION OF THE PACTORY SYSTEM.

While there may be difference of opinion as to what extent the factory system will supplant the older system, all are agreed that so far as the one has supplanted the other, or is likely to do so, so far has the industry been advantaged. While we must not fall into the error of looking to the factory system as a qure-all, we may safely regard it favorably as one of the most important and promising agencies of improvement at our hand.

The Island Farmer (P.E.I.) quotes in connection with the publication of. my letters the following extract from The Rural New Yorker, bearing upon this question: "Cooperation is a step towards a common in farming communities, and so harmful to the best interest of the farmer. It encourages a wholesome and good natured rivalry. It encourages strict and methodical business habits. It breaks down the petty jealousies and distrusts so common in farming communities, and so harmful to the best interest of his neighbors. If his neighbor is beating him, he will be sure to carry his investiga

Notes.

Save your poultry droppings and apply them to the strawberry plants in February.

A dog will cost something if properly fed, and too many dogs may be an expensive luxury. If not well fed they will stray off and become unserviceable as guards.

Never feed animals or poultry for thirty-six hours before killing, nor give water for twelve hours. By so doing it will be easier to dress them, and a saving of food will be the result if a large herd or flock is to be slaughtered.

The tendency of the times, says Mr. Hay the result if a large nerd or nock is to be slaughtered.

The tendency of the times, says Mr. Hay in his article on stock growing, is to specialties in everything, and stock growing must keep in line or be left. If the mass of farmers would put studied efforts into their business there would be less crub stock. Of the special breeds of nimals for special purposes we have the fraft-horse breeds that have given such a timulus to American horse breeding.

It has been asserted that a given amount of food and attention will produce as many pounds of chicken flesh as it will of hog lesh. If so, why cannot farmers make poultry raising profitable and eat nutritious hicken meat instead of so much bacon? A pound of fowl flesh will produce more physical strength and muscular power than

In some cases a large barnyard might well be divided into two or more smaller ones for different classes of live stock. pens at one time and another at another, it may be possible to get along with a single yard, yet the best plan, when much stock is keptl, is to have several yards.

Some years ago E. S. Carman got together all manner of geraniums, every kind he could, both at home and abroad, and devoted two years to cross-fertilizing and raising new varieties from them. At one time he had 2500 of his seedlings growing in his experiment grounds. And he frankly admits that not one of them was superior to sorts already at that time in cultivation. In some parts of the wine district of France the church bells are tolled when there is likely to be a frost severe enough to hurt the vines. The inhabitants at, once hurry out of their-houses and place quantities of tar between the rows of vines. Then the signal is given to light the tar, and in a few minutes a dense cloud of smoke arises which completely protects the vines from the first.

The Plate Glass trade has become an import, tant feature in Canada. No business hous, would now dream of having the old sheet glass windows. Not only the design of the buildin, is vastly improved, but the goods displayed in the windows are more inviting when plate glass is used. McCausland & Son, Toronto, supply by far the largest quantity in Canada.

ever touching on the subject at all, will you permit me as a layman of an opposite creed, briefly to state why we Protestants say and think that the Church of Rome does not, will not and could not sanction the universal use of the Bible. The answeris simply that if she did. she must fail. I will go no further than to the the "Law" as delivered from Mount and the same Law as promulgated and taught by the Church of Rome. The first in its awfly,
the Church of Rome. The first in its awfly,
the church of Rome. The first in its awfly, the church of Rome. The first in the exception of the "Fourth and "Fifth" commences with the imperative "Thou shait," or "Thou shalt not." Each contains a separate, distinct command. The commands are ten in number and teach us our duty towards God and man. Look on the other hand at the "law" as taught by the Church of Rome. The besetting and most helnous sin of the time, idolarry, is not even touched upon, and not daring to interfere with the number which is too universally known by the whole Christian world, it in its teachings suppresses the second commandment and divides the tent hintotwo to make up the ten.

This is in a very small part why we Proteerants say and believe the Church of Rome does not and will not encourage the Bible.

One might go on and show how other

Protestants say and sense the Bible.

Rome does not and will not encourage the Bible.

One might go on and show how other errors crept into the then Catholic or Universal Church, till at last certain men protested against these errors and fell back on the primitive teachings of our Saylour and his apostlee; but I do not think it becomes a layman to enter on a theological controversy, and had not Mr. Fitzgerald's very arrogant effusion called it forth. I should have treated—him with the silent contempt that probably every Protestant minister will.

Mr. Fitzgerald, however, does admit that the Old Testament came from the Jews, and we all know how jealously and zealously they have guarded it, particularly the Pentateuch. We Protestants are perfectly willing to leave the correctness or incorrectness of our version of the Bible to those in whose hands the Almighty placed it for safe keeping. Will the Church of Rome do so? No, she claims she "cannot er," No can she to those of her pursuasion as long as she withholds the free use of the Bible. I perfectly agree with Mr. Fitzgerald that any Separate School pupil of however tender years would have made an abler defence for his Church and his Bishop than he did.

Township Nominations.—The liveliest township meeting ever heid in Otonabee was held in the Town Hall, Keene, on Monday last. The chief point is a new road which some want pushed through a man's farm and against his will, while others object both to the expense, which would be considerable, and to cutting up a man's farm. The meeting lasted until nearly 5 o'clock and all got very warm over it. The candidates had to piedge themselves one way or the other. The following counciliors are for the road.—Richard Hope, Jno. Grady, John Lyncaster. Candidates against the road.—Richard Hope, Jno. Grady, John Lyncaster. As to the Deputy Reeve Mr. Anderson is in fayor o the road off it does not cost too murh, and Mr. Jno. Miller Jr., is opposed to the road out and out. The contest is exciting and the votes will be well looked after.

RINK.—The rink is now open unless the weather gots asiler. The curling match President vs. Vice-President was curled on New Year's day, when after anacciting and close game the Vices, were victorious by one or two shots.

Mr. Wilkie, Presbyterian student at Clydesdale, assisted in entertaining the audience by reciting a Scotchman's letter describing Toronto, The music, furnished by Mr. Reynoids, Misses. Eliminst, Nesbitt and Hales and Mr. Hales, was appropriate and excellentily rendered. Mr. J. Reynoid's solo and the ctoral authem by Miss Hales, Miss Nesbitt and Mr. Hales are especially noticeable. Miss Steine recited "Nothing or Something" feelingly and well, and Miss Trickey told us of a housekeeper's trials, the effects of which were somewhat counteracted when we remembered "What Biddy said in the police court" as recited by Miss Young. Misses Mclimoyle and Gallon were candidates in a cake electioneering struggle. Miss Gallon being elected to do the carving. The proceeds netted $30, an amount very gratifying indeed when the state of the roads and weather is considered.

Work still continues steadily on the work still continues readily on the canal, the various contractors have promptly paid off up to date, and everybody seems cheerful and unaffected. once has been advanced from 34 to 60 per cent.

One of the most curious features of the situation is the manifest alarm that is felt abroad-regarding the resultant condition of affairs on the Isthmus. There does not appear to be any disposition on the part of the populace to excitement, but even were these fears to be realized, the country is amply able to repress with a strong hand any riotous tendencies that may be manifested.

The Bride Chosen for China's Emperor.

Washingros, Jan. 3.—The Department of State has been informed by the Minister of the United States at Pekin of the following edict of the Empress Dowager, published in The Pekin Gazette of Friday, Nov. 0 1888.

lished in The Pekin Gazette of Friday, Nov. 9, 1888:

"The Emperor having recently succeeds de to his exalted lisheritance, and increasing day by day in maturity, it is becoming that he should select a virtuous consort to assist in the administration of the palace, to control the Emperor's official household and to encourage the Emperor himself in upright conduct. Let therefore, 'Yeh-ho-na-la, a daughter of Deputy Lieutenant-General Knei Hsiang, whom we have selected for her dignified and virtuous character, become the Emperor's consort."

A further edict of the same date reads: "Let Ta-ta-la, age 15, years, a daughter of Chang Hsii, formerly a vice-president of a board, become the sepondary consort of the first rank; and let Ta-ta-la, age 13, also daughter of Chang Hsii, formerly vice-president of a board, become imperial concubing of the second rank, Respect that."

The Emperior has been reigning about fourteen years and is now 18 years of age.

ALPANY, N. Y., Jan. 3.—The report of the Superintendent of Public Works shows a decrease in canal traffic for 1885 of 612,857 tons as compared with last year. Many reasons are assigned for the diminished tonnage of the past season, chief of which are these: Prior to the opening of the canals the boatmen insisted upon higher rates than shippers were willing to pay. While the contest was being waged railroad managers stepped in and secured the carrying of the grain. The short crops, causing a decreased exort trade, also worked against canal tonnage. Then again the Hutchison wheat corner rotarded shipment. The number of new boats registered for the year was 85. The Superintendent renews his suggestions of last year that the bottom of the canal demands attention. The gradual accretion of silt year by year has caused a gradual diminution in the depth of water, which of sparse interfers with navigation and should be remedied.

But these $600 flats are cheapness itself when compared with in the neighborhood of Fifth and Madison avenues. Those who pay from $1,200 to $2,000 are most numerous, and for either of these amounts apertments can be secured that are luxurious for any person.

But the flat for family use must go. Real estate men say that the large and more fashionable flats yield but 2 per cent. on capital invested in them; and real estate speculators are in the habit of getting more than this out of investments. The smaller flats, furnished and unfurnished, where the rent is moderate, still pay as an investment. The big ones do not, and the question what is to be done with them is agitating their owners more than a little.—New York Mail and Express.

Long Haskell, third wife of Res.

Mrs. Haskell has not been from the Mrs. Haskell for some time. With his other wives the old minister says he lived a life of happiness, but he could not say this of the third wife. She was very devoted to Mr. James C. Wilkinson, a real estate agent who left his own wife to live with the life with the life with wife. One day last winter Mr. who left his own wise to live with the clergyman's wife. One day last winter Mr. Wilkinson and Mrs. Haskell went to New York, where, on Feb. 7, they were married in the City Court.

Previous to this Mrs. Haskell had seught divorce from her husband, and the divorce not having been allowed her marriage to Wilkinson constitutes a clear case of higamy, wilkinson constitutes a clear case of bigamy, for which her husband is bound she shall be misde to suffer. To make things even worse, Wilkinson's wife has attached Mrs. Haskell's property in the sum of $10,000 in a unit brought against Mrs. Haskell for alienating Mrs. Wilkinson's husband's affections.

silenating Mrs. Wilkinson's husband's anections.

Wilkinson, anticipating yesterday's startling climax, left town on Toesday, Mrs. Haskell supplying him with the necessary funds. She probably intended to join him. All the parties concerned are prominent in accial circles, and Mrs. Haskell, at least, is well off. They are all also on the shady side of 50 years of age. For Mrs. Wilkinson there is much sympathy, as her husband treated her shamefully. One of bis freaks was to distribute haudbills at church-time-Sundays defaming his wife's character.

Assistant Superintendent of Police Cosack and Detective Quinn of Buffalo presented extradition documents to the police magistrate. The two former were gutted and the latter damaged $200. Loss on the pulp mill about $2000 and on the old mill about $1500. Several firemen were hurt by falling into pits about the mill.

In the third place, I am opposed to the large expenditure in connection with the Collegiste Institute, of which my opponent is the loremost champlon. I am not in layor of educating rich men's sons at the expense of the poor, but, on the other hand believe that the m strive at expenditure of money is justifiable in maintaining and adding to the efficiency of our public schools. I am in favor of having the public schools brought to so high a standard that when a poor man's son is compelled to leave them, as he has to do at the age of 14 or 15, he may be thoroughly equipped with, a practical education that will fit him for any business career he may est fit to enter upon. Those why wish to go higher in the educational scale, have access to a provincial university, maintained at the public expense.

A proceeding which is likely to become a precedent was taken by the Crown and sarctioned by Judga Derncyer, presiding in the Court of Special Sessions to-day, in the case against Ekkee J. Bartee, who is accused of unnatural conduct towards his 13-year-old daughter. The atter when called as a witness stated that she did not know her catechism nor what an oath was. The Inhabitants of Glen Falls Think They Will Strike it Rich.

GLEN FALLS, Jan. 4.—Michael O'Reilly, who has spont several years in the mining regions of the West, visited the new mine here a few days ago. He declares that nowhere east of Colorado is there such an immense quantity of sliver-bearing rock. Even in the stone walls there are traces of sliver, he says, and all the region round about is rich in mineral deposits. Merritt Ames, an experienced mineralogist, has made two chemical essays. His first essay was from a piece of feldspar, containing carbonate of copper, from which he obtained a bead of sliver. This Mr. Ames says he has no doubt carries gold, but two small a bead for a test. The other away was from magnesian lime rock, which carries the sulphids of sliver. From this he also obtained a bead of sliver. Mr. Ames is now treating a large quantity of the rock, and when his assay is correpted he will be able to report as to gold. An assay is also being made in New York.

St. Catharines, Jan. 3.—The Lincoln pulp mill, a frame structure, in which was made the coarser grades of paper in connection with the Lincoln paper mills of Merritten, was burned to the ground at 3.30 this morning. The flames spread with such rapidity that the workmen barely escaped with their lives. John Royle, a casual visitor, dropped into the mill at midnight and fell asleep on a finishing table. His charred and burned remains were found in the ruins this morning. The mill, which is a total less, was valued with its contents at about $30,000. The insurance amounts to about $9,500.

The amount of legislation will probable be light. So far only abput seventy notices of private bills have been given, including eight applications for divorce, and it is not likely that this number will be greatly increased.

His Croce and the Rector—A Reporter Requested to Call Again—Latest Cable Advices.

LCNDON, Jan. 3.—A month or so ago there was a squabble between the Duke and Duchess of Maribloro, caused by a visit from Lady Colin Campbell, but it was no more serious than a lover's quarrel. The Duchess thought the Duke was a trifle too attentive to his fair visitor, and Her Grace became jealous and sulked in orthodox lashion. The behaviour of the Duke and Lady Colin was quite proper and above-tcard. Lady Fahnie Majoribanks, the Duke's married sister, and the only one of the family whom he respects or fears, went down to Blenheim, and there was no difficulty in effecting a reconciliation. The Duchess simultaneously recovered her usual health. She does not look very robust now, but the drives about Woodstock buying things and was at a grand ball last week. The townsperple like her, and they say the Duke has become quite an attentive husband.

Blenheim Palace is just now full at the noble members and connections of the great Marlboro family. There is lots of fur going on—shooting parties every day and frequent balls and other gayeties. It must not be supposed that the Duke is at all unpopular in the district. The tradespeople don't worry about his morals, for he has spent very large sums of money among them in modernizing Blenheim. It is estimated that each tradesman has made £500 out of the Duke within the past twelve months.

It is still war to the knife botween the rector of Woodstock and the Duke. The rector, from his drawing-room window, has a fine view of Blenheim. Park, the entrance to which is only a few feet away. The Duke swears that the reverend gentleman shall not enjoy the prospect longer than can be helped, and His Grace has just arranged to make a plantation of tall fir trees right up against the parson's window. When these have grown to a fair size, not only will the rector's view be stopped, but his drawing-room will have to be lighted artificially at all times of the day.

The Alystery of a Hansom Cab

Ly PERGUS W. HUME. Ly FERGUS W. HUME.

At max, the day of the long expected trial came, and as Calton sat in his office looking over his brief, a clerk entered and told him Mr. Frettlby and his daughter wished to see him. When they came in the barrister saw the millionaire looked haggard and ill, and there was a look of worry on his face.

"There is my daughter, Calton," he said, after hurried greetings had been exchanged. "She wants to be present in court during Fitzgerald's trial, and nothing I can say will dissuade her."

Calton turned, and looked at the girl in some surprise.

some surprise.

"Yes!" she answered, meeting his look steadily, though her face was very pale; "I'must be there. I shall go mad with anxiety unless I know how the trial goes on."

"But think of the disagreeable amount of attention you will attract," urgsd the attention you will acteate, urger the lawyer.

"No one will recognize me," she 'said calmly; 'Il am very plainly dressed, and I will wear this veil;" and, drawing one from her pocket, she went over to a small looking glass which was banging on the wall and tied t on her face.

Calton looked in a perplexed manner at Mr.

"I'm araid you must consent," he said.
"Very well," replied the other, almost ternly, while a look of annoyance passed yer his face. "I will leave her in your man whom I have had at my dinner table in the prisoner's dock, much as I sympathize with him. Good day," and with a curt nod he took his leave.

When the door closed on her father, Madge placed her hand on Calton's arm.

"Any hope" she whispered, looking at him through the black veil.

"The merest chance," answered Calton, putting his brief into his bag. "We have done everything in our power to discover this girl, but without effect. If she does not come at the eleventh hour I'm afraid Brian Fitzgerald is a doomed man."

Madge fell on her knees with a stifled cry.

"Oh, God of mercy," she cried, raising her hands as if in prayer, "save him. Save my darling, and let him not die for the crime of another. God"—

The hour is darkest before the dawn, you know."

Madge dried her tears and followed the lawyer to the cab, which was waiting for them at the door. They drove quickly up to the court, and Calton put her in a quiet place, where she could see the dock and yet be unobserved by the people in the body of the court. Just as he was leaving her she touched his arm.

"Tell him," she whispered, in a trembling voice, "tell my darling I am here."

Calton nodded and hurried away to put on his wig and gown, while Madge looked hurriedly round the court from her point of vantage. It was crowded with fashionable Melbourne of both sexes, and they were all talking together in subdued whispers. The racter of the prisoner, his good ngagement to Madge Frettlby, oks and engagement to Madge Frettlby, gether with the extraordinary circum-ances of the case, had raised public curios-y to the highest pitch, and, consequently, were young when the prisoner was brought in there was a great flutter among the ladies, and some of them even had the bad tasts to produce opera glasses. Brian noticed this, and ha flashed up to the roots of his fair hair, for he felt his degradation acutely. He was an intensely proud man, and to be placed in the criminal dock, with a lot of frivolous people, who had called themselves his friends, looking at him as though be were a new actor or a wild animal, was galling in the extreme. He was dressed in black, and looked pale and wan, but all the ladies declared that he was as good looking as ever, and they were sure

He gave a rapid sketch of the crime, which was merely a repetition of what had been published in the newspapers, and then proceeded to enumerate the witnesses who could prove the prisoner guilty. He would call the landlady of the deceased to show that fill blood existed between the prisoner and the narrifered man, and that the accused had called on the deceased a week prior to the committal of the crime and threatened his life. (There was great excitement at this, and several ladies decided, on the spur of the monent, that the horrid man, was cuilty, but the majority of the female-spectators still refused to believe in the guilt of such a good looking young guilty but the majority of the female spectators still refused to believe in the guilt of such a good looking young fellow.) He would call a witness who could prove that Whyte was drunk on the night of the murder, and went along Russell street, in the direction of Collins street; the cabman Royston could swear to the fact that the prisoner had hailed the cab, and after going away for a short time returned and entered the cab with the deceased. He would also prove that the prisoner left the cab at the grammar school in the St. Kilda road, and on the arrival of the cab at the junction he discovered the deceased had been murdered. The cabman Rankin would prove that he drove the prisoner from the St. Kilda road to Powlett street in East Melbourne, where he got out, and he would call the prisoner's landlady to prove that the prisoner resided in Powlett street, and that on the night of the murder he had not reached home till shortly after 2 o'clock. He would also call the detective who had charge of the case, to prove the finding of a glove belonging to the deceased in the pocket of the coat which the prisoner wore on the night of the murder; and the doctor who had examined the bedy of the and the committee of the Brotherhood of Lecomotive Engineers. No conclusion was reached.

Chairman Cavener says the ultimatum of the Brotherhood has been laid before Prerident Perkins of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy road, who is in Boston, and that his declaion was expected by telegraph this morning. As it did not come the Conference took a recess.

This evening the strike was admitted by both parties to the controversy to be practically settled. The conference to-day between the officers of the road and the committee of nine -resulted in an amicable agreement on nearly all the points at issue, and it is confidently will be reached to-morrow morning. The Times to-morrow will say: "It is understood that by the terms of the agreement the old Q engineers will be placed again upon a square footing instead of being blacklisted by nearly all the railroad in the country. The Burlington itself; will set the example by giving the strikers employment in preference to others whenever vacancies occur and by burying completely out of sight the hatchet which was dug up 10 months ago."

HEALTH OF THE TOWN. ANNUAL REPORT OF THE MEDICAL HEALTH OFFICER.

Clarke Reviews the Work of the Year—A Decreasing Death Rate—A Word About Sewers—Impure Well Water.

The following is the annual report of Dr. Clarke, Medical Health officer, to the Board of Health:—
To the Chairman and Members of the

Peterborough Board of Health:

GENTLEMEN,—The present year has been the least eventful of all the years since the passing of the Public Heaith Act. No outside epidemic has visited the town: there has been a much less proportion of typhoid fever, diphtheria, and scarlet fever, not so large a number of complaints as in previous years, and a better compliance with the statute than herefolore. No better evidence of this could be given than the statute than herefolore. No better evidence of this could be given than the statute than herefolore. No better evidence of this could be given than the statute than herefolore. No better evidence of this could be given than the statute than herefolore. No better evidence of 2 per thousand in the death-rate of a town the size of Peterborough means a saving in ten years of nearly 200 lives. High sanitary authorities have given 17 per thousand as a standard to be aimed at. Peterborough has gone beyond this and may therefore be pronounced one of the healthlest towns in the world. No better recommendation to manufacturers looking for a place to locate, or private parties looking for a town to settle in could be given than to say that the death-rate here is only 15 per thousand.

Slaughter Housea.—Regular inspections have been made and notices served when necessary. More rain having failen this summer than last, it was found that greater care was needed in cleaning up. The butchers now rendered their tailow every day or two instead of keeping it for two or three weeks. This lessens the disagreeable adour of that process. I may here correct a popular error as to the unhealthy nature of these fumes. They are certainly highly unpleasant but not dangerous from a sanitary point of view.

Remoul of Garbage and Excreta.—This has been made and more than a waggon load in the rear of certain stores on George-st. where the constant presence of a Sanitary inspector would hardly keep things right. To the Electors of the Town of Peterborough

Gentlemen,—At the request of a large number of the electors. I have a ment of the beam as a candidate for the Mayor's chart for 1889. In accepting this candidature, I have been unflowed by various reasons.

In the first place, Mr. Stevenson on the declared last year that the would not facin be a candidate for the position. He not only stated to publicly, but has repeatedly assured me personally that he would on no consideration consent to become a condidate for another term, and that, as another member of the cancil was anxious for the position, he (Mr. Stevenson) preferred that Labould be the candidate.

In the second place, I do not think that it is in the interests of the town that any one man, no matter how good a man he may be, shoul occupy the positions of Mayor of the Town, Chairman of the School B ard, Chairman of the Gas Company—all directly affecting the interests of the Town Trust Commission, President of the Gas Company—all directly affecting the interests of the ratepayers.

These different concerns involve a large expenditure of the people's money, and it is desirable, and it is obviously proper, that the necessarily conflecting personally concerned in getting the best end of a bargain at the general which the thistle was adopted as its emblem by the Scottish nation, a correspondent of London Notés and Queries relates the following tradition: Queen Scotia had led her troops in a well fought field, and, when the day was won, retired to the rear for rest from her toils. She threw herself upon the ground, where, as ill luck would have it, an envious thistle had, elected to grow at the very spot selected for her repose. Whether the fair Amazon fought 'in the national costume I know not, but the spines of the offending herb were sufficiently powerful to penetrate the skin in a very painful manner. A proverbial philosopher (not Mr. Tupper, I think) has declared that "he that sitteth on nettles riseth up quickly," and the same remark holds good of thisties. Queen Scotia sprang up and tore the thistle up by the roots. She

The Mystery of a Hansom Cab

Ly FERGUS W. HUME.

As had now fully shown the chain of evidence which he proposed to prove, he would call the first witness, Malcolm Royston.

Royston, on being sworn, gave the same evidence as he had given at the inquest, from the time that the cab was halled up to his arrival at the St. Kilda police station with the dead body of Whyte. In the cross examination, Calton saked him if he was prepared to swear that the man who halled the cab, and the man who got in with the decased, were one and the same person.

Witness—I am.

Calton—You are quite certain?

Witness—Yes; quite certain?

Witness—Yes; quite certain.

Calton—Do you then recognize the prisoner as the man who halled the cab?

Witness (hesitatingly)—I cannot swear to that. The gentleman who halled the cab had his hat pulled down over his eyes, so that I could not see his face; but the height and general appearance of the prisoner are the same. Calton—Then it is only because the man who got into the cab was dressed like the prisoner on that night that you thought they were both the same?

Witness—Is never struck me for a minute that they were not the same; besides, he spoke as if he had been there before. I said—'Oh, you've come back,'' and he said—'Yes; I'm going to take him home," and got into my cab. Ly FERGUS W. HUME.

Calton—So you might; you might have Witness—I might have been.

Calton—So you were in such a condition that you did not observe very closely the n who halled you? Witness—No, I didn't; there was no rea-why I should; I didn't know a murder man the whole time.

This closed Royston's evidence, and Calton sat down very dissatisfied at not being able to elicit anything more definite from him. One thing appeared clear, that some one must have dressed himself to resemble Brian, and spoke in a low voice because he was afraid of betraying himself.

Clement Rankin, the next witness, deposed Crement Rankin, the next witness, deposed to having picked up the prisoner on the St. Kilda road, between 1 and 2 on Friday morning, and driven him to Powlett street, East Melbourne. In the cross-examination Calton elicited one point in the prisoner's favor.

his face?

Witness—No, his hat was pulled down over his eyes, and I could only see the ends of his mustache and his chin, but he carried himself the same as the prisoner, and his mustache is the same light color.

Calton—That will do.

The counsel for the defense was pleased with this bit of evidence, as Fitzgerald detested rings and never were any; so he made a note of the matter on his brief.

Mrs. Hableton, the landlady of the deceased, was then called, and deposed that Ollver Whyte had lived with her for nearly two months. He seemed a quiet enough young man, but often came home drunk. The only friend she knew he had was a Mr. Moreland, who was often with him. On the young man, but often came home drunk. The only friend she know he had was a Mr. Moreland, who was often with him. On the 14th of July, the prisoner called to see Mr. Whyte, and they had a quarrel. She heard Whyte say, "She is mine, and you can't do anything with her," and the prisoner answered, "I can kill you, and if you marry her I will do so in the open street." She had no idea at the time of the name of the lady they were talking about.

There was a great sensation in the court at these words, and half the people present looked upon such evidence as being sufficient in itself to prove the guilt of the prisoner.

In cross-examination Calton was unable to shake the evidence of the witness, as she merely reiterated the same statements over and over again.

The next witness was Mrs. Sampson, who crackled into the witness box, dissolved in tears, and gave her answers in a piercingly shrill tone of anguish. She stated that the prisoner was in the habit of coming home early, but on the night of the murder had come in shortly before 2 o-clock.

Crown Prosecutor (referring to his brief)—You mean after 2.

MODES OF CAPITAL PUNISHMENT EMPLOYED IN OLDEN TIMES.

According to tradition, however, the Assyrians were the inventors of this particularly unpleasant form of being kept in suspense, and it is a woman, Semiramis, who has the doubtful honor of being the first temploy it. The ordinary method of inflicting it was by nailing the victim to a cross, where he was left until dead. Occasionally however, a cheerful innovation was introduced by setting the cross on fire before the victim's death, or by letting wild beasts de your him in his defenseless position I the torch and the jaws of the wild be fangs were really merciful reliefs, for cas are on record in which the victim linger in agony for eighteen and twenty day Death by crucifixion was inflicted on wome as well as on men, and such unspeakal atrocities were practiced under the guise just punishment that the cross was abolish by Constantine the Great about A. just punishment that the cross was aboussed by Constantine the Great about A. D. 315.

DIFFERENT ROMAN METHODS.

Though the Romans were greatly given to crucifying, it can scarcely be said that they had any one national form of capital punishment. They acted largely after the mikado's plan of letting the punishment fit the crime. Christians were burned, torn to piecgs by beasts, drowned in quagmires and rivers and vivisceted. Political offenders, on the other hand, were thrown from the Tarpeian rock. This was a lofty and precipitous promontory on one side of the Capitoline bill. Runaway slaves when recaptured were turned adrift into the deserts or woods overrun by wild animals, or else bound to a rock and left to starve. It was customary for a while in Rome to permit capital offenders to select the manner by which they would meet death and be allowed to inflict the penalty upon themselves. This custom also obtained in Greece, and when Scorates was condenued to death for spreading disbelief in the na-hemlock.

One of the most cruel and unusual of punishments was that which the Romans in the latter days of the republic meted out to those who murdered either of their parents. Luke Owen Pike, M. A., author of the "History of Crime in England," in referring to this punishment, says:

"Not in the amphitheatre, not at the stake, not on the cross was the narricalle to perish.

not on the cross was the parricide to perish. A sack was to be his winding sheet; in that he was to be sewn up alive and venomons ser-pents with him. He was to be thrown into the sea, if the sea was near at hand, and if not, into a river, so that the heavens might be hidden from him while still alive, and the

be hidden from him while still alive, and the earth deny him a grave when dead."

Often, however, in addition to the vipers, there were a dog, a monkey and a rooster sewed up in the sack with the victim, who was naked. The sack was usually of leather. The oriental nations have always been remarkable for the ingenious cruelty of their death punishments, although it is doubtful whether they have been more cruel than the self styled highly civilized nations of the west. Death has come from slow strangulation from a rope, as was in vogue in China. west. Death has come from slow strangulation from a rope, as was in vogue in Chim for instance, and at the same time from the use of boiling oil, which was poured on the joints after they were dislocated; by mechanical means, as in France and Germany, from

Port-Au-Prince, Dec. 23.—The Haytian gunboat Grand River left last night late, flying the French flag, for Mole St. Nicholas, now in the hands of the Hypolites, to cable to Martinique for the French fleet to protect Port-au-Prince. It is understood that Legitime's general commanding his main army was seriously defeated at Hinche, ten miles from the San Domingo frontier, and arrived last night with a report of the defeat. He is now at the French legation under the protection of the French is feared when they shall have learned of the defeat and it is believed that the French minister immediately despatched a request for the French menoit-war.

WHILE SWORDS IN THEIR GRASP PRESAGE WAR.

once. Lord Salisbury naturally declined to give any pledges beyond the usual assurance that he and his colleagues were aware of the importance of the subject, and would give it their best attention. But under the influence of Lord Charles Beresford and others the admiralty and other departments are believed to have resolved at last on some very considerable scheme, to be laid before parliament next session.

All talk on the Continent meantime is of peace. The King of Italy went so far as to tell the Deputies who presented him with a loyal address that he thought peace during the present year certain. Other sovereigns confine themselves to hopes. They have peace on their lips, but swords in their hands, and nobody dreams of reducing armaments. Events in Servia, where revolution seems possible enough, make indirectly for peace. Had the threat-ened insurrectien broken out, Austria would have put it down, Russia would have put it down, Russia would have deemed this sufficient pretext for open interference, and so the long smouldering flame of war might have broken out in those ever restless regions. But King Milan, who though anything but a pleasing figure is not wanting in political ability, has completely beateh his opponents, who had an enormous majority in the Constitution as amended by him and absolute despotism. They gave way, and like true Orientals. Kissed.

Gladstone's Equab Mystery.

Loynoy, Jan. 6. Mr. Gladstone's ItaloPapal arbitration mystery is as much a mystery as ever. Nobody yet professes to understand the true significance of his telegram from Naples. His chief organ in the London press has a long editorial on the relations between Italy and Rome which is in its own ways masterpiece. Its political strategy is that of the ostrich. Mr. Gladstone's name is not mentioned, nor is the fact that he has written a letter or suggested any kind of arbitration allowed to appear. This judicious suppression permits The Dalily News to condemn sternly all proposals to disturb Italy in her possession of her National Capital.

An Affront of Which All Europe is talking peror.

Proceeding to narrate the military events between Ang. 13 and 17, 1870, it says it is only surprising that the plain contradiction between Marshal Bazaine's statement to Major von Deines and the known bistoric facts should not have been per wived by Major von Deines and the known bistoric facts should not have been per wived by Major von Deines himself, who seems to have been willing to forge a weapon with which to strike at the memory of Emperor Frederick.

The Freisinnige Zeitung says: "The German people await what Count Herbert has to say officially on the matter. As things stand German diplomacy has not covered itself with glory on the question."

The National Zeitung holds that Morier in his appeal to Count. Herbert was over confident. The paper says: "It was a really astonishing demand to ask the Chief of the Foreign Office to contradict the report of a trusted officer of the German Government. It must be left to the future to show whether Bazaine will come out of the affair as a slanderer or as a coward."

These comments suggest a similar question as to whether Prince Bismarck and Count Herbert will come out of the affair as a slanderer or as a coward. These comments of the English Embassy here and the general feeling in official circles, will compel Count Herbert to apologize. In the meantime the semi-official press shows no signs of abating the attacks on Morier, rather trying to support the assault.

only one opinion in England.

London Times.

London, Jan. 6.—There is but one opinion in England about the Morier incident. Nobody believes the German accusation. Not even in the German version of Bazaine's alleged statement is there a shred of evidence against Sir Robert Morier. Major von Deines does not pretend that Bazaine sald that Sir Robert sent him news of the movements of the German armies. Assuming that story true, it would only prove that Bazaine received news from London which the sender "described as coming from Sir Robert Morier. That Sir Robert knew or supposed it would reach Bazaine is not even alleged. The matter arouses great interest here. Sir Roberts is not only the British Ambasador at Sir Petersburg, but one of the ablest men in the diplomatic service. No character stands higher. This German calumny on him discredits the authors of it and leaves Sir Robert untouched. The only thing his friends regret is the tone of anger in his letters. It is natural, but not diplomatic. Nor is Count Herbert Bismarck's reply thought a good model. Passion, however, runs high. The Germans concerned in this campaign would never have attacked Sir Robert except to strike a blew at the land.

too impetuous crowding upon Their Majesties is incompatible with that feeling of respect which ought to be shown to them and the absence of which deprives the demonstration of the character of a genuine ovation. With regard to the Emperor's carriage, it is argued that it is better to deliver such documents at the Court Marshal's office.

The Reichsanzeiger publishes a rescript from Emperor William to Prince Bismarck, bearing date Dec. 31. It reads:

Dear Prince: The year which has brought in such heavy visitations and such irrevocable losses draws to an end. It is a toy and a solece to think that you still stand loyally by my side with fresh strength to enter upon the new year. From my whole heart I invoke upon you hape you have been been been dealth. It is suggested as a remedy that a duty be placed on nursery products imported from Canada, and Mr. Baker is preparing a brief to be submitted to the finance committee embodying the views of the nurserymen upon the question of protecting them from any unfriendly legislation of the Canadian Parliament. Sudden Beath of Capt. John Frazer.

He was taken ill Friday night and complained of feeling cold and sore. At 6 o'clock Saturday morning he dismissed his attendants, saying he was better. At 8,30 he was found lying in bed dead. Capt. Frazer has been sailing on the lakes for many years and was very popular and highly respected. He hailed from Windsor.

At one house only was resistance made, but after a fight which lasted 15 minutes the defenders yielded. The last house visited by the evictors was found to be so strongly fortified that the magistrate decided not to attempt its capture until Monday.

"The Peterborough Review, which joins with the rest of the pack in full cry denouncing the Liberals as disloyal, publishes an article under the heading. Prospering Abroad, in which it gives a list of former residents of Peterborough who are residents of Sioux City section of lowa and indulges in a glowing account of the prosperity which attends them. Had any Liberal paper published such an article the Review would have been one of the first to denounce it as booming the United States and guilty of terrible disloyality to Canada. How is it to be regarded in your case, Mr. Recorder, the Review desires it to be regarded just as it would have been in the article. If you would have considered it disloyal had a Liberal paper published the article, do so in this case and tells us why you do so; if you would not have thought it.

article, do so in this case and tells us why you do so; if you would not have thought it disloyal on the part of a Liberal paper, do not credit the REVIEW with being unpatriotic.

But it is absurd to consider the publication of such news disloyal or unpatriotic. There is a wide difference, which anyone should see, between stating that former residents had prospered in Iowa and in stating that they had prospered more than they would have had they remained under the British flag. The REVIEW believes that in Canada there is ample opportunities for advancement—that Ontario abounds in such opportunities—but if any should see, between stating that former residents had prospered in Iowa and in stating that they had prospered more than they would have had they remained under the British flag. A Case of Mysterious Disappearance.
TRENTON, Jan. 5.—Moses Bisnett, formerly of Watertown, N.Y.; and who has for some time past been engaged as painter for Randolph & VanBlaricom, agents for the Gananoque Carriage Company in Belleville, left for Trenton on Dec. 27 last. He had with him a quantity of hardware novelties, furnished by them, to dispose of there. As he did not return on Saturday, as expected, they, being anxious about him on account of pressure of work, determined to discover his whereabouts. Inquiry at Stacey's hotel, Trenton, at which he was found to be staying, revealed the fact that he had not been seen since Sunday evening. He was seen disposing of his goods on Saturday and he was also seen on Sunday evening at 7 o'clock, but since then his whereabouts are unknown. Diligentenquiry has failed to disclose any particulars in regards to his mysterious disappearance. It is feared some serious misfortune has befallen him, as he had left a quantity of his goods at the hotel.

Another startling upheaval in Ready-made Clothing, Gents Furnishings and Boots and Shoes has commenced in our two Big Stores, No. 377 and 379 George-st. The dividing wall has to come tumbling down, and other improvements made, so that the Prices of Goods must suffer another Sweeping Reduction, in order to clear them out of the road.

The snow that fell during the night was just what was required to give a fittle life to the municipal fight which was waged today. Wheels were knocked off and the runners were out early and the merry jingle of the bells was music to every ear. After nine o'clock in the morning the cutters and sleighs of all kinds were on the fly bringing to the different polling places the voters, and the streets had quite a lively appearance. Both the candidates for the Mayoralty seab had many friends who were working hard all day to place in the boxes the ballot of every man whom the law allowed to vote. The interest in the contest was considerable and there is no doubt that the returns to-night will show that a large vote was polled, The Aldermanic contests in Nos. In Ashburnham, although Mr. John Burnham goes into the Reeve's chair for another year, the interest in the run for councillor's seats was considerable and the candidates have been working all day. There are seven candidates in the field—the rour old ones and Mesers. Marshall, Tivey and A. Fitzgerald. A good vote will probably be polled.

THE OLD MILLS AGAIN MADE NEW.

The above mills were shut down last April, and all the old machinery from the water wheels to the top of the mill removed and replaced by AN ENTIRELY NEW PLANT. The machinery put in is the most modern, and the capacity has been increased 250 barrels daily. The Roller plant is W. F. Cochanc's New invention, connected and rouning in two straight lines, and driven by one belt. We have also erected adjoining the mill a new elevator for wheat, with a capacity of 30,000 bushels. For grinding coarse grain into chop we have put in A NEW ROLLER MILL which is a great improvement over the old stones. The firm has spared no expense in making this mill one of the best of its capacity in Canada, and that they have succeeded in so doing is evident from the excellent quality of four it is now turning out. We invite all our old customers, and others who have not favored us in the past, and all the farmers from north, south, east and west of Pelerborough, to call and see us: assuring satisfaction in prices and quality of flour, price for wheat, quality and quantity of flour exchanged for wheat, and last put not least, the reduction of coarse grain into chop by OUR NEW ROLLER OHOP MILL. made it right on Thursday night, which as Friday mornin' when Mr. Fitzgerald came oma.

Mrs. Sampson bravely stuck to this statement, and ultimately left the witress box in triumph, the rest of her evidence being comparatively unimportant as compared with this point of time. The witness Rankin, who drove the prisoner to Fowlett street (as sworn to by him), was recalled and gave evidence that it was 3 o'clock when the prisoner got down from his cab in Fowlett street.

heard the chimes and their quite plainly.

This conflicting evidence as to time was a strong point in Brian's favor. If, as the landlady stated, on the authority of the kitchen clock, which had been put right on the day previous to the murder, Fitzgerald had come into the house at five minutes to 2, heardly not possibly be the man who had could not possibly be the man who had ghted from Rankin's cab at 2 o'clock at The next witness was Dr. Chinston, who deposed as to the finding of the glove belonging to the deceased in the pocket of the prisoner's coat.

Roger Moreland, an intimate friend of the deceased, was next called. He stated that he had known the deceased in London, and had met him in Melbourne. He was with him a great deal. On the night of the murder he was in the Oriental hotel in Bourke street.
Whyte came in, and was greatly excited. He was in evening dress, and wore a light coat.
They had several drinks together, and then went up to a hotel in Russell street, and had some more drinks there. Both witness and deceased were intoxicated. Whyte took off his light coat, saying he felt warm, and went out shortly afterwards, leaving withess asleep in the bar. He was awoke by the barman, who wanted him to leave the hotel. He saw that Whyte had left his coat behind him, and took it up with the intention of giving it to him. As he stood in the street some one snatched the coat from him, and made off with it. He tried to follow the thief, but he could not do so, being too intoxicated. He then went home and to bed, as he had to leave early for the country in the morning.
In cross-examination:

witness—No, I did not; but I was very drunk, and unless deceased had spoken to me, would not have noticed him.

Calton—What was the deceased excited out when you met him!
Witness—I don't know. He did not say.
Calton—What were you talking about!
Witness—All sorts of things; London prin-

Calton—Did the deceased mention anything bout papers?

Witness (surprised)—No, he did not.

Witness Surprised Acq.
Calton—Are you sure!
Witness—Quite sure.
Calton—What time did you get home!
Witness—I don't know. I was too drunk

This closed the case for the crown, and as it was now late, the court was adjourned till the next day. The court was soon emptied of the busy, chattering crowd, and Calton, on looking over his notes, found that the result of the first day's trial was two points in favor of Fitzgerald. First, the discrepancy of time in the evidence of Rankin and the landlady, Mrs. Sampson. Second, the evidence of the cabman, Royston, as to the wearing of a ring on the forefinger of the right hand by the man who murdered Whyte, whereas the prisoner never wore rings.

These were slender proofs of innocence to put against the overwhelming mass of evidence in favor of the prisoner's guilt. The opinions of all were pretty well divided, some being in favor and others against, when suddenly an event happened which surprised every one. All over Melbourne extras were posted and the news passed from lip to lip like wildfire: "Return of the missing witness Sal Rawlins." remember. This closed the case for the crown, and as

CHAPTER XVIII.

SAL RAWLINS TELLS ALL SHE KNOWS.
And, indeed, such was the case. Sal Rawlins had made her appearance at the eleventh hour, to the heartfelt thankfulness of Calton, who saw in her an angel from beaven, sent to save the life of an innocent man.

Lawyer Calton and Kilsip went to the humble abode of Mrs. Rawlins, familiarly known as Mother Guttersnipe. When they entered the squalld, dingry passage that led to Mother Guttersnipe's abode, they saw a faint light streaming down the stair. As they climbed up the shaky stair, they could hear the rancorous voice of the old hag pouring forth atternate-blessings and curses on her prodigal offspring, and the low tones of a girl's voice in reply. On entering the room Calton saw that the sick woman who had beer lying in the corner on the occasion of his last visit was gone. Mother Guttersnipe was seated in Iront of the deal table, with a broken cup and her favorite bottle of spirits before her. She was evidently going to have a night of it, in order to celebrate Sal's return, and had commenced early, so as to lose no time. Sal herself was seated on a broken chair, and leaned wearily acquisit the wall.

TORONTO TOPICS. A Dog and Coon Fight Case-Slugger Sull

Toronto, Jan. 7.—Mr. Slugger Sullivan and a select party of prize ring cohorts are expected here to-day, the advance guard having already arrived. Their object, it is said, is to arrange a fight with Kilrain.

Actor Mantell and some of his troupe gave evidence for the defence in the case of Hotelkeeper Bingham, who, with five others, were arrested on Saturday morning for enjoying the luxury of a dog and coon fight on his premises, known as "The Hub." As the actors had to leave for Hamilton on Sunday, they were permitted to testify, although the entire case will not be heard until Friday. "Monbars" said that Bingham was with him all the latter part of the evening and did not leave the room in which were Mrs. Bingham and Mrs. Mantell, and of course was profoundly ignorant of the presence of a 'coon in another apartment.

Specific charges of drunkenness, slander and lying have been lodged by certain members of the Western Methodist Church, Toronto, against Rev. T. W. Jeffery, expaster. Meanwhile, a testimonial committee is at work on Mr. Jeffery's behalf.

Montreal a Clearing House.

Montreal, Jan. 6.—The clearing house established by the city banks goes into operation on Monday. The Merchants' Bank have given the use of a room in their building. A manager will be appointed by each of the banks in turn, and every morning a clerk and a messenger from each bank will attend at the clearing-house at 10 o'clock to deliver to and receive from each other the checks, drafts and notes which are payable by each to the other, these being made up in packages. At the same time a statement will be handed from each bank to the manager showing the amount due by or to each bank, to or from each other bank. Between 12 and 12 30 the representatives of the different banks will pay to or receive from the Clearing-Bank, which the Bank of Montreal has agreed to become, the amount so appearing due, thus doing away with the trouble and labor attending the system now followed, by which each bank collects daily from the other banks the amount due on its exchanges. The system adopted is a simple one and free from all expense.

A DOG'S DEVOTION.

The Duke's Only Companion in Prison and Morner at His Death.

The Due d'Enghien had a spaniel which passionately lamented over his death, and we wonder if Napoleon suffered any qualms of remorse when he read of it flercely bemoan thoughts of his doleful prospects, his spirits rose and he left the window, out of which he had been disconsolately staring, and called his dog to share his, supper with him. The faithful creature was on guard beside him when one withinkth he was accosed from his a trial with sanguine hopes of a speedy release. He did not know that during his trial his graw was being dug. After leaving the judgment hall the prisoner, still unsuspicious of the haste to fulfill the sentence from which he expected a pardon, was talking to Lieut. Noiret, a soldier who had known his grandfather, the prince of Conde. A historian says 'he played with his dog' while chatting garly to the soldier. The poor beast had been ill at ease, for some subtle instinct warned it that there was danger afoot. Its dullest spirits were raised by its master's assurance; but it was short lived contentment, for the duke and his dumb friend were soon parted by death. The prisoner was ordered to follow the commander down a darksome stairway, which led into the moat. The duke hesitated, but the dog followed without question at his master's heels. The duke, when he racched the trench, realized the truth. He cut a lock of his hair, gave it and a ring to Noiret to send to his betrothed, Princess Charlottè de Rohan. As 3 o'clock struck the soldiers fired, and Napoleon's young victim fell. The spaniel, in the dim light—for it was a gloomy March, morning, and the moat was lit by a solitary lantern—had not seen its master's face, and was unaware of his evil fate till it saw him dead. In vain it fawned upon him who, but a few minutes previously, had stroked and commanded his pleased favorite. It was with difficulty that the poor animal could be torn from the spot and given to one of the prince's servants, who took him to the Princes' Charlotte.—All the Year Round.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 8, 1889. THE GREAT SUGAR FRAUD

PRECTOR FULLER EXTRACTS HOPE

Bought Stock at $600.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7 .- Direc

New York, Jan. 7. – Director Lawson N. Fuller has not yet abandoned his faith in the electric augar, refining process. "Why, he says, "do you mean to tell me that Mrs. Freund would have retained these 5250 shares if the thing had been a swindle? Why, she might have sold cach of her shares for $300 and made as fortune out of it. There is another reason for my faith in the thing," he said. "I will pay $1000 to any refiner in the world who will produce a single barrel of sugar equal to any of those grades, and I will give another $1000 to you if you will find such a mrin. The facts is it can't be done ab any price. There is a secret somewhere."

There is a secret somewhere. "There is a secret somewhere."

The secret in question promised, when put into practice, to revolutionize the sugar trade by placing in the hands of the fortunate shareholders a monopoly of the sugar refining industry of the world. By passing through a mystical process fired with electric force raw sugar was to be transformed, as a fabulously cheap price, into refined sugar of unequaled purity. The samples of its work were pronounced of unexampled purity by the best authorities of both continents. Sugar refiners began to quall as the prospects the new disovery presented. Even the sugar trust began to fear the opposition of the new company and fabulous prices were offered for the purchase of the accret. Sample after sample of Freund's work was wathibited and caused the greatest interest in the traffic.

Finally the company was floated and Freund's minished with $150,000 for the pur-city, went straight to the factory in Brooklyn, and broke down the barriers that sheltered the mystic secrees with the result detailed to-day. But a great many people would still like to know how sugar of such unequalled quality and unexampled purity was turned out.

GERLIN, Jan. 7. Some Guelph people are among the victims of the electric sugar refin-ing swindle, insurance agent C. H. Evans being the principal holder of stock here. Some stock here was sold at $800 a share. A NEW ELDORADO.

Beautiful French Canadian Girl who be Not Tasted Food for 2550 Days. Net Tasted Food for 2550 Days.

Lewiston, Me., Jan. 8.—Josephine Bedard is a pretty, dark-eyed, vivacious French Canadian girl who has been on a Christman visit to her uncle and cousins at 27 Birchstreet, Lewiston, for the past few days. If her story is true, she has fasted more than 2550 days, having neither eaten nor desired to eat, nor tasted food in any form for that length of time. When the reporter called upon her and introduced himself through an interpreter, she being unable to converse in English, it was at the dinner hour, and while her relatives were partaking of the noon repast she was leisurely reclining in a rocking chair, apparently deeply interested in a work on history.

with sparkling brown yes and short, coalback hair. She is a fascinating brunctic of demure countenance and modest bearing. "She never eat someting," said one of the family, "all zee time she be here."
This remark caused Josephine to smile, showing a set of even, pearl-white teeth, and at the same time revealing a set of dimples which might arouse the jealousy of an ordinary society girl. Mr. Bedard said that when in Canada, in order to remove the doubts of a few skeptical persons, Josephine was locked in a room for fifteen to day, as a set, with no nourishment but water, and that she came out at the end of that time without experiencing the slightest illness. The fact that she is very lond of books and spenda the most of her spare moments in reading and study would seem to indicate that her mind has a literary inclination. A leading Montreal physician pronounced her aphysicial wonder and offered Josephine's father $700 for the privilege of taking her into his custody, with a view to solving the cause of her peouliar condition. This Mr. Bedard refresd to do. Alburn, N. Y., Jan, S. - While the attention of William Kelly, temporarily the only guard in charge of ward 6, in which are confined the most dangorous criminals in the insane asylum here, was momentarily diverted at 5,30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, a desperate attempt to escape was made by five inmates. John Thomas, alias Welch; John O'Brien, Henry Hauson, Thomas Smith and Thomas Donohue rushed upon Mr. Kelly and knocked him down. The lunaties passed down the stafrs into the basement, and, having reached the rear basement door of the main building, they opened it and rushed out suddenly on Guard Stebbins, who was statoned at that point. Although his rifle was strapped to his back in such a way, that is could his case face to face with their man. Lewiston, Me., Jan. S., Josephine Bedard is a pretty, dark-eyed, vivacious French Canadian girl who has been on a Christmas visit to her uncle and cousins at 27 Birch street, Lewiston, for the past few days. If her story is true, she has fasted more than 2505 days, having neither caten nor desired to eat, nor tasted food in any form for that length of time. When the reporter called upon her and the troduced himself through an interpreter, she being unable to converse in English, it was at the dimner hour, and while her relatives were partaking of the noon repast she was beinevely reclining in a rocking chair, apparently deeply interested in a work on history.

Her story, as told by herself, was that she was beinevely reclining in a rocking chair, apparently deeply interested in a work on history.

Her story, as told by herself, was that she was been on the father's farm in Tingwick, a small agricultural town in Canada, in 1572. Her mother was stricken with a disease which terminated fatally when Josephine on the family: No form of eatables can arouse had not received a short time, and afterward assisted in the household duties at home. On Christmas Day, 1831, she was violently attacked with diphtheria, and for three weeks are was between life and death. No form of eatables can arouse her sleeping appetite, and the most delicious fruits are no temptation to her. In appearance she is of medium height, weighing 125 pounds, with a symmetrical figure, intellectual head, and what is called a pretty face, with sparkling brown eyes and short, coalblack hair. She is a fascinating brunette of demure countenance and modest bearing, and that she is every fond of books and spends the most of an ordinary society girl. Mr. Bedard said that when in Canada, in order to remove the doubts of a few skeptical persons, doubt of the family, "

VOTERS' LISTS. LIBERAL papers are denouncing the Do-minion Government for an alleged "fran-chise outrages." The offence is said to be that the Government sent copies of the Dominion voters' list to Conservatives in two western cities and that the Conservatives thereby gain an advantage over their opponents. It is strange that the Conservatives in those cities and elsewhere know nothing about such copies of the lists being received, and it is hard to understand how they could have got them without knowing it.

But what would be the object in the Government sanding lists to their friends? If

When the lists are revised ample notice will be given—must be given—in accordance with the law, and months will intervene between the time that notice will first be given and the final revision. Every party will be given an equal opportuity to put on genuine voters' names and there is no chance for the Conservatives to obtain an advantage so long as the Liberals do their duty to their party.

This cry against the Government has been called a "mare's nest," discovered by the Liberal papers. But they have a double object in view. One is to try to discredit the Government, by making this false charge. That object appears on the face of the accusation. But there in another below the surface. It was to accomplish this that the wholesale charges were made against the revising barristers, of attending to the placing on the list of the names of Conservatives, during the last revision. Conservatives, however, know too well that the revising barristers did their duty fairly, and that the Government does not try to take any undue advantage, to be misled by the misrepresentations of the Liberal press.

THE cry is again being raised that the Dominion elections will be brought on sud-denly. When the Liberal press talks in this way, to the Conservatives it should mean, watch Mr. Mowat and look out for an election surprise in that direction.

Will Horses Ever Go Faster?

Professor Brewer said, in a speech before the National Academy of Sciences: The Eng-lish thoroughbred is a finished breed, and it has undoubtedly arrived at the summit of its excellence. There has been practically no new blood in this breed since 1760. This breed has been finished and completed in two senses: First, as to its grade, heredity, blood and character; and secondly, as to its speed, in which the limit has been undoubtedly reached. We have faster horses than our grandfathers, but it is not likely that our grandchildren will have a faster breed than we have now. Will Horses Ever Go Faster?

grandfathers, but it is not likely that our grandchildren will have a faster breed than we have now.

In the case of trotters there has been a steady increase of speed. The fastest record is 2:08%. Less than a dozen horses have ever trotted in less than 2:14.

The best record in running was made in Louisville, the time being 1:39%.

The speaker showed a table on which were the number of horses in the last few years which had made a record within five seconds of this time.

The nearest that any horse has come to this record is 1:40, which was done last year. A very large number of horses have made their record but once. There are many that have made as fast time as those that have records, but in not winning the race they get no record. The record as it now stands may be lowered. When I said that speed had reached its maximum I didn't think but what better time would be made. I think about 1:39 will be the speed of runners. Hereafter breeders will be expected to keep up this high standard of excellence rather than to making better time. I believe the theroughbred has finished his evolution.—New Haven Journal.

Wedded to His Half Sister.

Jacob Wells, a farmer living in Fayette county, Ala., discovered, after four years of happy wedded life, that his wife is his half-sister. Wells' father, who lived at Sparta, Ga., was killed in the war. About twenty-five years ago Mrs. Wells married a man named Hogue. Young Wells, then about 12 years old, did not like his stepfather and ran away from home. He finally drifted to Fayette county, Ala., worked a number of years as a farmer's laborer and in time bought a small farm of his own. Mrs. Hogue's mother died soon after the birth of a child by her second husband, and the child, a girl, was cared for by relations of the father's family named Smith.

Two years later Hogue died, and his daughter grew up in the Smith family, and was always known as Dora Smith. Five years ago the family moved to Fayette county, and there the young lady met her half brother Wells. Even Wells' most intimate friends knew nothing of his early history, and he had never communicated with his relatives in Georgia. Wells and Miss Smith, as she was known, fell in love at first sight and were soon married. They have one child, a year old, and only discovered their relationship a few days ago by a chance word dropped by the wife. They were in a quandary for a time, but have decided to continue to live as man and wife.

This year our Town Council does not contain many professional gentieman, Mr. E. H. D. Hall being the only professional gentieman out of the dozon. THE BATTLE FOR THE CHAIR.
The Mayoralty contest was a hard fought ne, for the supporters of both candidates rted themselves to their utmost to p ry available vote, and the result of the payery available vote, and the result of the ballot shows that a good number of votes was polled. Last year the elections fell on New Year's day and, therefore, the vote polled was large, but the figures of yesteriaty are nearly up to them. Last year in the contest against Mr. Rutherford, Mr. tevenson polled 1,086 votes against his pponent's 307, which makes a total of 1,393 'his year the total vote polled was 1 359, a ice of only 34 votes in the wh

rn. To say that the result of yesterday's voting shows the strength of the labor party would not be fair. Mr. Denne was inated by the workingmen's mee ng, but the fact that he did not re-elve the entire vote of the working-nen is obvious. Mr. Stevenson was looked upon by many as being as much a workingman as his opponent and just as good a friend of the workingman, and many of the labor men therefore cast their ballots for him. But outside of this question Mr. Stevenson is a man who has been a good Mayor and is very popular with the people. And, as one old voter remarked last night, there is probably no man in the town who can defeat him. His majority of 403 yester-day was a surprise to everyone, and to no one more than himself.

THE MAJORITIES IN THE WARDS.
No. One Ward gave him the handsome majority of 125, while the 192 votes by which he exceeded Mr. Denne in No. Two Ward was away beyond his or his friends' expectations. No. Three Ward also contribute For first class Laundry and Toilet Soap

Messrs. Elmore, in England, have introduced a process for the production of pure copper tubes, wire, etc., by which very satisfactory results have been obtained. The general method of producing a tube is to immerse a revolving mandrel, nearly surrounded by bars of Chili copper, in a bath of copper sulphate, and send a current of electricity between the bars and the mandrel. The ordinary result would be the deposition of crystalline copper, with little adhesiveness and strength. The essential feature of the process is a burnisher pressing lightly on the surface of the copper, traveling on a leading screw from from one end of the mandrel to the other, its motion being automatically reversed when it reaches either end. The result is a tube of great density and strength, and without lines of weakness as in ordinary tubes.

When it-is desired to make wires, tubes of any desired length and thickness are cut spirally into square wires, and these are afterwards drawn to the required size and shape. The conductivity is greater than that usually obtained in commercial wire, and is even greater than that of the samples determined by Dr. Matthiessen, who used the greatest care in obtaining his specimens of copper. Tests made on annealed and hard drawn wires give respectively 102.4 and 104.44 per cent. of the conductivity obtained by Dr. Matthiessen fer pure copper.—Scienca

Ly FERGUS W. HUME.

She stood up as Catton and the detective en-tered, and they saw she was a tall, slender woman of about 25, not had looking, but with a pallid and haggard face. She was dressed in a kind of tawdry blue dress, much soiled and torn, and had an old tartan shawl over her shoulders, which she drew tightly across her breast as the strangers entered. Her grandmother, who looked more weird and grotesquely horrible than ever, saluted Calton and the detective on their entrance with a shr.ll yell and a volley of choice language. Kilsip paid no attention to her, but turned

SPOTTED WILD CATTLE.

BREED OF THE BOVINE FAMILY THAT IS PUZZLING HUNTERS.

as to Their Origin-Bulls the Skill of Trained Generals-All Efforts to Cultivate Their Friendship Have

In the lonesome defiles of the Coquille mountains there has roamed at will for half a dozen years a band of strange wild cattle. Hunters pronounce them a distinct breed from those which have been so long inhabiting the Umpqua river. They are leopard like in color, being dotted with black in a skin of dur.

have proved more than a match for the local sportsmen who have at various times gone to the heights in pursuit of them.

"Well, those cattle have an anomaly, sure enough," said C. J. Andrews, a resident of Coguille, forty-five miles up from the Pacific cocan, to a reporter at the American Exchange hotel here today, "Their origin is shrouded in mystery. Some say they are descended from a spotted cow which strayed away from Father De Voe in 1899. The old man De Voe lives at the mouth of the Coquille. He was the first settler there, and brought three or four cows with him when he came by wagon from the lower Platte. About a year afterward he lost a cow that 'was about to calve, and, though he hunted far and near throughout the heavy pines which skirt the Coquille, he could never find her, but when news began to come in after three or four years that there were some wild cattle up in the mountains, he half thought it must be his cow and her progeny. There are others, however, and De Voe is inclined to share their belief, who think that this breed of cattle has always been wild, that they are indigenous to that region, the same as the wild cattle of Mexico.

"Certain it is, at any rate, that all attempts to subdue these cattle have been futile. In 1878 Tom Withrow, a hunter of the Coquille, after a long attempt to kill some of them, succeeded in capturing a calf. The calf was newly born and too weak to get away, and the old cow would not leave it, and at once charged furiously upon him. He was, mounted on a fleet Oregon mustang, and he pur spurs to him and got out of there as quickly as he was able. The cow and the pony tore down the hill through the brush at a terrible pace, and old Tom thought, he was done for. There was blood in the cow's eye, and a vindictive, menacing look, which put speed into both rider and horse. The hunter's gun was strapped to the pony's side, and he had no time to use it. The cow pursued him for nearly half a mile, and until the mustang had chucked Withrow over his head, down a steep decl

"Tom was mad. He was an old hunter, and didn't much relish being routed by a cow. He recaptured his pony, tied him to a tree, and, unstrapping his gun, started in a roundabout way up through the hills afoot. He dodged from tree to tree, and finally climbing one he was able to descry the wild cow, with her head and tail up, her eyes blazing, sniffing the air. He was within rifle shot, and succeeded in putting two balls into her. She bellowed furiously, but the wounds were mortal and she could not attack AN OLD HUNTER OUTWITTED

The others, to the number of twenty or thirty, got away. All were spotted with black, no one spot being bigger than a silver dollar. You may be sure they were very pretty, as they were fat and their hair was short. I suppose there are no handsomper cattle any where than these wild ones, in the Oregon wildensees.

"This old bull was a good one. He was not unusually large, weighing about 1,100 pounds, but he was clean limbed as a race horse, just about as fleet, and as pretty as a picture.

"Since that time various people have gone after these queer cattle, but nobody has succeeded in getting any. It is upuall business. Nobody lives up in those mountain tops." An Electric Dog Cart.

The sultan of Turkey has had an electric dog cart made for his own use, and it was recently exhibited at a skating rink in London. It was built by the Messrs. Immisch & Co., of London, at a cost of $1,000. In appearance it resembles an ordinary dog eart with the shafts removed. The motor, which is placed in the center of the body of the vehicle, is of one horse power, having a current of twenty amperes, with an electromotive force of forty-eight volts. Motion is communicated to one of the hind wheek by means of a small pinion on the main shaft of the motor, which shaft passes upward through the footboard and terminates in a handle, by means of which the carriage can be easily guided. It is provided with an ordinary foot brake, and the motor can be reversed so as to back the vehicle. The power is stored in twenty-four small accumulators of special type, occupying a space under the seats, and which are said to be sufficient to propel the vehicle at a speed of ten miles an hour for five hours. The carriage is really serviceable, and not merely a curiosity. It is made of walnut and light wood, and the cushions of brown cloth are embroidered with the Turkish imperial crest. It will carry four persons, and weighs about eleven hundredweight complete.—Demorest.

Caught in a Folding Bed.

A singular accident occurred at Grand Rapids. Dr. McPherson was instilly summoned to the residence of a Mrs. Smith. Her husband explained that they had used a combination folding bed for some time and had had no trouble with it until then. He had arisen before his wife in the morning and had hardly dressed when ha peard a spring snap and the upright part of the bed fell over upon Mrs. Smith, completely shutting her in. He tried to raise the bed, but could not do it without assistance. When the doctor arrived he found Mrs. Smith in great agony. The weight of the bed had rested entirely upon her head, which was severely bruised. The doctor also found indications that her spine had been injured.—Detroit Free Press. Caught in a Folding Bed.

George S. Mayes of St. John, N.B., has entered suit against the Government in the Exchequer Court for $4500 in connection with the contract for building the railway bridge across the St. John River two years ago. THREE BATTLES IN HAYTI troops of the North under Hyppolite appears to be shortly expected by all but the immediate supporters of Legitime. He has thrown into prison all the prominent citizens and residents of the North in Port-au-Prince suspected of opposing him. Three battles have been fought and lost by Legitime in the past ten days. The first, near Hirahe, was most disastrous, followed by an engagement on Dec. 22 a few miles northeast from here. During the rapid retreat on the capital two divisions of the Southern army, under Gen. San Fieln Paul and Gen. Rosa, deserted to the pursuing Northerners. Both these generals had supported Gen. Thelamaque, but had been bribed by Legitime to support him with their armies recruited in the central and northern departments. Gen. Paul was captured and shot by sentence of a drum head court-martial under Hyppolite. Gen. Rosa escaped and sought protection at the French Minister's at Port-au-Prince. A stand was made the next day at a rising knoll of ground by the dispirited army of the South, but they were able to stand but a short time against Hyppolite's assaults. The army of the North are entrenching them selves some twenty miles from Port-au-Prince, completing their lines of communication, re-organizing their augmented army and awaiting the arrival of recently purchased arms and munitions of war. They are also devastating the great agricultural section where they are now encamped and from which Legitime received the greater portion of his supplies. Gen. Hyppolite, having been elected and declared Provincial President by the central and northern departments, on his capture of the capital will demand, a congress of deputies from all the departments of this section, and hence Legitime is imprisoning all the possible ringleaders in a revolt against him. He is showing great activity in securing "volunteers" through press gangs, who seize the laborers in the fields and bring them to the barracks, frequently in chains to prevent their escaping. Without law life and property are unsafe in this section.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 9, 1889. A NEEDED CHANGE.

This bill of a Canadian bank which is good in one province should be good in all the provinces, says the Montreal Star, and not be subject to a discount, as some of them are. In the this country, although under a late interpretation of the law Canadian bank bill are subjected to a duty of ten per cent. In the United States. Canada cannot control the circulation of her currency in other lands. but her Government is able to control it in her own. But there is a natural dislike on the part of the banks to the Government taking over the circulation, although the legislation of recent years has been in that direction as far as the bills of the smaller denominations are concerned. The loss which the public suffers through the bills of one province being subjected to a discount in another could be avoided if the banks of the Dominion arranged between themselves to accept the bills of any authorized bank in any province without discount. This is what is in contemplation. In the case of some of the banks it has already been done. In his speech at the Toronto Board of Trade banquet the Minister of Finance expressed himself as being strongly in favor of the idea, and it may be assumed that steps will be taken to carry it out. It is certainly an anomaly that the bills of some Canadian banks should be subjected to a discount in Canada while American bills pass from hand to hand at par.

Toronto, Jan. 9.—The Master-in-Ordinary has fixed the remuneration to be allowed the Central Bank liquidators. The amount collected up to Oct. 13 was $720,629

In addition there are at present outstanding accounts which the liquidators have to collect amounting to about $200,000.

The Master is not prepared to give the exact fees for this collection but in proportion to the present schedule the whole amount will not exceed $20,000. This is in striking contrast to the amount originally demands,

This mine is one of the most prosperous in America and the Treadwells are Canadians belonging to St. Johns N. B. The output of the mine a short time ago was estimated as $70,000 a month, when 120 stamps were in operation, but the stamps have since been doubled, and the output was increased to 240 stamps, showing an output of $340,000 a month. Wallace Ross, held on suspicion of being concerned in the O'Connor far robbery, made a bold break for liberty on leaving the van at the jail yesterday morning. He had slipped his handouff before leaving the vehicle and at once started on the run. Policeman Veitch, who was in charge of the van, saw that his other prisoners were safe and then started in pursuit, running him to earth on the Don Flats after firing three shots at him without effect.

Mr. Wingfield, J.F., yesterday heard the charges against Mungo Smith, who was arrested on Monday on a charge under the Charlton Act. It is alleged that on June 2, 1888, under promise of marriage, he debauched a girl 17 years of age named Clara Gosney. The prisoner told the J.P. yesterday that the preferred to marry the girl aust the case was adjourned to give him an eportunity to do so. Later on, it is said, he went down to County Clerk Eakins' office, secured a marriage liessee and they were married.

The Beath Penalty By Electricity.

New York, Jan. 8.—With reference to a despatch from Buffalo, giving Dr. Southwick as authority for the statement that there would be a meeting in this city of the commission to select a proper method of executing the death penalty by electricity. Mr. Elbridge T. Gerry sald yesterday he had received no notice of any such meeting, and he did not believe any was to be held. The commission had performed its work and made its report to the Governor, and there was no further occasion for its meeting. Some of tife electric lighting companies, Mr. Gerry added, were anxions to keep the public in ignorance of the deadly power of their wires, and were denying that efficacy as destit-dealing instruments, but if anybody was inclined to believe them let him take a part of from nippers and elimbons of their poles and attempt to out one of the electric light wires. He would have the death-dealing power of the electric current strongly enough impressed upon him to put him beyond cavil and denial forever, but that was no reason why electricity should be condemned or the man who put it to use. As much might the ropemaker be condemned because hemp had been occasionally instrumental in hanging a man.

They asked Carter to meet them at their cabin in a lonely strip of timber for the purpose of settling past differences on a friendly basis. When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Oall it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is justone sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Byrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you you may depend upon this for certain.

O'Nell's family is well remembered here by old residents and "Pat" himself is known by a large number of citizens who always made large number of citzens who always made it their business to see O'Nell when they visited the Flour City. Last week's issue of the Rochester edition of the Utica Globe comes out with a detailed and illustrated account of the officer's tragic death. A good cut of the plucky Peterborough boy is given, as well as one of the murderer, and the scene of the fatal encounter.

THE MURDERER.
William Manley, the murderer, is described a hard working man, of a stern and cribed a hard working man, of a stern and rather abusive nature, who was in the habit of wreaking vengeance on his family if anything went wrong with him. There had been complaints made to the authorities several different times, and on Saturday last the wife made complaint again, "whereupon," the Globe's account says, "a warrant was issued by the police justice and later in the day given in charge of and later in the day given in charge o Officer William P. O'Neil, with orders to arrest the man. The officer arrived at the house in the afternoon, immediately making the object of his visit known to Man-ley, whereupon the murderer, who was standing by the stove in an unconcerned manner, refused to accompany the officer until he had seen the warrant. The officer finally succeeded in getting his prisoner en-route for the jail where the prisoner was to e examined and the cause of his doings asertained, if possible. No trouble was exnced by the officer with his prisoner, as Manley went along in a peaceful manner. The murderer had evidently been watching his chance for when on the corner of Plymouth avenue and Adams-st. he suddenly stuck his foot between the officer's limbs in such a way as to cause the officer to fall. whereupon the prisoner started on a run up Adams-st. The officer was at once on his feet and jumping into a wagon soon overtook his man on the Adams-st. railroad bridge. When about to lay hold on his prisoner the latter warned him not to come

The machinery put in is the most modern, and the capacity has been increased 250 barrels daily. The Roller plant is W. F. Cochanne's New Invention, conhected and rouning in two straight lines, and driven by one belt. We have also erected adjoining the mill a new elevator for wheat, with a capacity of 30,000 bushles. For grinding coarse grain into chop we have put in A NEW ROLLER MILL which is a great improvement over the old stones. The firm has spared no expense in making this mill one of the best of its capacity in Canada, and that they have succeeded in so doing is evident from the excellent quality of flour it is now turning out. We invite all our old customers, and others who have not favored us in the past, and all the farmers from north, south, east and west of Tsierborough, to call and see us assuring satisfaction in prices and quality of flour, price for wheat, quality and quantity of flour exchanged for wheat, and last put not least, the reduction of coarse grain into chop by OUR NEW ROLLER OHOP MILL.

"And how long was he with her!" asked Calton, who had been listening attentively.
"Bout arf a hour," answered Sal. "I takes 'im back to Russell street about twenty-five minutes to 2, 'cause I looked at the clock on the postofflee, an' 'e gives me a sov., an' then 'e goes a-tearin' up the street like anythine."

"im."
"Oh, it's all right," said Calton, nodding to Klisip; "there won't be any difficulty in proving an alibi. But I say," he added, turning to Sal, "what were they talking about?" "I dunno," answered Sal. "I was at the door, an' they talks that quiet I couldn't 'ear' 'em. Then he sings out, 'My G-, it's too horrible? an' I 'ear a larfin' like to bust, an' then 'e comes to me, and ses, quite wild like, "Take me out of this 'ell!' an' I tooked 'im."

croaked the old woman, fixing one evil eye on the lawyer; "an' I know what you'd like Calton turned from her with a shrug of his shoulders.

"You will come to the court to-morrow with Mr. Kilsip," he said to Sal, "and tell what you have just now told me."

"It's all true, s'tlp me," said Sal, eagerly;
"'e was 'ere all the time."

Calton stepped towards the door, followed by the detective, when Moth a Guttersnipe arose.

"Where's the money for finin' 'er?" she screeched, pointing one skinny finger at Sal. "Well, considering the girl found herself,"

And the old fury, to prove the truth of her words, danced a kind of war dance in front of Mr. Calton, snapping her fingers and yelling out curses, as an accompaniment to her ballet. Her luxurious white hair got loose, and streamed out during her gyrations, and what with her grotesque looks and the faint light of the candle, she looked a grewsome spectacle. Calton, remembering the tales he had heard of the women of Paris at the Revolution, and the way they danced "La Carmagnole," thought that Mother Guttersnipe would have been in her element in that sea of blood and turbulence. He, however, merely shrugged his shoulders and walked out of the room, as with a final curse, delivered in a hearse voice, Mother Guttersnipe sank exhausted on the floor, and yelled for gin.

THE VERDICT OF THE JURY.

It is needless to say that the court next morning was crowded, and numbers were unable to gain admission. The news that Sal Rawlins, who alone could prove the innocence of the prisoner, had been found, and would appear in court that morning, had spread like wildfire, and the acquital of the prisoner was confidently expected by a large number of sympathizing friends, who seemed to have sprung up on all sides, like mushrooms, in a single night.

When the prisoner was brought in a murmur of sympathy ran through the crowded court, so ill-and worn out he looked; but Calton was puzzled to account for the expression of his face, so different from that of a man whose life had been saved, or, rather, was going to be saved, for in truth it was a foregone conclusion.

It was a sublime autumn morning, with the sun breaking—through low mists, when our army began to move to the attack. I was in the artillery service, commanding then, as piece battery. We were moving before daylight, and, penetrating a defile in a line of hills, we debouched into the plain of Balaklava under a glorious sunburst. We could see the enemy's pickets and here and there a mounted vidette retreating before us, and as the fog litted we beheld the smoke of

Our artillery, clearing the pass, parted right and left to form with its 200 pieces a huge crescent with extremities in advance. My battery found position upon the extreme tip of the left spur. Between us the army poured—horse and foot—with a solidity and brilliancy that seemed the attributes of invincibility. Everything moved with speed and precision. We opened in concert along the line a storm of shell under which our huge troops of cavalry quickly formed and rode forward. The assault was well begun, and it was a gorgeous sight to see that great projectile of horse and human flesh, with arms and equipment that flashed with the terror of death, bearing onward. The Turks in the outer trenches fled almost without fire and the horsemen rode over their abandoned works as though or

The advance had been pushed with bloodless success and was about to enter a thin strip of timber at the very foot of the ridge when there appeared, breaking from this cover, two scattered troops of horse. "I was at that door," said Sal, pointing to "an' 'e couldn't 'ave got out unless P seen m."

We concluded that this was a division to cover some serious enterprise and dito cover some serious enterprise and di-rected a close lookout to other quarters. The cavalry had disappeared in a depres-sion in the ground.

THE PITTSBURG DISASTER.

A Four Story Building Blown Down—Many Killed and Injured.

Pritaguac, Pa., Jan. 9.—The most frightful catastrophe that Pittsburg has witnessed for many years occurred at 12.30 o'clock to-day. At that hour a new four story building in Diamond-street fell with a crash which was heard for many squares. The force of the falling building was so great that the rear walls of the two adjoining buildings were crushed as if they had been made of paper and their front walls fell upon the pavement in Wood-street, burying several people in the debrit and manging some horribly. A man, a boy and a girl have been taken to the hospital. A barber shop in the rear was also demolished and its six occupants were buried in the runs. MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.—The following gentlemen were elected to fill the responsible positions as Councillors and School Trustees. The vote for Councillors was as follows:—Mr. Hull, 106; Mr. Henderson, 120; Mr. Lillicrap, 98; Mr. Moore, 131; Mr. Nelson, 196. Mr. Lillicrap, although making a splendid run, was 9 votes short. He took his defeat like a mair and stated if his supporters wished him to stand again next year he would do so. He rather felt encouraged than otherwise. The vote for Trustees was as follows:—Mr. Abbott, 142; Mr. Bullock, 34; Mr. Dench, 161; Mr. Smith, 79; Mr. White, 117. There only being three seats to fill, Messrs. Bullock and Smith drop out. Dr. Bell was called to take the chair, and called on the several candidates for short addresses, after which three cheers for the Queen were given and the meeting broke up.

He Modified His Petition.

I have lately heard of an old minister who had retired from active service, but who still retained his seat in his former pulpit while candidates were preaching there. He always offered the closing prayer, and after asking the Lord to bless his servant who had broken the bread of life to his people that day, was accustomed to add, "and may he shine as a star of the first magnitude forever and ever." But it happened one Sunday that a very dull and ordinary preacher occupied the pulpit, and the good old minister was unutterably bored. When it was time for the prayer he offered the usual petition that the Lord would bless his servant who had addressed the people that day, and—here he paused. His faith was not strong enough to allow him to conclude the sentence in the customary way; so the conscientious old man added firmly, "And may be shine as a star of considerable magnitude forever and ever!"—Boston Transcript.

The Mad Rush for Pleasure.

Only recently have we heard Dr. Richardson's emphatic warning that whatever quickens the action of the heart beyond its natural speed subtracts from that fund of stored vitality which alone can tide us over the crises of life. And undoubtedly the mad rush for so called pleasure is not only responsible for shortened lives; it breeds disappointment as well as disease. The "pursuit of happiness" has set its weary seal on many a face one meets. Now and then, however, the fortunate possessor of an independent mind sturdly refuses to take his pleasures either madly or sadly. He makes money to live rather than lives to make money. His friends are chosen for the delightful quid pro quo of congenial tastes; not upon a carefully adjusted scale of society values.—London Globe.

Ly FERGUS W. HUME.

Ly FERGUS W. HUME.

Senestian Brown, a waiter at the Melbourne club, would be called to prove that on Thursday night a letter was delivered to the prisoner at the club by one Sarah Rawlins, and that the prisoner left the club by one Sarah Rawlins, and that the prisoner left the club by one Sarah Rawlins, and that the prisoner left the club at a cluster of call Sarah Rawlins to prove that she had delivered a note to Sebastian Brown for the prisoner, at the Melbourne club, at a quarter to 12 on Thursday night, and that at a few minutes past 1 o'clock on Friday morning she had conducted the prisoner to a slum off Little Rourte street, and that he was there between 1 and 2 on Friday morning, the hour at which the murder was alleged to have taken place. This being his defense to the charge brought against the prisoner, he would call Albert Dendy.

Albert Dendy, duly sworn, stated:

I am a watchmaker, and carry on business in Fitsroy. I remember Thursday, the 26th of July last. On the evening of that day I called at Fowlett street, East Melbourne, to see my aunt, who is the landlady of the prisoner. She was out at the time I called, and I waited in the kitchen till her return. I looked at the kitchen clock to see if it was too late to wnit, and then at my watch. I found that the clock was ten minutes [ast, upon which I put it right, and regulated it properly.

Calton—At what time did you put it right!

on—At what time did you put it right?

ness—About 8 o'clock, on—Between that time and 2 in the ng, was it possible for the clock to ten minutes?

Itness—No, it was not possible.

Itness—No between 8 and 2 o'clock—the was not long enough.

Itom—Did you see your aunt that night?

itness—Yes, I waited till she came in.

Itom—And did you tell her you had put ock right?

mess—No, I did not; I forgot all t out it, ton—Then she was still under the imon that it was ten minutes fast?

mess—Yes, I suppose so.

rer Dendy had been cross-examined Rolleston was called, and deposed as I am an intimate friend of the prisoner.

Crown Prosecutor—Have you ever seen any such ring in his possession?

Witness—No, Thave seen him buying rings for ladies, but I never saw him with any ring such as a gentleman would wear.

Crown Prosecutor—Not even a seal ring?

Witness—No, not even a seal ring?

Witness—No, not even a seal ring?

Sarah Rawlins was then placed in the witness box, and, after being sworn, deposed:

I know the prisoner. I delivered a letter addressed to him at the Melbourne club, at a quarter to 12 o'clock on Thursday, 20th July.

I did not know what his name was He met me shortly after 1, at the corner of Russell and Bourke streets, where I had been told to wait for him. I took him to my grandourke streets, where I had been told -

Vitness—Cause I sawr the clocks. I left at the corner of Russell street, and comes ra Bourke street, so I could see the post-lee clock as plain as day, an' when I gets of Swanton street, I looks at the town 'all misous like, and see the same time there. They I reseated the of the prisoner the whole time? Vitness—No; there was only one door by the prisoner the whole time?

Witness—No; there was only one door by the room, an' I was a sittin' outside it, an' hen he comes out be falls over me.
Crown Prosecutor—Were you asleep?
Witness—Not a blessed wink.
Calton then directed Sebastian Brown to called, who deposed:
I know the prisoner. He is a member of the Melbourne club, at which I am a waiter, remember Thursday, 20th July. On that ight the last witness came with a letter to se prisoner. It was about a quarter to 12, he just gave it to me, and went away. I slivered it to Mr. Fitzgrald. He left the ub at about ten minutes to 1.
This closed the evidence for the defense, ad after the crown prosecutor had made his seech, in which he pointed out the strongridence against the prisoner, Calton arose to ldress the jury. He was a fine speaker, and made a splendid defense. Not a single oint escaped him, and that brilliant piece of ratory is still remembered and spoken of dmiringly in the purifieus of Temple court and Chancery lang.

SOMETHING IN A NAME.

The (London policeman is nicknamed by the street upchins "bobby." "Cheese it, the cop!" exclaim New York gamins when interrupted by the approach of some minion of the law. "Look out, 'ese comes the bobby, boys," is the language usually employed by mischief making London street arabs when a policeman looms up in their vicinity. There is a difference in these greetings, and the difference is in favor of the New York "cop." The "cop" is a much spryer individual than the "bobby," as the name would imply.

When the dynamite scare raged in Londo lowed to pass into the abley. The spec-cle of an officer of the law exhuming greasy-ickages of sandwiches, cake and pastry om the recesses of the capacious basket of ome thrifty farmer's wife in order to dis-mented the sandy of the same of the same "You don't really expect to find any dyna-tic that way, do you?" "Come, now, move on, move on," said a policeman in tones of gentle exhortation.

"Why in thunder don't you arrest the brute? I asked the policeman.

"Well, I, don't like to do that. He might have some of his pals about and I might get hurf," the policeman replied.

After some further exhortation the brute was induced to move on, protesting, however, that he could lick all creation, and especially that portion of it that were policements uniforms. He had not gone far when he fell foul of a companion, who was merely trying to get him home, and kicked him and belabored him unmercifully. Still the policeman merely exhorted him mildly to "move-on!"

The feelings of a costermonger at length got the better of him and he exclaimed, "Blast my bleeding heyes, hif I don't ave a go at you myself. Put hup your dukes now." The Irishman ran off at a great rate, but it was the costermonger, and not the policeman, who had put him to rout.—New York Herald.

man, who had put him to rout.—New York Herald.

Prance Difficult to Tune.

In tuning planos I find most of them easy to put in good shape, but there are some very difficult to tune. The reason of this is the improper ratio in the length of the strings, which, to give perfect harmony, must have a regularity of length and thickness. This is especially required in the sharps. I remember a peculiarly striking instance, which will show why some pianos always sound like tin pans. The firm I was with had brought into the house an old piano. One afternoon, not having anything to do, I tuned it. After I had put every note into the proper pitch, I found that the harmony had gone to pot, and I could not get a decent tune out of the keys. Then I had to tune it all over for harmony, and let individual notes take care of them-selves. The next afternoon the other tuner for the house, without thinking about the harmony, struck a few notes on the piano and found the strings out of tune, just as I had done. He started in to put the instrument into shape. He then found the harmony lacking, and had to tune the old thing over again. The ratio of length of the strings had not been preserved in the manufacture. Many of the cheap pianos of the present day are defective in this respect, and will never remain long in tune.—H. A. Nichaus in Globs, Democrat.

on a charge or assauting one of the Knights. In disposing of the case the Justice said:

"I may as well state right here that I don't believe in the Knights of Labor. I hold that every man has the right to employ whom he sees fit without any dictation from organized labor. The old plan of demand and production is the best in my opinion. I look on the boycott of Barton as a conspiracy, and if the instigators are brought before me I will settle their cases."

This was too much for the Knights of Labor here, and they have adopted resolutions to this effect:

"That we, as a body of law-abiding citizens, strongly criticise the unmerited remarks of our most honorable Justice. That all organized labor of Syracuse and vicinity do in the future as well as the present bear in mind the injustice of the remarks against organized labor. That a copy of these resolutions be placed on fib by each organization to be held for future remembrance of our most honorable Justice."

Given a Chance to Reform.

HAMILTON, Jan. II.—Hattie Beeby and Margaret Gilbert, the girls who were arrested by Constable Hawkins as they were coming out of an hotel on Start-street, were very repentant as they sat in the dock at the Police Court this morning. Chief McKinnon, Mr. Cahill and the parents of the girls have had several conversations with them and they promised to be better girls hereafter. The magistrate decided to give them an opportunity to reform, and, discharged them. The unfortunate girls wept bitterly and left the court with their parents.

Hamilton, Jan. 11.—A meeting of the institute was held in the Foresters' Hall this afternoon, and it is the intention to costlane the meeting to-morrow. John Fothergill, vice-president, Burlington, was chairman, and in his opening address regretted the small attendance. The program for this afternoon included an address by John McMillan, M. Alexander Lalonde of Morrisburg was discharged by Judge Desnoyers to-day on the ground that the alleged false pretences in obtaining goods from Slater & Co. were too remote from the transaction.

Wm. Keys, who presented himself as a Labor candidate in Montreal West, was arrested this afternoon on a warrant sworn out by Lepage of Outcemont, charging him with obtaining money under false pretences in not turning over the proceeds he received for the sale of some machinery. Keys denied the charge and was released on his own personal bail.

LONDOS, Jan. 11.—Thomas A. Richardson, British representative of R. G. Dun & Co., whose London office is a resort for Canadian commercial men and who is well known to all Canadian buyers and importers, was married to-day at St. Augustine's Church, Highbury, to Miss Annie Gordon Ayces. After the wedding breakfast to sixty guests at Highbury Athenceum the bridal party left for Devonshire, where the honeymoon will be spent. Numerous cablegrams and valuable presents from friends in the United States and Canada testified to the esteen in which Mr. Richardson is held in America.

Please accept my kind thanks for your very liberal patronage during the three years have been in Peterborough, and I hope by strict attention to business to still merit your confidence. wenged, are condemned to solitary confinement for six months, at the end of which time they are put to a sledge with other dogs, and being extremely shy and frightened withal, they run as fast as they can until they become blown and cowed.

After whis trial trip they are remanded to their più where they remain off and on until they are thoroughly trained and sledge broken. This severe education sours their temper amazingty, and makes them anything but companionshie. Drivers are frequently obliged to atun them by a blow on the nose before unharmessing them on account of their savage nature. Besides drawing sledges they tow boats up rivers in summer and keep their masters warm in winter nights. They are remarkable weather prophets, and discount the signal service bureau, for if, when resting on a journey, they dig holes in the snow, there is certain to be a storm. They are of the husky type, shaggy, with erect curling bushy tails, and not very sharp noses and ears. They live exclusively on fish, which they care the for themselves. In winter their ration comprises forty frozen herrings per day. Powest analystican.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger airpassages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, peumodia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. Allought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else hae failed you you may depend upon this for certain.

Education in Greece.

The outlook for higher education in Greece is flattering. The great base of the pyramid, popular education, is solidly laid, and soon the superstructure can, be carried to its completion. The public debt is so enormous that for the present the government cannot greatly extend its aid, but private munificance continues to pour forth, and the time will come when all Greek speaking peoples shall have become one nation, and Athens will one more take her old place as the educational center of the Levant. Her quiet heademic shades will be far better suited to scholarly pursuits than the whirl of traffic is

MONDAY, JANUARY 14, 1889. PROVINCIAL ELECTIONS.

THE chief Liberal organ reminds us that it is Mr. Mowat's intention to dissolve the Provincial Legislature this year. It does so in a round about way, but none the less that the following language.

as soon after the close of next session as possible."

The Globe is not recognized as an organ of the Dominion Government. We do not think that Sir John Macdonald or his colleagues are in the habit of giving it information in advance of giving it to the press generally. But Mr. Mowat does do so, and if the Globe had used Mr. Mowat's name instead of Sir John's in the paragraph quoted we believe it would have stated the truth. It will be remembered that prior to the last Provincial elections the Globe sang the same time. The Liberals were urged to be prepared for the elections that Sir John was about to epring upon them. The Liberals heeded the warnings given by the Globe and other organs of the party, selected and diates and organized for the tray. When they were ready the Globe announced that the Ontario Legislature was dissolved and the elections for that House followed at once. The Mowat Government gained an advantage because its party was better organized for the contest and it would be pleased to obtain a similar advantage. The Globe further says.—

"It is improbable that he will dare to go to the country on three year-old voters' lists. They cannot be revised before the and of eight or nine months from now."

BOMBARDMENT

Another startling upheaval in Ready-made Clothing, Gents Furnishings and Boots and Shoes has commenced in our two Big Stores, No. 377 and 379 George-st. The dividing wall has to come tumbling down, and other improvements made, so that the Prices of Goods must suffer another Sweeping Reduction, in order to clear them out of the road.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger airpassages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are elogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Byrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. BOMBARDMEN

Another startling upheaval in Ready-made Clothing, Gents Furnishings and Boots and Shoes has commenced in our two Big Stores, No. 377 and 379 George-st. The dividing wall has to come tumbling down, and other improvements made, so that the Prices of Goods must suffer another Sweeping Reduction, in order to clear them out of the road.

"I called at Mr. Barker's studio upon his invitation to see his great picture, just finished, of George Washington cutting down the cherry tree with his hatchet. Mr. Barker was expecting to sell it for $10,000. He asked me what I thought of it, and after I had pointed out his mistake in turning the head of the hatchet round so that George was cutting the tree down with the hammer end I asked him why he had foreshortened George's leg so as to make it look as if his left foot was upon the mountain on the other side of the river."

In Love with a Plaster Cast.

The story of Endymion is more than paralleled by a case that occurred recently in Paris. Eugene Bloc, a lad of 14 years, fell in love with a plaster cast of Venus in his father's house, and would stand gazing at it for hours. His father found that it caused him to neglect his studies, and so, in a rage, broke up the image. Eugene went to his room, twisted a sheet about his neck and scrangled himself. It was a genuine case of falling inlove with an ideal.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The board schools in London employ about 4,600 teachers, while the church schools, esdowed schools and private schools employ 4,000 more, and there are 8,000 governesses teaching in families. Ly PERGUS W. HUME. along were scattered lounging chairs of sket work, with rugs, novels, empty soda stles and all the other evidences that Mr. stilby's guests had been wise and stayed, ide during the noonday heat. Madge was tad in one of these comfortable chairs and ber of clean sand and gravel which time and spring freshets have brought down the creek and anchored here. Almost immediately feathers began to rise from a spot about three yards out from shore, and the clear water became tinged in that place with a bloody streak. As the skiff draw near to the troubled point we could clearly make out the form of a turtle anchored upon the sand about three feet below the surface, and sheltered from the force of the current by a ledge of limestone. His shell looked about two feet long by a foot and a half in breadth. He held the body of the mallard under him while he tere its neck and breast with his hooked jaws, working with the eagerness of a vulture and much the same general action, in his feast upon the warm body of the drake, as that bird displays when greedily tearing a piece of carrion of which he expects shortly to be dispossessed.

"They will plant themselves in the mud on the bottom of the river near shore, those big fellows will," said Henry, "with their heads just peoping out of their shells, and in the course of half as hour the current has dusted them with mud and leaves and bits of drift, until a sunfash can't tell them from a rock to save his soul, and so be floats down that way, with one eye looking out for danger and the other for grub, and all at once something darts cuts from that muddy rock and catches the sunfash by the side or the back or the head or the side of the draw and whatever it catches him, so long as it takes in a good mouthful, because that thing that has darted out is a susppling turlie's head, and whatever it catches it keeps. Then the turle tucks the fish under him, just as he has the mallard there, and tears and awallows like a hungry lion.

"He will eat catfish and snakes, and almost land is enough to make a horse laugh. This cone lifted his head and his tall as high in the air as he could get them, and then, raising himself on the tipe of his toes, he struggled along for a few yards, when all at once his strength gave out and down he came kerplunk. Whenever a grasshopper would elight within reach of his head out would go his beak, and before the hopper knew what his him it would be his meat. But this ain't catching turtles, is fif.

He placed one of the pea like bullets in the little rifle's breach, and laying the gun to his shoulder sighted along its octagonal barrel. Instead of pointing toward the snapper the gun's mussle bore on a floating object about the size of a man's thumb which was rapidly appreaching us from above. With the report of the gun's mussle bore on a floating object about the size of a man's thumb which was rapidly appreaching us from above. With the report of the gun's mussle bore on a floating object about the size of a man's than a minute the current her object disappeared, and then, grasping the scoop, Henry leaned eagerly over the skiff's side and looked down into the water. In less than a minute the current brought with it the body of a second turtle smaller than the first, which Henry dexterously scooped in as it was being half borne by the current and half propelled by its own dying exartions down the stream. The bullet had crushed its skull while it was swimming, as is the fashion of many inland turtles, with nothing but the tip of its head above water. "Work, then, for the deak start." I want to take him alw, if I can, as there is not much market for dead turtles, the dealers not carring to take the risk of having stock spoil on their bands, when it can be kept in a tank for six months,

LONDON GOSSIP. The Coming Seasten of Parliament—Mr. W. B. Smith to Resume His Position. LONDON, Jan. 16.—The Prince of Wales and the Prime Minister have been correasonding regarding the position of the sidest son of the heir-appasent. What negotiations have been made no one quite knows, but when Parliament meets it is expected that the announcement will be made to marry an application will be made to Parliament for an allowance for him. The ministry has decided that the estimates shall be taken up as soon as parliament motome to such declain, but a good deal is going on now that may just a little intertere with its being carried out. It seems highly probable that before parliament meets Messra William O'Brien, Condon, Cox, Tanner, Long, John O'Connor and Sheehy will be in jail, while Messra. E. Harrington and Finucane are already there. It must be a very sanguine minister who supposes that Mr. Balfour will be able to make this wide sweep of the net without remonstrance. The debate on the address newadays is generally good for three working weeks, even when nothing unusual has happened. It is sourcely likely to take much less this year, when the imprilionment of seven or eight messbers of parliament during recess will have NERVOUS LONDON GOSSIP

A Handsome Collection.

Dr. Coughlan received on Saturday last, says the Hastings Star, a very handsome collection of stuffed birds from Peterborough. The collection embraces a duck and drake of the "goosander" species, a large hawk, a spruce partridge, an ordinary partridge, a "barred" owl, woodpeckers, etc. He has a very large eagle in the hands of the taxidermist. Mr. Elcome, of Peterborough, prepared the birds, which are a credit to that gentleman's skill.

Sent to Jail by a Mouse.

For a year or so the proprietors of the Capital hotel have been aware that money was disappearing in small quantities, which was a source of great annoyance. Finally a trusted employe was discovered in the act of abstracting a small amount of his employed funds which had been taken in through the office. He was at once accused of having secured a considerable amount, aggregating in the neighborhood of several hundred dollars, and ultimately apprehended for the theft. He confessed to petit larceny, which was all that could be proved against him, and as stoutly maintained his innocence in excess of the amount he had confessed to taking.

Circumstances, however, were against him, and he paid the penalty. The matter was settled satisfactorily, perhaps, and he left the state. A day or two ago the eash drawer was found to be short of a balance in the sum of $95. A careful review of the entries revealed no remedy, and the proprietors were puzzled to account for the shortage. Finally the cash drawer was removed from its position and a large sized hole discovered through which rate or mice had gained an entrance into the money drawer. Further search revealed underneath the counter top, which was built of papers taken from the drawer. In addition to this, the nest was lined with three $5 bills and one $10 bill, balanced the account with the cash associations of his family. Just before his clease from prison last January the wife again wrote to Bart, begging him to return nome and lead an honest life. To this he returned a cruel reply, saying he wanted aothing more to do with her.

It will be remembered that Black Bart's robberies were the despair of the detectives for about seven years. The man had a positive genius for cluding pursuit and for roncealing all traces of his identity. Before ac was finally captured he had robbed thirty-one stages. From none of these did he seeme less than $300 or $400, while from inversal he cleaned up between $5000 and $6000. EOPIDE ANAMIA ieveral he cleaned up between $5000 $6000. His method was to always do the busin thou, and to the f-ot that he did not drind had no confid its the police ascribe scape from arrest. He used a pair sowerful field-glasses, by which he con iis tinginish a stage a long distance. In the way he made out whether a shorigun mit engger was seated by the driver. If the river was alone Bart slipped on a gunny ack mask that covered his face and most his person, and, Winchester in hand alted the stage. He always made the assengers get out and hold up their hands a line. Then he robbed them of all their ioney and valuables. Occasionally, when female passenger was on board, he politereturned her the jewelry she were and me of her money. Then he would attack we mail pouches and the express box, rifling him with great detterity. He only allow the stage to proceed when he was ready self to carry away his plunder. It bete his habit to pin the terrified express a bit of paper containing a satirical exitenting the detectives and signed to the street of the carry and signed the first her post.

The detectives in time secured a good deription of him, but it did not seem to aid county one of his shirt' cuffs. This bore a aundry mark, and the detectives finally ocated the laundry in this city. They found the mark had been placed on the clothing of one C. E. Bolles, who was regarded as a mining man. They located Bolles, searchsh his trunk and found convincing proof of his guilt. He was convicted, and bemuse he gave up bullion valued at $3,000

Bal complied, and Madge locked out on the brilliant flower beds, and at the black shadow of the tall witch elm which grew on one side of the lawn. She wanted to ask a certain question of Sal, and did not know how to do it. The moodiness and irritability of Brian had troubled her very much of late, and, with the quick instinct of her sex, she ascribed is indirectly to the woman who had died in the back slum. Anxious to share his troubles and lighten his burden, she determined to ask Sal about this mysterious woman, and find out, if possible, what secret had been told to Brian, which affected him seederly.

"About-about that?"
Madge nodded.
She hesitated for a moment, and then finns herself at the feet of her mistress.
"I will tell you," she cried. "You have been kind to me, an' have a right to know. I will tell you all I know."
"Then," asked Madge, firmly, as she clasped her hands tightly together, "who was this woman whom Mr. Fitzgerald went to see, and where did she come from?"
"Gran' an' me found her one evenin' in stilled Boutes street," answered Sal, "just near the theatre. She was quite drunk an' we took her home with us."
"How kind of you," said Madge "Oh, it wasn't that," replied the other dryly. "Gran' wanted her clothes; she was awful swell dressed."
"And she took the clothes—how wicked?"
"Any one would have done it down our way," answered Sal, indifferently; "but Gran' changed her mind when she got her home. I went out to get some gin for Gran', and when I came hack she was huggin' and kissin' the woman."
"She recognized her?"
"Yes, I a'pose so," replied Sal, "an' next-mersits", when the lady on source, she male bold stage robberies in the northern part of the State by a lone highwayman has been teared up by special Detective Hume, of the Wells-Fargo Express Company, who as proof that these crimes were all the work of one man, the notorious "Black Bart," who was released from the State orison only last January, after zerving a seven years' sentence for stage robbery, run-

t fright reform the man to renew the old associations of his family. Just before his release from prison last January the wife again wrote to Bart, begging him to return nome and lead an honest life. To this he returned a cruel reply, saying, he wanted nothing more to do with her.

It will be remembered that Black Bart's robberies were the despair of the detectives for about seven years. The man had a positive genius for cluding pursuit and for concealing all traces of his identity. Before ne was finally captured he had robbed hirty-one stages. From none of these did he scenre less than $300 or $400, while from everal he cleaned up between $5000 and $6000.

inch had no confidants the police ascribe his incape from arrest. He used a pair of coverful field glasses, by which he could listinguish a stage a long distance. In this way he made out whether a shotgun mesionger was scated by the driver. If the driver was alone Bart slipped on a gunny-sack mask that covered his face and most of his person, and, Winchester in hand, nalted the stage. He always made the caseingers get out and hold up their hands in line. Then he robbed them of all their money and valuables. Occasionally, when a female passenger was on board, he politically remarked her the jewelry she wore and some of her money. Then he would attack the mail pouches and the express box, rilling them with great dexterity. He only allowed the stage to proceed when he was ready simself to carry away his plunder. It became his habit to pin the refined express on a bit of paper containing a satirical cerse, ridiculing the detectives and signed "Black Bart the Pos."

The detachives in time secured a good description of him, but it did not seen to ald been in the search. Alshomet the subdetach.

Judging by the number of knots it makes, the fleetest ship affect is courtship.

"Mrs. Smith holds her age remarkably well." "She holds her tongue about it, if that's what you mean."

When we see a man wear the same silk hat continuously for four years we begin to get at an idea of what it is to work like a beaver.

Deficit under Certain Conditions.

Deficit in this city: "All cars mitirely of foreign build loaded and coming west through Canada from a United States point must be held and reported to this office. East bound loaded cars of foeeign make, when manifested to Suspension Bridge or beyond, will be allowed to proceed, but the car number, marks and destination must be reported at this office. American built cars on which foreign repairs have been made will not be interfered with. When any part of a car is shown to have been made in Canada and there are no marks to indicate that the other parts were made in the United States it will be considered a foreign built car for the purposes of this circular. L. A. Brant, Deputy Collector."

The reason for this order arose about a month ago when a number of new Canadian Pacific cars of Canadian build came from Canada empty and passed through Detroit to western points. Inquiries were made at the Michigan Central offices as to the character of trade they were to be laden at Chicago for points in Canada. It transpired subsequently that a portion of them were laden at Chicago for New York, points. Collector Campau then notified the Treasury Department of this fact, and asked for instructions. The department in reply said if these cars were brought in for the express purpose of being used between United States points via Canadian territory they were liable to seizure wherever found. But in the absence of satisfactory evidence that these illegal importations were intentional the proper course would be to demand payment of duty from the railway officials on all cars so used.

We desire to extend to our Myriads of Patrons, far and near, the Compliments of this Merry Holiday Season, and to wish them, one and all, Many Happy Returns.

We also desire to say that the Laurels we have won during 1888 for Cheap Goods, will be retained during 1889 if Low Prices count for anything. For this reason the Sale of the SHEPPARD BANKRUPT STOCK will be continued, with the determination to offer still Greater Bargains in Dry Goods, Carpets, Clothing, etc., at Sheppard's Old Stand, Opera House Block.

Another startling upheaval in Ready-made Clothing, Gents Furnishings and Boots and Shoes has commenced in our two Big Stores, No. 377 and 379 George-st. The dividing wall has to come tumbling down, and other improvements made, so that the Prices of Goods must suffer another Sweeping Reduction, in order to clear them out of the road.

Council sincerely regrots that the corpera-tion is about to lose the services of the three Councilions for No. Three Ward-Messrs. vices to the town in various capacities as Counciliors." Councilior Cahill followed the resolution with a few flattering words in reference to the retiring representatives of No. I ree Ward, speaking highly of their man, services to the town and stating that they would be missed in the Council of the coming year, although he did not wish to speak disparagingly of the new members.

Councilior Moders said he must thank the mover and seconder and all members of the Council for their kind and flattering expressions. He spoke of the pleasant relations that had always existed between himself and all the other members of the Councilior Moders and he felt some regret at leaving that body. Had he remained for another year there were some important matters which he had intended to bring up on matter which he had intended to bring up on matter which he had always existed between the sound stated this council and between the d. P. E. spur and the land, lying along the bed of the river. The town should endeavor to do this as it would eve them a splendid market place and enable them to dispose of the market square. This was a matter which he thought should receive the attention of the next Council. Another matter was the great importance of endeavoring to induce industries and capital to some to fee town. He did not think the town would increase unless a large amount of capital was brought here. He pointed out the danger that might arise from the competition of Norweed, Lakefield and other neighboring towns which were getting railways and were ambitious to become towns. He hoped that by 1835 they would have a good man to fill used on the he year ending the felt some regret, yet personally he felt some regre company.

THE TWO OTHERS SPEAK.

Councilior YERLAND thanked the Council for the manner it had expressed itself. He had always tried to do his duty, and though he might not have done as much as he could wish, he could say he had always dealt fearlessly and hobestly with all matters and given a fair and open vote every time. He parted with them all good friends, and he might say he voted for every member round the board to come back here another year, he any ward where he had a vote. He regretted that Mr Moore was going out, but he hoped that No. Three would hold its own this year.

Councillor Douglas replied briefly to the resolution, thanking the Council for their kind expressions. He had always done everything conscientiously and above board. He said he had thought as he was the oldest man in the Council, except the Mayor, that he might give others a chance

Councillor Moons objected to the passing of such a matter entalling so much expense at the close of the year, as he did not think that tabled, 420 yards, total cost on streets.

Mr. Hugh Davidson in seconding the adolytion of the Auditor's report, thought that they were several items in the report which commended themselves to the meeting. He thought the Society should own the grounds and this would be a good time to discuss the matter.

The President was asked what he thought the grounds would cost, and the reply was that the Society could purchase it at $500 per acret.

Secretary Collins said their lease did not expire for five years yet, and at the expiration of that time they had either to tuy it or it would go back to the owner with the buildings. They had been paying only $100 rent, and would now have to pay $150, which was a low rate of interest on their money.

The 'question as to whether the town and county councils would sestist in buying the grounds was discussed, and the advisibility of waiting on the Councils was enggested,

The report was adopted.

THE R. M. C. GRADUATES. THEIR MILITARY KNOWLEDGE GAINS

OTTAWA, Jan. 17.—Colonel Panet, Deputy Minister of Militia, has had advices from England stating that the authorities are extremely well satisfied with the military knowledge possessed by the graduates of the Royal Military College who received commissions last year. In consequence of this the graduates are absolved from entering upon certain initiatory studies, which they would otherwise have been obliged to go through. Colonel Panet's son is one of the graduates and holds a commission in the Royal Engineers.

Ingentous Pipe-Iron Machinery.

Sharon, Penn., Jan, 18.—Probably the most marvellous hydraulic machinery in the world was placed in operation in the Weatland Rolling Mill yesterday. It is the invention of Mr. Mattocks of Pittaburg, and is designed for rolling pipe-iron. Huge slabs of iron weighing hundreds of pounds were pulled from a furnace, glowing at white heat, and placed on a long iron bed which moved forward, upward, downward and sideways, pushing the mass through rolls, back again, and stopping only when it had been reduced to the proper size in the shape of pipe-iron. The whole operation required the attendance of only one or two employes, who controlled the machinary by a few simple levers. The saving in abor is in the proportion of sixteen to one.

DELANEY'S EVIDENCE BEFORE THE PARNELL COMMISSION.

The Report of Hismarck's Illuress Benied

A Bit of Gossip From London.

PARIS, Jan. 17.—"Poor Homans!" That was the heartfelt utterance of every one among the crowd of mourners which filled the American church yesterday when the full choir of men and boys chanted the American church yesterday when the full choir of men and boys chanted the American church yesterday when the full choir of men and boys chanted the solemn service for the burial of the dead. From his leng residence in France and his important position as European manager of the New York Life Insurance Company, Mr. Homans had been honored with numerous decorations which were displayed upon a cushion. Eight years ago Mr. Homans married his second wife. She was from New Orleams, and was then in the full splendor of her southern beauty. To-day she is about 35 years old, and is still a handsome woman. She became a second mother to his three children, two sons and a daughter, and she also had a daughter of her own by a former marriage. It is the subsequent perfldy of this heartless creature that brought the mournful gathering to the little American church yesterday.

Some time after the couple came to Paris scandalous reports concerning the wife's conduct were current, but Homans turned a deaf ear to them. Soms three months ago the bubble burst, the crash came, the billnd man's eyes were opened, his home was wrecked, and his noble heart was broken. It happened as Aix-lessains. There was an Italian nobleman in the case. Some say he was a prince. Mr. Homans, who was his friend, had received him at his table and had trusted him. One day toward the end of September an accident revealed the whole truth. Mrs. Homans had gone back to Paris, professedly to arrange her hotel for the winter season. The prince had gone to Geneva, so he said, but he had covered his tracks badly. An indiscreet concierge revealed to the astonished him at his table and had trusted him. One day toward the end of September an accident revealed the whole truth. Mrs. Homans spent the night in the Saint Leare prison. Mr. Homans spent the night in the Saint Lear tive that he had often seen Davitt in company with Dan Curley, although he could not fix dates.

Re-examined with reference to the funds of the Fenians, he stated that until 1879 the party was without money other than the few pence weekly subscribed by members. Some pawned their watches to send the invincibles were organized, obtained funds from the League and started business as a contractor.

attention was one from Davitt to Harris, written in New York, in which Davitt said:
"Perhaps you are not aware that John O'Leary is here. He came from Paris to upset my Land feague endeavors. He will go back a wiser though a sadder man. He is supported by nobody saving the few bosthoons following that blatant ass, Rossa. The nationalists on this side are commonsense men. O'Leary failed to get up a crusade against the League in America. Rossa is now trying his hand. He will schieve more success upon your side than upon this. He is a cowardly, low ruffian, who has not the courage to resent an insult I offered him in The Herald. He has not sufficient courage to set fire to a British haystack. Do your utmost to keep the people within bounds."

Justice Hannen asked if the letters of Mr. Parnell would be shown to the Parnellite counsel, as the court seemed to be within a reasonable distance of getting at them. Attorney-General Webster refused to be pinned to a definite time for the production of the letters. Justice Hannen then expressed the opinion that both sides should show the letters in their possession intended to be used for comparison.

Stanley's Letter.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Concerning Stanley's letter to Tippoo Tib, Sir Francis De JVinton says it-merely confirms the explorer's previous despatches and furnishes little additional information. He expects that further-reports from Stanley will shortly be forthcoming. A great deal of speculation is rife as to why the letter to Tippoo Tib was forwarded to Brussels and the other despatches from Stanley will shortly be forthcoming. LONDON, Jan. 17.—The resignation of Capt. Lord William Cecil, sou of Lord Salisbury, from the Grenadier Guards has caused a great stir in military circles. No reason for the resignation was given to the public, but it is asserted that his with drawal was due to a fist fight which His Lordship recently had with a brother officer at the Knightsbridge barracks. From the reports in circulation it is gathered that Lord Cecil got very much the worst of the encounter and besides receiving two blackoned eyes sustained other injuries at the hands of his antagonist which will necessitate his retirement from public view for some time

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 18.—The negro, George Meadows, was hanged at Prath Mines yesterday morning by a mob of quieb but determined men who had him in charge all the previous day and night. While Mrs. Kellam, his viotim, was almost positive in her identification, she still asked the mob not to hang him, as she might possibly be mistaken. There is little doubt that this was because she shrank from the responsibility of saying what she knew would cause certain death, and the mob so regarded it. It was proved at the coroner's inquest that Meadows had previously criminally assaulted a negro girl, and the crowd decided that this solved what little doubt there was. They swung him and fiddled his body with bullets. He protested his innocence to the last.

Respecting the tax to be imposed upon immigrants the committee was not unanimous, but the majority finally agreed upon a tax of $5 with a view to excluding paupers. REFERENCE to increases in the expenditure of the Dominion the Montreal Gazette says that the causes producing these several increases will readily occur to the reader. The increased number of courts and judges have necessarily entailed heavier charges on the treasury; the bounty to fishermen and the maintenance of ty to fishermen and the maintenance of the protective fleet since the abrogation of the fishery clauses of the Washington treaty, have caused a larger expenditure for the fisheries; the settlement of the Northwest and the extinction of the buffalo have involved much greater responsibili-ties upon the Government for the care of the Indians and the preservation of peace in the Northwest; the construction of post offices, customs houses, harbor and river improvements, etc., have produced the larger outlay upon public works, and the organization of a permanent militia force accounts for the new expenditure in that department. An examination of the expenditure in detail will, therefore, disclose the unfairness of attributing to extravag-ance or mismanagement the increase which has occurred since 1879, and will show, moreover, that a great part of that increase imposes no charge on the treasury and through it on the people.

GATHERING INFORMATION.

A very successful meeting of the Farmers' Institute of East Northumberland was held at Warkworth on Monday and Tuesday, 14th and 15th of January.

The President opened the meeting by telling the object of the Institute, and was followed by Mr. Nicoll, who read a paper on farm-yard manure. This paper was thoroughly discussed by Messrs. R. Honey, McCrea and F. Birdsall.

Mr. Morton spoke on corn raising, Mr. Scott also compared corn with turnips and tried to show it was better for cattle than turnips.

tried to show it was better for cattle than turnips.

Mr. Birdsall read a paper on silos and onsilage. He was a believer in curing corn by means of the silo. He thought every man should build a silo. He did not altogether agree with Mr. Scott, that is, he would not advise every one to give up growing turnips, as soon as they built a slo, but would raise both turnips and corn. He described his silo and how much it cost him to build, viz., $57.65. Ensliage cost $1.75 a ton in the silo. The corn turned out $1.75 a ton in the silo. By a Seche in Court.

Chicago, Jan. 17.—The stories of the horrors suffered by unfortunate girls in the lance house stockades in Northern Wiscontin were recalled by a scene in the court of insane inquiry this morning. A slight and andsome young girl, dressed in black, was led in. Hattie Nathan was her name, so the doctor told Judge Prendergast. He said her ailment was acute manis. As he moke the prisoner glanced behind her and howered in her chains, muttering: "Save ne, they are after me! I hear them barking and the men are right behind them!"

Hattie Nathan was the daughter of parents who live in Oconto, Wis. She was a wayward girl and got into trouble which resulting in her entering one of the dens near. Marinette. She soon realized the horrors of her position, and made repeated but unsuccessful attempts to escape, with the result hat she became demented. Then she was cleased.

She next appeared at the door of a house till every the contract of the contract

She next appeared at the door of a house of ill-repute in this city and was cared for. She has remained there since, being rational a portion of the time. Of late her dementia has been more acute, and the result was taday's proceedings. She will be sent back to her home in Oconto.

letter will appear in The New Mississippian. A copy was handed to-night to a correspondent of the Associated Press:

"Shagulak, Miss., Jan. 16.—Editor New Mississippian, Jackson, Miss. Dear sir. I sent you actelegram this morning giving you a short account of what is going on in the northern part of Noxubee. Had previously written the Governor on the same subject. I am not a sensationalist, but when a mob composed of the most depraved and irresponsible part of our community can rob and plunder defenceless women and children and drive them from their homes, carrying on their barbarous work for three weeks without check or hindrence, it is time that some one take the initiative, and I appeal to those who are high in authority and have been entrusted by the law with the preservation of our lives and property. Crimes have been committed that the outside world have not dreamed of.

"As I telegraphed you to-day over 40 families, by actual count, have been driven from their homes. Many of these families by years of industry and economy have paid for their lands and had stock and supplies sufficient to make crops. These people have committed no crime, unless indeed it is a crime to be born black. No charge has ever been made against them. Three families who sent to me yesterday for protection have been notified to leave within five days. One woman has a child 11 days old and another a child about three weeks old. Their limit will expire to-morrow. They are now rushing through mud and rain, hauling the corn-meal and bedding and household furniture to save them from the vandals.

It is time that the press of the state should be aroused. We have been criminally negligent in permitting these outrages to go on almost at our doors without giving any notice to the outside world. I am perhaps not competent to judge but it does seem to me that the Governor of the State ought to place these people back on their farms and protect them there in the enjoyment of the fruits of their labor and the conforts of their homes. Chamberlan.

CHARLESTON, S.C., Jan. 17.—About a month ago Butler Banks of Newberry County was shot and suspicion pointed to James C. Banks as his assailant. Saturday week Butler Banks lay in the for James C., and taking deliberate aim with a shot gan fired at his supposed assailant wounding him in four places. James Banks implored Butler, who is not a relative though of the same name, to desist but he later fired the second barrel of his shotgun and also the contents of a pistol at James. James is in a dangerous condition. Butler Banks escaped.

Some Facts About Wheat. mr. F. Birdsail said that Mr. Scott need not have sent all the way to the States for a newspaper to find out how to build a silo. He might have read the Canadian Live Stock Journal and left his money in the country.

Mr. Carlow, the President of the Inetitute, believed there were only three silos between Warkworth and Toronto, and the men that owned them were present. He was a believer in the silo.

Mr. McCrea, of Brockville, spoke on the Dairy Cow." He raised Holstein cattle and by the way he talked he tried to beom them. His cows averaged 7,000 bbs. of milk a year.

The meeting adjourned until 7 o'clock. The Town Hall was crowded by enthusiastic people, the audience numbering about 700. The President called on Mr. The meeting adjourned until 7 o'clock. He would sooner have Moabitish government than that of the uncivilized Turk. The streets were exceedingly narrow, and at night a person had to carry a lantern. Dust cleaned out of houses was not carted away by scavengers, but thrown on the street. The government oppressed those who possessed riches to such an extent that the people were indolent. About forty-five ladies and gentlemen sat down to an elaborate supper at the priests' residence after which an adjournment was made to the palace, where the evening was happily spent with songs, recitations, addresses, etc. A very pleasant time was spent both by the entertainers and their guests, and at the close the thanks of the latter were conveyed to the former by a few words of kind regard.

Brian nad not seen Mark Frettlby for some Brian nad Not Seen Mark Frettlby for some time, and was astonished at the change which had taken place in his appearance. Formerly, he had been as straight as an arrow, with a stern, fresh colored face; but now he had a slight stoop, and his face looked old and withered. His thick, black hair was streaked here and there with white, and the only thing unchanged about him were his eyes, which were as keen and bright as ever. Hennembering how old his own face looked, and how altered Madge was, now seeing her father, he wondered if this sudden change was traceable to the same source, namely, was traceable to the same source, namely. rather, he wondered it this studies change was traceable to the same source, namely, the murder of Oliver Whyte. Mr. Frettlby's face looked sad and thoughtful as he came along, but, catching sight of his daughter, a smile of affection broke over it.

"My dear Fitzgerald," he said, holding out his hand; "this is indeed a surprise! When did you come over?"

"Ah! that's right," said the other, putting his arm round his daughter's waist. "So that's what has brought the roses to your face, young lady?" he went on, pinching her cheek playfully. "You will stay to dinner, of course, Fitzgerald?"
"Thank you, no!" answered Brian, hastily, "my dress".

"Nonsense," interrupted Frettlby, hospit-ably; "weare not in Melbourne, and I am eure Madge will excuse your dress. You must star."

"Very well," he said, in a low voice; "I will stay."

"And now," said Frettlby, in a brisk tone, as he sat down, "the important question of dinner being settled, what is it you want to see me about? Your station?"

"No!" answered Brian, leaning against the veranda post, while Madge slipped her hand through his arm, "I have sold it."

"Sold it!" echoed Frettlby, aghast. "What for!"

"I felt restless and wanted a change."
"Ah! a rolling stone," said the millionaire, shaking his head, "gathers no moss, you know."

"Oh, indeed!" said the

"Oh, indeed?" said the millionaire, in a joking tone. "And may I ask what is your propelling förce?"

Brian looked at the old man's face with such a steady gaze that the latter's eyes dropped after an uneasy attempt to return it. "Well," he said impatiently, looking at the two tail young people standing before him, "what do you want to see me about?"

"Madge has agreed to marry me at once and I want your consent."

"Impossible?" said Frettlby, curtly.

"There is no such word as impossible," retorted Brian coolly, thinking of the famous remark in "Richellen." "Why should you refuse? I am rich now."

fuse! I am rich now."
"Pahaw!" said Frettiby, rising impatiently.
"Pahaw!" said Frettiby, rising impatiently.
"It's not money I'm thinking about—I've got enough for both of you; but I cannot live without Madge."
"Then come with us!" said the daughter,

"Then come with us!"

"Then come with us?"

Her lover, however, did not second the invitation, but stood moodily twisting his tawny mustache, and staring out into the garden in an absent sort of way.

"What do you say, Fitzgerald?" said Frettiby, who was eyeing him keenly.
"Oh, delighted, of course," answered Brian confusedly.
"In that case," returned the cities con!"

"In that case," returned the other, coolly,
"I will tell you what we will do. I have bought a steam yacht, and she will be ready for sea about the end of January. You will marry my daughter at once, and go round New Zealand for your honeymoon. When you return, if I feel inclined, and you two we will make a tour of the world."

"Oh, how delightful," cried Madge, clasping her hands. "I am so fond of the ocean —with a companion, of course," she added, with a saucy glance at her lover.

Brian's face had brightened considerably, for he was a bour sailor, and a pleasing yachting voyage in the blue waters of the Pacific, with Madge as his companion, was, to his mind, as near paradise as any mortal could get.

Ottawa, Jan. 18.—The order issued by the American customs authorities to collect duty on Canadian cars transporting freight from one point in the United States to another passing through Canadian territory is attracting considerable attention in railway direles here. The opinion is that both the Canadian Facilie and the Grand Trunk have-enough American-built ears to carry all such freight and that no great amount of inconvenience will be felt unless the Canadian Government should retaints and prohibit the carrying in bond of freight through Canadia in American outder testiate and the matter and until he had more definite information he could not express any decided opinion. He added, however: "I don's imagine it is probable that the American Governments would think of doing it. There is no reason why the Americans should at this moment interfere with a system which has been in vogue ever since the existence of railways."

It is stated that the Joliette election will be protested.

The first annual meeting of the Ottawa branch of the Imperial Federation League was held this evening, about-thirty members being present. The ainual report reviewed the business of the branch during the year was held this evening, about-thirty members being present. The annual report reviewed the business of the branch during the year and showed the organization to be in a flourishing condition. President Sandford Fleming, C.M.G., in his annual address spoke of the objections taken to the name of the league as indicating a leaning to imperialism and centralization of the powers of government in one arbitrary executive, and declared this to be farfrom the purpose of the league. He thought the aims and purpose of the league would have been better expressed by some such name as the British Alliance or the British Union League. Sandford Fleming was re-elected president. —A Cab-Chase.

New York, Jan. 19.—The spectacle of two excited men chasing a cab down Broadway attracted much attention at 10 o'clock last night. The cab at length stopped opposite the Metropolitan Opera House and a well-dressed, handsome man sprang out. He led forth a beautiful young woman, who was richly dressed and who wore several large diamonds. By this time the two followers had arrived on the scene and the younger one at once jumped at the man with the lady, exclaiming: "You scoundrel, that is my wife!"

"I know it," was the reply. "You have got all the evidence you want for a divorce. Let he go with me."

With a cry of rage the husband began to pummel the stranger, the woman screamed and the lively rough and-tumble fight drew a big crowd. The whole party were arrested and the lively rough and-tumble fight drew a big crowd. The whole party were arrested and taken to the Thirtieth-street station. The husband said he was Augustus Stuhler, 'a clerk of No. 347 East One Hundred and Twentieth-street, and the man with him was his father. He said that his wife and Charles J. Harrison, a wealthy resident of Waterloo, N.Y., had stopped at the Gedney House the previous night, and he had found it out and watched them. When they started out in a cab he had followed them.

The three men were locked up on a charge of disturbing the peace. Mrs. Stuhler begged Sergeant Schmittberger to lock her up in a cell next to that occupied by Harrison, but her request was refused. The parties are said to be well known in Harlem, and a spicy story is expected when they are arraigned in the Jefferson Market Police Court. Mrs. Stuhler went away alone and spent the night at a hotel.

New York, Jan. 18.—George Hannah, the librarian of the Long Island Historical Seciety in Brooklyn, who disappeared last Saturday, returned to his home in this city a little after 9 o'clock yesterday morning. He looked pale and tired. He appeared fazed and gave confused answers to the questioning of his family. He said he left the library intending to take a walk in the tresh air to see if he couldn't get over a headache. He remembered going across the bridge and finding himself finally in the stateroom of a steamer bound for Boston. He remembered nothing further consecutively, but his answers showed he had some lim idea of having read about his disappearance in the papers.

THE Examiner of Friday evening again touches on Mr. Stratton's connection with the School Board and insinuates that other members of the Board have also had business dealings with that body. Ly FERGUS W. HUME. "And wnat is the name of the yacht?" he saked, with deep interest.
"Her name," repeated Mr. Frettlby, hastily. "Oh, a very ugly name, and which I intend to change. At present she is called the Rosanna."

Brian and his betrothed both started at this, and the former stared curiously at the old man, wondering at the coincidence between the name of the yacht and that of the woman who died in the Melbourne slum.

Mr. Frettlby flushed a little when he saw Brian's eye fixed on him with an inquiring gaze, and arose with an embarrassed laugh. "You are a pair of moonstruck lovers," he said gayly, taking an arm of each and leading them into the house; "but you forget dinner will soon be ready."

CHAPTER XXIII. 68 THE WALNUTS AND THE WINE, ACROSS THE WALNUTS AND THE WINE.

Mark Frettlby had an excellent cook, and his wines were irreproachable, so that Brian, in spite of his worries, was glad that he had accepted the invitation. The bright gleam of the silver, the glitter of glass and the perfume of flowers, all collected under the crimson glow of a pink globed lamp which hung from the ceiling, could not but give him a pleasurable sensation.

could not but give him a pleasurable sensation.

On one side of the dining room there were French windows opening onto the veranda, and beyond appeared the vivid green of the trees, and the dazzling colors of the flowers, somewhat tempered by the soft, hazy glow of the twilight. Brian had made himself as respectable as possible, under the odd circumstances of dining in his riding dress, and sat next to Madge, contentedly sipping his wine and listening to the pleasant chatter which was going on around him. Felix Rolleston was in 'great spirits, the more so as Mrs. Rolleston was at the further end of the table, hidden from his view by an epergne of fruit and flowers. Julia Featherweight sat near Mr. Frettlby, and chatted to him so persistently that he wished she would become possessed of a dumb devil. Dr. Chinside of the table, and the old colonist, whose name was Valpy, had the post of hour on Mr. Frettlby's right hand. The conversation had turned onto the subject, ever green and fascinating, of politics, and Mr. Bolleston thought it a good opportunity to air his views as to the government of the colony, and to show his wife that he meant to obey her wish and become a power in the political world.

"By Jove, you know," he said, with a wave of his hand, as though he were addressing the house; "the country is going to the dogs, and all that sort of thing. What we want is a man like Beaconsfield." a man like Beaconsfield."
"Ah! but you can't pick up a man like that every day," said Frettlby, who was listening with an amused smile to Rolleston's disquisi-

"Well, when I am elected," said Felix, who him to publish, on the subject of the coming colonial Disraeli, "I will probably form a advocate what?" asked Paterson, curi ously.

"Oh, well, you see," hesitated Felix, "I haven't drawn up a programme yet, so can't say at present."

"Yes, you can hardly give a performance without a programme," said the doctor, taking a sip of wine, and then everybody laughed.

"But you have never gone in for politics,
Mr. Frettlbyf" said Rolleston.
"Whol—l—no," said the host, rousing himself out of the brown study into which he had fallen. "I'm afraid I'm not sufficiently patriotic, and my business did not permit me."

"And now?"
"And now?"
"Now," echoed Mr. Frettlby, glancing at his daughter, "I am going to travel."
"The jolliest thing out," said Paterson, sagerly. "One never gets tired of seeing the queer things there are in the world."
"I've seen queer enough things in Melbourne in the early days," said the old colouist, with a wicked twinkle in his eyes.
"Oh!" cried Julia, putting her hands up to her ears, "don't tell me them, for I'm sure they're naughty."

her ears, "don't tell me them, for I'm sure they're naughty."
"We weren't saints then," said Old Valpy, with a senile chuckle.
"Ah, then, we haven't changed much in that respect," retorted Frettiby, dryly.
"You talk of your theatres now," went on Valpy, with the garrulousness of old age; "why, you haven't got a dancer like Ro-samma."

Brian started on hearing this name again, and he felt Madge's cold hand touch his.

"And who was Rosanna?" asked Felix, curiously, looking up.
"A dancer and buriesque actress," replied Valpy, vivaciously nodding his old head. "Such a beauty; we were all mad about her—such hafr and eyes. You remember her, Fretilby?"

"Yes," answered the host, in a curiosly dry "Yes," answered the host, in a curiosly dry voice.

As the conversation seemed to be getting too much of the after dinner style, Madga arose and all the other ladies followed her exampla. The ever politic Felix held the door open for them, and received a bright smile from his wife for what she considered his brilliant talk at the dinner table. Brian sat still and wondered why Frettiby changed color on hearing the name—he supposed that the millionaire had been mixed up with the actress and did not care about being reminded of his carly indiscretions—and, after all, who does!

JESUITS ESTATES BILL. THE DOMINION GOVERNMENT DE-

was no truth in the rumor that the Jesuit Estates Bill had been disallowed. I am now in a position to announce on suchority that the bill has been under consideration of Council and it has been decided that the act, being one coming entirely within the jurisdiction of the Provincial Legislature, should not be interfered with by the Dominion Government, and it will not therefore be disallowed.

A deputation from the Montreal Board of Trade waited on the Governor-General yesterday and tendered him an invitation to attend the banquet on Wednesday, which he accepted. They also waited on Sir John, but he will be unable to attend. Bir Hector Langevin, who had already accepted an invitation, left for Quebec yesterday, and will come up to Montreal Wednesday.

It is stated that at a meeting of the raterayers of Prescott and Russell to be held at Orignal next Tuesday with reference to the proposed railway from Ottawa to Vandreuil, S. W. Foster, representing the Grand Trunk, will announce that his company is prepared to build the road, which, when completed, will shorten the distance between Ottawa and Montreal by about eight miles. It is also said that the Grand Trunk will extend the Midland system to Ottawa and Montreal, which will greatly relieve the main line.

In the Supreme Court yesterday the case of the Montreal Seminary v. the City of Montreal was argued and judgment reserved. The case arises out of an assessment of the seminary under the local improvement bylaw for a drain fronting its property, which the seminary resists on the ground that educational institutions are exempt from taxation.

A sattleet Farmer's Close Call-Hamilton's Poiles Report.

Hamilton, Jan. 20.—A butcher's wagon belonging to William Murray and driven by Charles Williams and John McCauley was backed into by the Toronto accommodation at the King-street crossing yesterday morning and both young men thrown out, but neither seriously injured. The horse's leg was broken and she animal had to be shot.

As Elijah Fenton, a well known farmer of the township of Saltfleet, was driving home Friday evening from Hamilton, when crossing the iron bridge which spans the Big Creek, about four miles east of the city, the structure gave way. Mr. Fenton felt the movement and instead of going down with his wagon and team jumped into the creek, alighting in four or five feet of water. Both horses were badly hurs.

No less than 126 boys were afrested during the year charged with larceny.

TWO NEGROES KILLED.

TWO NEGROES KILLED.

Serious Fight in a Georgia Town-The Color line in the South.

Macon, Ga., Jan. 20.—A special from Albany, Ga., says; "From passengers who came up on the Brunswick and Western train the following facts were learned about the riot at Ty-Ty. A bailiff had a warrant for a uegro and when he went to take his prisoner the negro drew a pistol and fired at the officer with no effect. The officer then fired on and killed the negro. The Brunswick and Western construction train was on a side track close to the scens and all the negroes quit their work and went to the aid of the negro whose arrest was attempted. This fired things up and in a moment a large crowd of white men were on the scene and immediately shooting became general, but wiser heads soon got in and the battle ceased. When the smoke cleared away it was found shas two negroes were dead and several others wounded. The negroes have grown reckless and it is understood they threaten to lynch the bailiff and burn the town if the corner's jury does not fight the bailiff guilty of murder. The indications are said to be serious.

Said To Be a Bad Man from Bertie.

BUFFALO, Jan. 20.—Specials Kief and Taylor of the First precinct arrested yesterday morning in Peacl-street David Ford, aged 23 years. He is wanted in the town of Bertie, Ont., to answer to charges of criminal assault on Sarah J. Ford, his sister-in-law, on Jan. 7, and attempted murder of his brother with an age on Jan. 16. He came to Buffalo last Thursday. It is said by the police that he has served two terms in Kingston-Ponitentlary.

THE RESULT OF THE LONDON ELEC

Over the Gain in Govan.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—The municipal elections in London prove clearly how strong is the revol's against both the Vestries and Metropolitan Board of Works. Roughly speaking, it is municipal reform that has triumphed ever municipal jobbery, politics having been put aside. The new Council will not be brilliant, and may not be wise, but it is pure. The City of London proper rightly takes the lead. It elects only two men who, out of 118, have a National reputation. Sir John Lubbock is at the head of the poll with over 8000 votes. Lord Rosebery is a few hundreds behind him, and each has more than twice the number of the two other successful candidates. Lord Rosebery is named as the probable chairman.

There are other interesting, if nos sminent, personalities. Mr. Firth has long led the movement for reform; Mr. Beal is of the same party, and Mr. John Lloyd is a third. Dowager Lady Sandhurst is one of Mr. Gladatone's most ardent supporters, and Miss Cobdon is a daughter of the great Free-Trader. Legal doubts exist whether any woman is eligible. No party, no faction, can say it has no representative. Eventhe Socialists have their man, John Burns, the champion of disorder coming in at the head of the poll in Battersea. Mr. Augustus Harris, of Drury Lana Theatre, who is anything but a Socialist, is in a similar position for the Strand, and Mr. Wren, a well-known crammer, will look after education. Mr. Conybeare has the unique distinction of being defeated in two districts. Mr. Dobbs, to whom London owes much for his successful attack on some of the many abuses practised by the water companies, is ungratefully left in the minority. The press of all shades proclaims this first experiment toward self-government by London a success.

The result in the counties proper is curicua. The very men whose control the Radicals sought to destroy are chosen by the people, landlords, country gentlemen and peers. Sir Wilfrid Lawson, however, is beaten by a brewer, a specimen of local option he will not like.

Cladetentans Jubitant,
London, Jan. 20.—The Liberal triumph at Govan was confidently predicted by the knowing on both sides. Sir William Pearceheld the seat on personal grounds, as the largest employer of labor in the borough. Sir John Pender, who stood as a Liberal Unionist, polled nearly as many votes as Sir William, but nearly a thousand electors who would not oppose Sir William came joyfully to the polls to support their principles in the person of Mr. Wilson, another large employer. The victory is none the less a damaging blow to the Government and full of encouragement to the Gladstonians, who are jubilant.

The Two Premiers Pulling Together in the

SALISBURY AND BISMARCK.

The Two Premiers Pulling Together in the East Africas Affair.

Berlin, Jan. 20.—The Bundesrath will dispose of the East Africas bill without delay, and it will be submitted to the Reichstag at the end of the week, when is will swoke the long expected declaration from Prince Bismarck on the government's colonial policy and its relations with England. The measure, it is believed, will be finally passed by a large majority. Interest really centres in what Prince Bismarck will choose to reveal concerning the co-operation of England. It is noted here that English opinion against selonial extension by Germany gaing ground, and even Conservative papers suggest that Lord Salisbury weakly yielded to the request of Prince Bismarck will frankly disclose how completely the English Government has been apprised of every phase of the German policy as embodied in the East Africa bill. He is desirous of proventing English Liberals from making party capital from the concert of the Government. Every suggestion coming from Lord Salisbury during the negotiations has been accepted here. The Chancellor will therefore announce absolute harmony in the co-operations.

The Morier incident has not had the slightest effect in the relations between the two governments. It may have formed the subject of conversation during recent interviews between Prince Bismarck and Sir Edward Malet, the British Ambassador. Lord Salisbury leaves Morier to fight his own subjest of conversation during recent interviews between Prince Bismarck and Sir Edward Malet, the British Ambasador. Lord Salisbury leaves Morier to fight his own duel. The diplomatic circle is confident that Prince Bismarck has a strong eard in reserve against Morier, and will probably oblige Lord Salisbury to take efficial notice of the affair by transferring Morier from 8t. Petersburg to some post that has less influence on European politics.

The Geffeken correspondence, covering 180 follos, has been submitted to the Bundesrath. It was intended to publish the correspondence, but the government is beginning to learn that the country has had a surfeit of Geffeken. Besides, public opinion is returning in favor of Geffeken. The Progressis press, knowing it to be a powerful weapon of offense, would sustain the agitation. The Tagblatt demands a complete clearing of the saffair, the production of the appendices to the indictment, the answers for the defence, and the reasons for the decision of the tribunal. The semi-official press continues to give favorable extracts from the correspondence, but otherwise has ceased to refer to the matter. The official press of Vienna upholds the action of Prince Bismarck.

The malicious reports of the ill-health of press of Vienna upholds the action of Prince Bismarck.

The malicious reports of the 'ill-health of the Chancelior originated with The Kreuz Zeitung, the organ of the Ultra-Comservatives and orthodok declarents associated with Dr. Stocker. The reports represent the yearnings of the orthodox to see Bismarck prostrated. His life in Berlin under his modified work agrees with him. He walks daily in the vicinity of Wilhelm-strasse, seemingly unattended, but, in reality, guarded by several police agents. His residence is also guarded an both the Wilhelm-strasse and Koeniggractz-trasse sides. The household is limited, twelve servants being sufficient for the simple life led by himself and the princess. He works in a spacious cabines plainly furnished with a bookcase and an immense table covered with decouments. On the walls are two paintings representing the late Czar and William 1. The Chancellor works to a late hour and is net an early riser.

An Ex-Convict's Money-Making Scheme.

St. Thomas, Jan. 20.—Alcircular has been received here from the International Marriage Association of Mount Clemens, Mich. The manager is T. M. Kimball, alias Griswold, who a couple of years ago was sent up for a year to the Central Prison for working the green goods and sawdust racket at Chatham. On his release he was re-arrested on a charge of burglary, but while lying handcuffed to a sleeping constable at the Dake House here, he managed to get the keys and release himself. In a letter which he was cheeky enough to write to Officer Skirving to make inquires after some person, he says he is "making lots of money out of this loving business." The alleged object of the International Marriade Association is to find partners for forforn swains Ed sighing maids.

rovisions of the Bill Regulating Imn gration Reported to the U.S. House. Frevisions of the Bill Regulating immigration to the U. 8. House.

Washington, Jan. 20.—The bill reported yesterday by the Ford committee on contract-laborand immigration to the House, as a result of the investigation of last summer and fall, proposes in its first section to prohibit the admission into the United States of any person who is an idiot, insane, a pauper, or liable to become a public charge, or who has been legally convicted of a felony, other infamous crime, or misdemeaner involving moral turpitude, or who is a polygamist, anarchist or socialist, or who is afflicted with any loathsome disease, or who has entered into contract, express or implied, deal or written, to perform labor or service for any person, firm, company or corporation in the United States or doing business therein, or whose passage is paid on a promise to labor. It also provides that alien laborers, other than those accepted by the contract labor law, shall not be admitted to labor for a limited time with the Intention of returning. The time with the intention of returning. The section excepts professors in universities and ministers from its prohibition.

The second section declares it to be a misdemeanor for such objectionable person to come into the United States or for any person to assist them so to do, and a penalty of not exceeding $1000 and imprisonment for three years is provided in such cases. Prosecution may be commenced, within two years after the commission of the offence and the alien may be returned within two years to his country at the expense of the transportation company or of the United States.

oming foreign passengers, to one passenger or every five tons burden of the ship, ex-

coming foreign passengers, to one passenger for every five tons burden of the ship, excepting children under one year of age and counting those between one and eight years of age as one passenger. Violation of the provision is made punishable by a fine of net excess of the allowance.

The fourth section proposes to levy a tax of $5 on every alien coming into the United States, which is to be paid to the collector at the nearest port by the transportation agent or master of the vessel. Diplomatic representatives, consuls or agents of foreign governments are excepted. This section also creates permanent annual appropriations to defray the expenses of the exceution of the act.

Section five requires an intending immigrant to the United States to possess a certificate from a United States diplomatic representative or consul near his residence, issued after examination, to his character, without fee, but this certificate is not to be conclusive evidence of the right of the person to come into the United States nor relieve masters of vessels of responsibility.

The sixth section requires the masters of vessels and officers of railroad trains coming into the United States to report to the collector of the port or his agent the number, nationality and condition of foreign passengers. The Government officer is then to board the vessel or train, inspect the passengers may be landed temporarily swaiting faspection, and the only appeal from the collector's decision shall be to the Secretary of the Treasury is charged with the duity of supervising immigration, au thorized to make rules and contract and employ assistants, not to exceed three inspectors at any one port, at a salary of between Side and the contract and employ assistants, not to exceed three inspectors at any one port, at a salary of between Side and the contract and employ assistants, not to exceed three inspectors at any one port, at a salary of between Side and the contract and employ assistants, not to exceed three inspectors at any one port, at a salary of

The last section vests full jurisdiction in United States Circuit and District Courts in all causes arising under the act, which is to take effect July 1 next.

The report accompanying the bill gives the result of the investigations made by the committee in Now York, Boston, Pittsburg and Detroit. The report says as no inspection is made of immigrants along the border between Canada and the United States, large numbers of alien papers, insane persons and others not lawfully entitled enter the United States by this way. The number during six months was estimated at 50,000. In many instances immigrants coming to Quebec have within 48 hours after their arrival been applicants for shelter in New York almshouses and the charitable institutions of Wayne County, Mich, are filled to overflowing from this cause. The report condemns the practice which has prevailed among certain foreigners resident in this country of importing men for the purpose of contracting them on railroad works and keeping them in a state of almost abject slavery. Reference is also made to the daily crossing into the United States of Canadian laborers, it being shown that about 800 Canadian laborers,

In conclusion the committee says: "Certainly the effect of the present unrestricted system of immigration, as applicable to the conditions under consideration upon the industrial situation of this country, has been very bad and the committee believe that the time has come when immigration should be more effectively regulated, that persons who immigrate to the United States should at least be composed of those who in good faith desire to become its citizens and are worthy to be such."

Mr. Spinola does not agree with the majority in regard to the report submitted or bill presented. He makes a minority report.

FATAL FIRE AT DETROIT.

Watchman John II. Middleton, Formerly of Toronto, Burnat to Beath.

Dernott, Jan. 20.—About 1110—last night smoke was seen issuing from the heading and stave works of Brandon & Keyes, at the corner of Clark-avenue and the Michigan Central Railroad track. The entire establishment was burnt to the ground. The loss of the stock, buildings and machinery is estimated at anywhere between $25,000 and $30,000. The Insurance is $8000, made up of $1000 fpolicies in eight different companies. The origin of the fire is shrouded in mystery, but the general impression seems to be that it was of an incendiary nature.

The body of John R. Middleton, the watchman, was found suspended on an iron rod over the boiler-house. The body was frightfully burned. The head was burned from the bedy, only a charred stump projecting from the neck, both hands were burnt off between the wrists and the elbow and both feet between the ankle and knees.

THE TERRIBLE GERMANS

AMERICAN CITIZENS IN SAMOA ROUGHLY HANDLED.

An English Boat's Crew Shoe as.

San Francisco, Jan. 20.—The steamer Alameda arrived here yesterday morning from Samoa. A correspondent writing from Apia under date of Jan. 5, says: A serious state of affairs exists in Samoa. On the night of Dec. 18 some sailors from the German men-of-war Adler, Olsa and Eber attacked Mataafa's soldiers under direction of the German consul and Captain Fritz, the senior German naval officer in port. As a result of the encounter 22 German sailors were killed and 32 woundsd. Since then the German war-ships have burned the American houses, torn down the United States flags, seized some American citizens in neutral water of Apia hasbor and taken them prisoners on board the German wessel in command of an officer man men-of-war. A boat's crew from a German vessel in command of an officer have shot at the captain and lieutenant of an English man-of-war.

On the night of Dec. 16 a party of 180 German sailors came ashore at Apia, stabbed United States Marshal George Scanlan and his brother George in the back and ran shrough the streets attacking all persons they met except the Germans, and injured the adherents of Tamasese, among the number being native women and children. Some of Mataafa's soldiers came in from the bush and were anxious to begin shoothel, but were urged by United States Gorsul Blacklock not to fire.

the bush and were anxious to begin shooting, but were urged by United States Gonsul Blacklock not to fire.

The Samoan Times, published at Apia, and which has been impartial in its accounts of the events on the islands, gives the following version of the fight on Dee 18th At two clock on the merning of Tuesday 80 sailofs from the Olga were landed at Matasfa and 40 more were sens in boats along the coast, the -80 mem marching on land to meet Matasfa at a German farmer's plantation. The short party were reinforced by all the imported labouers (said to be New Britain men), so that Matasfa was between the 200 men who came down the day before and the German sailors and foreign laborers.

Matasfa, knowing the danger of interference with the German soldiers, returned in land a few hundred yards. The German followed up and fired into Matasfa's people killing a young son of the chief. The chief getting terribly excited was only prevented by his own people from firing into the Germans, but while struggling he himself was shot and fell dead beside his son.

Matasfa's people could not stand this and by common impulse, without orders, returned fir. There if first volley killed six Germans and wounded others. Several of Tamasses's men fied and the laborers refused to fight it out. Knowing that this meant overtain death against vast odds the sailors beat a hasty retreat to their boats, Matasfa's warrlors following them some detance. Matasfa lost about 10 killed and wounded, while the German loss firstated at twenty killed.

while the German loss is stated at twenty killed.

The United States steamer Nipsie steamed to Sairafata on Tuesday on hearing that German war ships were going to shell Mataafa's stronghold. Captain Mullan had communications with the German commanders and entered his protest against their reported project. His protest was not taken notice of, however, for the Olga threw shells into the spot where Mataafa was supposed to be but which he vacated.

The Chronicle says that concurrent testimony of the action of the German show that the Germans brought upon themselves the fate that overtook them, as it was not until two of Mataafa's chiefe were killed that he ordered his men to fire on the Germans.

THE cause of Mr. Pardee's retirement from the Ontario Government will be generally regretted. Mr. Pardee has been ill for some time and his resignation is an indication that he did not hope to be able to resume his duties.

Mr. Pardee's place as Commissioner of Crown Lands has been filled by Mr. A. S. Hardy, a change that does not bring with it any reason for hoping that there will be any improvement or reform in the administration of the department. Although members of the Government, including Mr. Mowat and Mr. Hardy, can find time to practice their profession as lawyers and plead clients' cases in the courts, they have decided to continue the increase of the number of Ministers from increase of the number of Ministers from six to seven made when Mr. Drury was taken into the Cabinet. The new Minister, Mr. Gibson, of Hamilton, who becomes Provincial Secretary, is probably as good a man for the position as the ranks of Mr. Mowat's followers in the House could a sample of the way the United States press is discussing Canada.

"Every American that has traveled in in Canada will confess that, like his countrymen in the story, he felt his admiration for it growing the more he saw of it. Its climate is somewhat against it, out it is on the whole a magnificent country, and verily we must have it. And there is no reservation in regard to the people. Like the country itself they improve on acquaint ance. There are pienty of fools, knaves, todies and bigots among them; but take them by small and large, they are a fine people. The French Canadians speak a foreign tongue and may be a little out of harmony with American ideas in some things, but they are readier for citizenship than thousands of the immigrants that come to the country every year; and the people of Ontario, British Columbia, Nova scotia and New Brunswick are almost homogenous with the mass of the population of America. It is Ontario especially that we covet, and we want the people as well as the land, rivers and lakes. It is thrust down into this country like a wedge, and it has no business to belong to a foreign power."

The Baiveresty Embarrassed by the Passing of the B. and O. Dividend.

Baltimore, Jan. 20.—The finances of the Johns Hopkins University are running low, owing to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company passing its dividends, upon which mainly the University depended for support B. Johns Hopkins endowed the institution with $3,000,000, a great proportion of which fund, is looked up in the Baltimore and Ohio. President Gilman has intimated the possibility of the need of an emergency fund to tide over the financial difficulties, which are monthly increasing. It is not probable that the University will cease operations. Although the Baltimore and Ohio atock may not be paying dividends, it has a marketable value, and is therefore by no means a dead loss. The mere intimation by President Gilman of the possible financial embarrassment of the University has led to a practical movement for relief by prominent citizens. Within the last two days seven men have offered to contribute $6000 each, provided a sufficient number of similar contributions shall be made to bring the total to $100,000.

The trustees have in mind two other measures of relief. One is an emergency fund, contributed by the alumni of Johns Hopkins, and by institutions the graduates of which have enjoyed the opportunities for advanced study given by the Johns Hopkins. Another plan is the endowment of come of the contribution of all time; or the presentation, for some specific and practical purpose, of a large sum of money by friends of the University in particular and of higher education in general.

Tonosro, Jan. 21.—On Friday morning the police were notified that burglars had broken into a store in Barrie and carried off a large quantity of goods, amongst them about 20 dozen silk handkerchiefs. On Saturday Detective Cuddy, accompanied by Provincial Detective Rogers, visited the Lombard-street model lodging house and there arrested three men named Mark Lewis, John O'Neil and Peter Murray. On being searched some six dozen silk handkerchiefs were found on their persons.

It was as a second-hand dealer and Jewelry peddler that he first attracted notice and in time built up quite a trade. Six months ago he rented larger premises and blossomed out into a full-fledged retail merchant in his favorite lines. Last week he, failed with liabilities of $15,000 and assets simply all. His stock had disappeared and when asked what had become of it he pleaded ignorance. On Friday last Detectiva John Hodgins was employed on the case, with the result that a considerable portion of the Simon stock was found in a building as Lombard and Victoria-streets. "What became of her?" asked Brian, abruptly.

Mark Fretilby looked up suddenly as Fitzgerald asked this question.

"She went to England in 1858," said the aged one. "Tm not quite sure if it was July or August, but it was in 1858."

"You will excuse me, Valpy, but I hardly think that these reminiscences of a ballet dancer are amusing," said Fretilby, curtly, pouring himself out a glass of wine. "Let us drop the subject."

When a man expresses a wish at his own table it is hardly the proper thing for any one to go contrary to it, but Brian fels strongly inclined to pursue the conversation. Politeness, however, forbade him to make any further remark, and he conscled himself with the reflection that, after dinner, he would ask old Valpy about the ballet dancer whose name caused Mark Fretilby to exhibit such strong emotion. But, to his annoyance, when the gentlemen went into the drawing room, Fretilby took the old colonist off to his study, where he sat with him the whole-evening talking over old times.

CHAPTER XXIV.

BRIAN RECEIVES A LETTER.

Notwithstanding the hospitable invitation of Mr. Frettlips, Brian refused to stay at Yabba Yallook that night, but after saying good-by to Madge, mounted his horse and rode slowly in the moonlight. He felt very happy as, letting the reins lie on his horse's neok, he gave himself up unreservedly to his thoughts. Atra Cura certainly did not sit behind the horseman on this night; and Brian, to his surprise, found himself singing "Kitty of Coleraine," as he rode along in the silver moonlight. Why should be trouble himself about the crime of another? Not He had neade a resolve, and intended to keep it; he would put this secret with which he had been intrusted behind his back, and would wander about the world with Madge and—her father. He felt a sudden chill come over him as he murmured the last words to himself—"her father."

"I'm a fool," he said, impatiently, as he gathered up the reins and spurred the horse into a canter. "It can make no difference to me as long as Madge remains ignorant; but to sit beside him, to eat with him, to have him always present like a skeleton at a feast—God help me!"

me as long as made remains ignorant; but to at beadde him, to eat with him, to have him always present like a skeleton at a feast—God help me!*

He urged his horse into a gallop, and as he thundered over the turf, with the fresh, cool night wind blowing keenly against his face, he felt a sense of relief, as though he were leaving some dark specter behind. On he galloped, with the blood throbbing in his young veins, over miles of plain, with the dark blue, star studded sky above, and the moon shining down on him. On—on—ever on, until his own homestead appears, and he sees the star like light shining brightly in the distance—a long avenue of tall trees, over whose wavering shadows his horse thundered, and then the wide grassy space in front of the house, with the clamorous barking of dogs. A groom roused by the clatter of hoofs up the avenue comes round the side of the house, and Brian leaps off his horse and flinging the rwins to the man, walls into his own np us avenue comes round the side of the house, and Brian leaps off his horse and flinging the reins to the man, wall's into his own room. There he finds a lighted lamp, brandy and soda on the table and a packet of letters and newspapers. He flung his hat on the sofa and opened the window and door, so as to let in the cool breeze; then pouring himself out a glass of brandy and soda he turned up the lamp and prepared to read his letters. The first he took up was from a lady. "Al-ways a she correspondent for me," says Isaac Disraell, "provided she does not cross." Brian's correspondent did not cross, but not withstanding this, after reading half a page of small talk and scandal, he flung the letter on the table with an impatient ejaculation. The other letters were principally business ones, but the last one proved to be from Calton, and Fitzgerald opened it with a sensation of pleasure. Calton was a capital letter writer, and his epistles had done much to cheer Fitzgerald in the dismal period which succeeded his acquittal of Whyte's murder, and when he was in danger of getting into a morbid state of mind. Brian, therefore, poured himself out some more brandy and soda, and, lying back in his chair, prepared to enjoy himself.
"My dear Fitzgerald," wrote Calton, in his poured himself out some more brandy and soda, and, lying back in his chair, prepared to enjoy himself.

"My dear Fitzgerald," wrote Calton, in his peculiarly clear handwriting, which was such an exception to the usual crabbed hieroglyphics of his brethren of the bar, "while you are enjoying the cool breezes and delightful freshness of the country, here am I, with numerous other poor devils, cooped up in this hot and dusty city. How I wish I were with you in the land of Goshen, by the rolling waters of the Murray, where everything is bright, and green, and unsophisticated—the two latter terms are almost identical—instead of which my view is bounded by bricks and mortar, and the muddy waters of the Yarra have to do duty for your noble river. I suppose you still hold the secret which Romanna Moore intrusted you with—ah! you see I know her name, and why!—simply because, with the natural curiosity of the human race, I have been trying to find out who murdered Oliver Whyte, and as The Argus very cleverly pointed out Rosanna Moore as likely to be at the bottom of the whole affair, I have been learning are past history. The secret of Whyte's death, and the reason for it, is known to you, but you refuse, even in the interests of instites to reveal it. secret of Whyto's death, and the reason for it, is known to you, but you refuse, even in the interests of justice, to reveal it—why, I don't know; but we all have our little faults, and from an amiable, though mistaken, sense of—shall I say duty!—you refuse to de-liver up the man whose cowardly crime so To be Continued.

TEST OF THE DYNAMITE GUN.

New York, Jan. 20.—A test of Capt. E. I. Zalinski's pneumasis dynamite gun, made yesterday afternoon at Fort Lafayette in the harbor, was very satisfactory. Three tests at 1000, 500 and 100 yards were to have been made but the program in this respect was not earried out. Only two shots were fired—one a 200-pound shell and the other of 500 pounds—charged at a point the size of a vessel's deck, marked with buoys, at a distance of one mile. The absence of an object made is impossible to demonstrate thoroughly the destructive power of the shots, but it was said that either of the bombs would have destroyed any man of war affects. Captain Zalinski fired the first 200-pound shell with remarkable precision, but the second was not so accurately gauged. The gun was of a 14-inch caliber, and each shot sent upward a body of water to a height of about 300 feet.

Sudden Deafs of an Ottawa Lady.
OTTAWA, Jan. 20.—Mrs. C. H. Carrier, wife of the manager of the local branch of the Banque Nationale, was found dead in bed about 8 o'clock yesterday morning. The cause of her death was heart disease. The lady was just recovering from an attack of messles taken while nursing her two children, who had the disease. She was a daughter of the late Colonel Coffin, ordnance land nergeant in the days of old Bytown.

Nine Men Browned.

Victoria, B.C., Jan. 20.—The steamer Cariboo Fly returned last night from an exploring trip to the Queen Chariotte Islands. The vessel brings news that on Dec. 15, while Cunningham's schooner Skena was making a trip to Skidate she språng a leak and sank. Eight Indian passengers and Cunningham were drowned. The captain, a white boy and seven Indians escaped.

In the Supreme Court to-day argument in Galarneau v. Guilbault was concluded and judgment reserved. Laird v. Ross was commenced, but not finished when the court rose. The point involved in this case is whether a transfer of property made by Laird, Gibb & Co. to Ross in 1878, at a time when they were insolvent, is void and the deed of transfer colorable and in fraud of the respondent. The property was purchased in 1879, but the Jeed for purchase was not recistered until 1881, and title, Laird & Co. made an assignment in 1883. The court below held that at the time of the transfer Ross knew of the insolvency of the firm of Gibb, Laird & Co., and that the deed should be set aside. The only other case on the Quebec list is Laflamme v. The Mail. After this case the court will adjourn to Jau. 29, when the Ontario list will be taken up.

The first meeting of the new City Council was held to-day and a motion that the local member (Bronson) be requested to use his influence to have the election law amended so as to provide a separate polling place in each ward for the use of female voters exclusively was voted down, 14 to 7. A motion that he be-asked to endeavor to have the election district of Ottawa enlarged so, as to grover the new territory recently annexed was carried. A motion to appoint a deputation to go to Toronto during the meeting of the Legislature in the interests of non-exemption from taxation was voted down.

Rev. Olymphia Brown of Wisconsin spoke upon "Foreign Rule." She asked if after all the American people had not been too generous and had nearly turned themselves out of doors. After throwing off the government of the aristocracy of Europe, it would be a striking commentary upon affairs if this country should come to govern by representatives of the slums of European capitals. While not opposed to foreign immigration she thought it a mistake to confer upon foreigners advantages not given to the native-born. Foreigness were allowed to vote too soon after reaching this country. Speaking of the public schools she said that already in one town in Wisconsin they had been done away with and the same was threatened in another town. She predicted that in the near future there would have to be a contest waged in defence of the public school system.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—By statute of the United States it is provided that when a patent is taken out in a foreign country and one subsequently is also secured in this pountry the patent shall expire in the United States with the expiration of the patent in the foreign country in which it first runs out. Under the Canadian law patents are granted for five years with the privilege of renewal for two periods of five years each, The question in a case decided by the United States Supreme Court to-day was whether the lifetime of an American patent expired 5 years from its issuance in Canada are the end of fifteen years, which is the limit to which the life of a patent may be extended in Canada. The court held that the patent in the United States does not expire of fifteen years from the granting of the patent, that is to say, the lifetime of an American patent first taken out in a foreign country does not expire until the extreme limit of time for which an extension of patent may be secured in the foreign country.

Mack claims to have come from New York, and for some time has been living in London, Ont. A check for $60 was found on him which had the name of H. R. Jacobs signed to it. The London Staudard's Ottawa News.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—The Standard publishes Ottawa telegrams stating that the Dominion Government, owing to pressure from the Knights of Labor, has decided to adopt a policy of hostility toward immigration, forbidding all alien laborers except British to enter Canada, and stopping all grants for aid to emigration. Official circles here discredit the statement. The policy of Canada, as understood here, is to discourage unsuitable emigration in every possible way, and stimulate emigration of the classes Canada needs. The result is, as Prof. Shaler, of Harvard University, states in the Universal Review, that Canada is now receiving better emigrants and any other country.

Index Axworthy Settles.

Toronto, Jan. 22.—At the first meeting of the new City Council yesterday Mayor Clarke announced that an agreement would be submitted to settle the long pending litigation between the city and the Street Railway Company. The agreement secures the immediate payment of the company's debenture, account for 1887 and 1898, amounting to about $40,000 with interest at 5 per cent. From Dec. 31 last the city is to have the sole control of its streets and the right to determine what kind of roadbeds or payments shall be put down, and how they shall be constructed, the company paying for the use of all streets occupied by them, no matter whether paved or macadamized, an annual rental at the rate of $200 per mile of single track per annum in quarterd instalments. The arrangement is to exten only until the expiration of the current term of the company's franchise, which ends on March 14, 1891.

The prisoner is a brother of Mr. Nelson's son-in-law and was about the place quarrelling with everybody about the whereabouts of a stepladder. He followed Nelson to the latter's office and waited until he saw him stoop to pick un a cane, when he deliberately aimed a bull-dog revolver at him. The builtet just grazed the head of his intended victim and lodged in the wall. Spellman fled, but was subsequently discovered hiding in-the cellar. He was arraigned in court and remanded until Monday.

A boy named George Claxton, 242 Euclidavenne, was caught in the act of passing down eigars and other delicacies to the prisoners confined in Headquarters yesterday afternoon. He was locked up on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Mr. T. McNamara explained that, in accordance with the laws of the Union, the bricklayers and masons adopted the nine hour system last year, although some of the bosses had lost money by it.

Mr. McGregor said that even when the season was brisk last year their was men looking for work, and if they had had the nine hour system there would have been more employment. In 1890, he said, the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners would adopt the eight hour system, and the American Federation of Labor, represent 700,000 mechanics, had approved of a similar general movement. had no position, and a bad temper. How do I know all these traits of Mr. Whyte's chartailor, and his father, being well off, retired into private life, and ultimately went the way of all flesh. His son, finding himself with a capital income and a pretty taste for amusement, cut the shop of his late lamented parent, found out that his family had come

"Atter you. ocparcure from alebourne every one said, 'The hansom cab tragedy is at an end, and the murderer will never be discovered.' I ventured to disagree with the wiseacres who made such a remark, and asked myself, 'Who was this woman who died at Mother Guttersnipe's? Receiving no satisfactory answer from myself, I determined to find out, and took steps accordingly. In the first place, I learned from Roger Moreland, who, if you remember, was a witness against you at the trial, that Whyte and Rosanna Moore had come out to Sidney in the John Elder about a year ago as Mr. and Mrs. Whyte. I need havely say that they did not think it needful to go through the formality of marriage, as such a tie might have been found inconvenient on some future occasion. Moreland knew nothing about Rosanna Moore, and advised me to give up the search, as, coming from a city like London, it would be difficult to find any one who knew her there. Notwithstanding this, I telegraphed home to a friend of mine, who is a bit of an armateur detective: 'Find out the name and all about the woman who left England in the John Elder on the 21st day of August, 19—as the wife of Oliver Whyte.' Mirabile dictu, he found out all about her, and knowing, as you do, what a maelstrom of humanity London is, you must admit my friend was clever. It appears, however, that the task I set him to do was easier than he expected, for the so called Mrs. Whyte was 'rather a notorious individual in her own way. She was a burlesque actress at the Frivolity theatre in London, and, being a very handsome woman, had been photographed limumerable times. Consequently when she very foolishly went with Whyte to choose a berth on board the boat, she was recognized by the cierk in the office as Rosanna Moore, better known as Musette of the Frivolity. Whys-she ran away with Whyte to choose a berth on board the boat, she was recognized by the cierk in the office as Rosannan Moore, and, being a very handsome woman, had been photographed limumerable times. WARKWORTH, Jan. 22.—A large and enthusiastic meeting of the ratepayers of the Township of Percy and North of Cramahe and Brighton was convened here last evening to appoint delegates and liscuss the proposed Cobourg and Havelock Railway project. The reeve of the township of Percy, L. S. Carlaw, was called to the chair and Mr. A. B. German, chosen Secretary. C. A. Mallory, ex-reeve and warden of the counties; G. B. Boyce, ex-deputy reeve; Drs. Mallory, McCrea and Kichards, D. Carlaw, J. B. Ewin, John Douglas, sr., Israel Humphries, Alex. Hamilton and other prominent ratepayers spoke strongly in favor of granting a liberal bonus for bringing the railroad through Warkworth. The watchword is apparently "Now or never." Delegates were appointed to confer with the promoters of the scheme in Cobourg on Thursday next. The meeting was unanimous in favor of the railroad and a bonus. Whyte had spent nearly still his money in England, and consequently Musette and her lover arrived in Sydney with comparatively little cash. However, with an Epicurean like philosophy they enjoyed themselves on what little they had, and then came to Melbourne, where they stayed at a second rate hotel. Musette, †may tell you, had one special vice, a common one—drink. She loved champagne, and drank a good deal of it. new generation had arisen which knew not Joseph—I mean Musette—she drowned her sorrow in the flowing bowl, and went ont after a quarrel with Mr. Whyte to view Melbourne by night—a familiar aspect to her, no doubt. What took her to Little Bourke street I don't know. Perhaps she got lost; perhaps it had been a favorite walk of hers in the old days; at all events she was found dead drunk in that unsavory locality by Sal Rawlins. I know this is so, because Sal told me so herself. Sal acted the part of the good Samaritan; took her to the squalid den she called home, and there Rosanna Moore fell dangerously III. Whyte, who had missed her, found out where she was and that she was too ill to be removed. I presume he was rather; glad to get rid of such an encumbrance, so went back to his lodgings at St. Kilda, which, judging from the landiady's story, he must have occupied for some time, while Rosanna Moore was drinking herself to death in a quiet hotel. UNFORTUNATE MISS KNOX lows Self-Styled Nobleman Deceived and

New York, Jan. 22. The Herald has the following cablegram from Paris: Herald readers will remember the fashionable marriage of Miss Knox, of Pittsburg, with the so-disant Count di Montercole early in October last. It was the social sensation of Western Pennsylvania, especially after The Herald announced a few weeks later that the count had beatern his bride during the honeymoon. ed a few weeks later that the count had beaten his bride during the honeymoon in the Hotel Bellevie, Paris. I received yesterday from one of the most prominens Americans now sojourning in Italy an account of the utter misery and degradation to which this young bride was subjected by the unnatural beast she married while blinded by the glamor of his supposed no-

The story seems hardly credible, but my informant's integrity is unimpeachable. It will be remembered that after the Parisian episode the couple started for the scores of the Adriatic, where the Italian claimed that episode the couple started for the scores of the Adriatic, where the Italian claimed that his mother owned a castle.

Their real destination was the little town of Fossaceca, where the fellow has an ordinary dwelling house. En route they stopped at the Hotel Vittoria, Ancona, where the husband so abused his young wife that the was compelled to seek the protection and guardianship of the American consul resident there. Despite his tenewed cruelty the girl accompanied her husband to Fossaceca, where he proceeded to render her illusion regarding his genuine character still more complete. At the time an Italian officer, Signor Ferrari, and his American wife were stopping in the town, and they interested themselves in the unfortunate girl, whose miserable, plight had quickly become the common talk of the neighborhood. They called upon her and learned a history of depravity which it would be useless to attempt to narrate.

Mme. Ferrari was compelled to leave Fossacces for a while, and upon her return found the alleged count had had his suspicions aroused and had forbidden his wife being seen by her—in fact, rudely ordered her to leave his place.

She at once applied to the American consul at Ancons, and in company with him and a cousin of Miss Knoc's, sent from Berlin by her aunt, proceeded to Lanciano, the nearest town within legal jurisdiction to Fossacce. There, with the help of the authorities, after many vicissitudes, they succeeded in rescuing the unfortunate girl from the man whose bride she had become but three months before.

The meeting between the girl and her benefactors was affecting in the extreme. Her gratitude taught her to love and appreciate their disinterested kindness, her own sweet face and gentle manners having taught them to love and care for her. Ihe law now protects the girl completely, and she will soon apply for a legal separation in Italy as a precursor, I am informed, to her securing an absolute divorce in Pennsylvania.

The alleged count had deceived Miss Knox in every way. He, was not a bachelor, as he represented himself, but a widower, whose wife had died but five months before. She had been the Contessa di Montercole in her own right, and he had usurped her name and title.

Montreal, Jan. 23.—Harry Dawson was sent to the penitentiary yesterday for seven years for highway robbery and murderous assault on Etienne Gagne some weeks ago. The other scoundrel who assisted him has not yet been captured. Had it not been for the timely arrival of C. M. McCock, Gagne would undoubtedly have been killed.

Ayotte was sent to jail for three months and fined $30 or three more months. The fine was made light owing to the poverty of Mrs. Ayotte and her two children.

Baim for a Broken Meart Administered by a Hamilton Jury.

HAMILTON, Jan. 22.—The monotony of the winter assizes was somewhat relieved yesterday and to-day by the hearing of a breach of promise of marriage case brought by Miss Jane MoNinch against William Marritt, a farm laborer, who lives at Smithvills. There was some racy evidence offered. The plaintiff, who lives with her parents at Grimsby village, claimed $2000 damages. She swore that Merritt had gone with her about the end of 1850 and until March, 1881. He promised to marry her in June, 1881. In January, 1882, she had a child, which died in a few days. Merritt again promised to marry her, she swore, in 1884, but had not kept his promise. The jury awarded Miss MoNinch $1000.

The woman was arrested on Saturday charged with the larceny of a sheet from Edwin Harris' lodging-house in Baystreet, where she had been staying for several days, and also for stealing a shawl and Jersey jacket from Hugh Daley. An inquest was held at the jail, the vardict of the jury being that the deceased came to her death by natural causes, occasioned by the use of laudanum.

Association—A One-Sided Battle in West Africa—Warlike King John.

London, Jan. 22.—When the Parnell Commission assembled to-day Sir Charles Russell said that owing to the publication of a later paragraph in The Sheffield Telegraph and to save time he would not press his application for a writ against that paper. Justice Hannen expressed gratification at the action of counsel, and hoped no fresh application of a similar nature would be made, as he had thoroughly defined the principles which should govern newspapers in commenting upon the case.

A man mamed Farragher deposed that Archbishop Walsh, in Mr. Davitt's presence, had advised him not to, pay his rent, and that he (Farragher) was evicted. He was afterwards employed in the offices of the Dublin branch of the League. Witness also testified that he had carried letters, some of which contained cheeks, from Mr. Patrick Egan to Mullet, the Invincible. Farragher testified that Arthur O'Connor, M.P. for East Donegal, held an important post in the League. Mesars. Davitt, Sexton and Harrington were members of the executive. Witness lodged with Weldon, who had been tried for the murder of young Castlereagh. Weldon afterward went to Manchester, having a check for his expenses drawn on the Hibernian Bank. Nally used to visit the League rooms.

Sir Charles Russell protested against this evidence. He stated that Nally was undergoing a sentence, and he objected to any inquiry being made into the circumstances of Parliament who it was alleged associated with him.

of Parliament who it was alleged associated with him.

The court decided that the evidence concerning Nally was admissable.

Sir Charles said that the Nally under discussion was not "Scrab" Nally, but another Nally whom Mr. Parnell had thanked for his services to the League.

Farragher further stated that he had seem-Messra. Parnell and Sexton attend meetings of the League as members of the executive. Criticising the Ford Bill.

London, Jan. 22.—The proposal on the part of the United States to atrengthen their immigration laws by drastic enactments has stirred up a good deal of feeling on the subject here, involving criticism by no means gentle or fair. Not only is the matter watched with keen interest in England, but the question is exciting a similar degree of concern on the Continent. Not, perhaps, as a measure of retaliation, but as a measure of purifying the moral atmosphere, it is suggested that the colonies, Canada in particular, have recourse to similar legislation and thus close the gates against the only classes who are likely to leave the United States and who do leave that country both for the country's good and in order to keep out of jail. Berlin, Jan. 22.—The annual fote of the students of the anti-Semitic Association was honored with the presence of Count won Moltke, Prof. Bergmann and a number of members of the court circle. Dr. Stocker in a violent discourse declared that the time had come to break the chains of savery which the Jews imposed upon Christians, and which were sometimes heavier than the chains of alaves in Africa. That there is serious trouble between the wholesale hardware trade of Toronto and the Customs Department there does not seem to be longer any doubt, but the special officers of the department who are conducting the present proceedings act with so much secrecy that the reporters have been unable to get at the true inwardness of their Toronto troubles, and they claim that a city firm, by a series of manipulations of their American invoices, has succeeded in defrauding the customs out of thousands of dollars of revenue and are thus enabled to undersell the honest importer who pays the legitimate duty on everything he Imports.

Barton was taken before a magistrate to-day. He confessed. He left England in 1886 for Canada, passed into Dakota and went thence to Chicago, thence to New York and finally to Philadelphia, where he was left without a penny. Detective Jarvis stated that he had forty-four warrants against Barton, covering a great series of forgeries. Barton's forgeries began in 1874 and continued until 1885. He forged his atepmother's signature to stock certificates because he had overdrawn his own bank account. He hoped by a lucky stroke to retrieve his fortune and to make good the loss to his step-mother before discovery. Barton was held for extradition.

Mr. Bowell of Malifax Mentioned for the Cellectorship of That Port.

OTTAWA, Jan. 22.—A deputation from the Canadian Copyright Association, consisting of Meisre. J. Ross Robertson, A. S. Irving, A. W. Croil, G. H. Suckling, R. T. Lancefield and D. A. Rose of Toronto, John Maofarlane, J. I. Il and J. Rollad of Montreal, had an interview with the members of the Privy Council this afternoon with reference to the Berne Copyright Bill, which was introduced in the house last session but not passed. In the absence of Sir John, who had gone to Montreal, Hon. Mr. Bowell presided. The deputation presented a draft bill prepared by the Copyright Association, as well as a numerously signed petition against the Berne bill.

In the discussion that followed it was pointed out on behalf of the publishers that the Berne bill would be the ruin of Canadian interests if it were carried into effect, as the printing of a British copyright in Canada would be rendered unnecessary. At present a work of which an exclusive copyright is desired must be printed in Canada, thus giving work to Canadian printers, electrotypers, etc. Stress was laid upon the fact that Canadian publishers would no longer, if the Berne bill were adopted, be able to secure the right to publish cheap editions of British copyright works, and because Chandian boxellers would have to purchase British copyright work and because the importation of reprints of British copyright works and because the importation of reprints of British copyright work and because the mork is not prohibited unless the work is not prohibited unless th

Hon William Ross, collector of customs at Halifax, whose resignation was telegraphed to the Minister of Customs yesterday in consequence of the dissatisfaction of the Government with the explanation of his allowing the transhipment of a cargo of fresh fish from an American fishing schoener, held the portfolic of Minister of Militian in 1883 under the Mackenzie Government and resigned a year later to accept the collectorship of Halifax. Ho is 33 years of age. The salary is $3000 a year, and as Mr. Ross is not wealthy his proppects are not bright. Mr. Dowell, a prominent Halifax merchant, is spoken of as Mr. Ross successor.

Mr. Ross' action in the matter referred to led the Government of the United States to assume that the Canadian authorities had abandoned their interpretation of some of the provisions of the Convention of 1818. Such a conclusion was entirely unwarranted.

Montrral, Jan. 22.—The river rose considerably yesterday afterneon, rising as much as 4; feet inside of half an hour at one time. The pumps at the pumping stations were set to work, the water bring thirteen feet above the ordinary level. It remained stationary until 10.30 last night, when a grand shove took place opposite Jacques Cartier square, and a portion of the temporary dyke promenade was carried away. No further damage was done, however. At noon to-day the river was 36 feet 2 inches, being 16 feet 8 inches above summer level, having risen seven feet since yesterday morning. The public are working at the pumping stations, and there is water in some cultars which are fourteen feet below datum. All danger, however, is now past, as the ice in the river has taken, and the work of making winter roads across it has commenced.

WARDEN BROWN.

MR. JOHN BROWN BR

the Lowell Deacons,

Lowell, Mass., Jan. 23.—The branch Baptist Church has withdrawn fellowship from Oscar R. Barclay, one of the oldest members, on the ground of indiscretion and "improper intimacy" with a young woman member of the church, who formerly occupied a room in his house. Poor Barclay is sorely wounded, and a great deal of his unrest is due to the activity of female tongues. The charges were made about six months ago and have been held in abeyance until last evening. Then Mr. Barclay was asked to make a confession, but declared that he had none to make nor any wrong to acknowledge.

The standing! committee, therefore, reported that as no confession had been made by Barclay of the alleged indiscretions, the hand of "Christian fellowship" be withdrawn from him. Friends of Mr. Barclay made carnest remarks in his behalf and the meeting reached an affecting stage, several of the female members of the flock shedding tears.

One of the charges alleged that Mr. Bar.

Mr. Eade said further that the party would number 150, as it is thoughts a larger party would be unwieldy and that the tourists themselves would come home less satisfied. The settire journey will be under the direction of Father Vascani.

TWENTIETH DAY OF FEBRUARY. One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty Nine, commencing at nine o'clock in the fore-noon and closing at five o'clock in the after-noon of the same day, at the following places and before the following Returning Officers:

ing reached an affecting stage, several of the female members of the flock shedding tears.

One of the charges alleged that Mr. Barclay had been guilty of "improper intimacy" with the young woman who roomed at his house in offering her his arm to escort her home from a prayer meeting through a lonely district of the suburbs. Another charged was based on an allegation that he had been in the young woman's room at night. He states that he did enter the young woman's room at night. He states that he did enter the young woman's room one night, when told by his wife that there were thieves about the house. He entered the room, crossed it and looked out of the window on the opposite side. The young woman was sleeping and knew nothing of the intrusion until told by Mrs. Barclays, who said her husband was there only a minute.

Another charge is that he himself has told of watching female shadows at night on the curtains of a house near his own. Mr. Barclay says he never made such an act. When the charges were first brought W. S. McKillop, recently elected deacon, is said to have stated that he considered a married man who gave his arm to another woman when walking home with ber, or who walked with a woman not his wife, guilty of adultery. The young woman in the case is quite the wagging tongues of the gossiping females in the church.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger airpassages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are elogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Gall it cold, cough, pneumonis, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even it everything else has failed you you may depend upon this for certain.

Take notice that the foregoing is a true copy of a proposed By-Law which has been taken note consideration and which will be finally passed by the Ocuncit in the event of the assent of the Electors being obtained thereto. After one month from the first publication in the DAILY EVENTISU REVIEW newspaper the date of which first publication is the twenty-third day canes therein fixed for, taking the voles of the Electors, the polls will be held.

Cowardiy, Endeserving Object.

Philadelphila, Pa., Jan. 23.—Mrs. Florence Hoffa, a finely educated and handsome young woman was yesterday sent to an insane asylum under circumstances that will set the whole state to talking. Six years ago she met and fell in love with the son of Justice of the Supreme Court Williams, who was then a studentage the University of Pennsylvania. He went home after he graduated, and she has become virtually deringed over her unrequited love for him. On Thursday and twice on Friday she was arrested, at his complaint, for loitering around his drug store, which, she only lately learned he was keeping in this city. Young Williams has become very much dissipated, and, on Wednesday night before the first arrest, induced the girl to enter his rooms and kept her there all night. Three doctors decided that she was insane and she was committed. Miss Hoffer comes from a distinguished Southern family, and hes father was assassinated by the Ku-Kluz after the war.

LITTLE LAKE CEMETERY.

The Report of the Superintendent of the The following is the report of Mr. John Kelly, the efficient superintendent of the Little Lake Cemetery, which was presented at the meeting on Monday:— To the President and Directors of the Little Lake Cemetery Company: Lake Cemetery Company:

GENTLEMEN,—I beg leave-to report that the receipts and expenditures at the Little Lake Cemetery from January the first, 1889, to January the first, 1889, were as follows:—

BECEIPTS. 596 45 $2156 !

Balance of receipts over expenditure, $1237.76

In presenting my usual annual report I wish to be allowed to refer to some of the improvements which have been made in the cemetery during the past season.

(1) A portion of section R which was not completed in 1887 was filled in, graded, the soil seeded and the banks laid to sod. The the same section there was on Lakeview avenue about 200 feet of cobble stone gutter constructed. This will be a great saving readily in the spring and fail seasons and thus prevent the washing away of the soil and gravel of the drive ways.

On section N., usually known as the single grave plot, about half an acre has been cleared of stumps and trees, graded, seeded and laid out into grave plots. Seeding the section of all rubbish, dead leaves, under brush, dead limbs, rotten logs, etc. Allow me to suggest that if the trees in this section were thinned out by about one-third, grass would grow freely and the section would become, until such time as it is required for burlal purposes, a most attractive and pleasant resort for the numerous visitors who come to admire the Little Lake Cemetery.

A new spruce hedge has been planted along the western boundary of the cemetery from the entrance gate to Ware Avenue. 400 feet of this hedge has taken well, 85 per cent. are living.

The gaps in the ceddar hedge fronting the main entrance drive were replanted. Owing to the exceedingly dry weather the previous year a large number of plants had died, and to replace them I sent a man to a neighboring swamp and procured five or six hundred plants, with no expense or syour Company, except the wayes of the man. On the grounds in general about 200 feet of the media and cared for through the summer, the watering and attention. In regard to the one of the head and cared for them demanding no little time and attention. In regard to the

ORNAMENTATION OF THE CEMETERY
I may state that I placed a large circular flower plot on the main grounds to the right of the main entrance drive. This plot is 20 feet in diameter and was much admired by the numerous visitors. I also had or posted and burned the abundant growth of poison lyy which grew along the eastern river bank and in different places, thus removing a source of danger to uncautious visitord. I would take the liberty of again removing you, gentlemen, of the insufficiency of the waster supply. The present tanks are too small to meet the demands for keeping the laws and flower plots in proper condition during the season. The tanks should be enlarged in order to contain a reserve supply of water in case of there being a lack of wind for two the wind mill. I would submit that the tanks be enlarged before spring, so that there will be no interference with the spring worke. to a detailed statement submitted herewith, it will be seen that the cost of labor for 1888 was less by $14.18 than that of 1887, while the receipts for last year were greater than the previous year by $11.45, making a net gain over the past year in the item of $255.63.
The total income, however, was less than in 1887, owing to the fact that there were twenty-one lots fewer sold in 1888 than in 1887.

In closing my report I cannot omit re-

and that same night Rosanna Moore dies. So, from all appearance, everything is ended; not, so, Tor. hefore dying Rosanna sends for Brian Fitzgerald at his club, and reveals to him a secret which he locks up in his own heart. The writer of this letter has a theory—a fanciful one, if you will—that the secret told to Brian Fitzgerald contains the mystery of Oliver Whyte's death. Now then, have I not found out a good deal without you, and do you still decline to reveal the rest! I do not say you know who killed Whyte, but I do say you know who killed Whyte, but I do say you know who killed Whyte, but I do say you know who for your own sense of justice and for your peace of mind; if you do not—well, I shall find It out without you. I have taken, and still take, a great interest in this strange case, and I have sworn to bring the murderer to justice; so I make this last appeal to you to tell me what you know. If you refuse, I will go to work to find out all about Rosanna Moore prior to her departure from Australia in 1858, and I am certain sooner or later to discover the secret which led to Whyte's murder. If there is any strong reason why it should be kept silent, I, perhaps, will come round to your view, and let the matter drop; but if I have to find it out myself, the murderer of Oliver Whyte need expect no mercy at my hands. So think over what I have said. If I do not hear from you within the next week I will regard your decision as final, and pursue the search myself.

"I-am-sure, my dear Fitzgerald, you will find this letter too long, in spite of the interesting story it contains, so I will have pity on you and draw to a close. Remember me to Miss Frettlby and to her father. With kind regards to yourself, I remain, yours very truly.

When Fitzgerald had finaled the last of the closely written sheets, he let the letter fall from his bands, and, leaning back in his leads, the service was the last of the letter fall from his bands, and, leaning back in his leads, stared, into the dayning. High from his hands, and, feating back in his chair, stared into the dawning light outside with a haggard face. He arose after a few moments, and, pouring himself out a glass of brandy, drank it feverishly. Then mechanically lighting a cigar, he stepped out of the door into the fresh beauty of the dawn. There was a soft crimson glow in the east, which exprended the approach of the sun.

There was a soft crimson glow in the east, which announced the approach of the sun, and he could hear the chirping of the awakening birds in the trees. But Brian did not see the marvelous breaking of the dawn, but stood staring at the red light flaring in the east, and thinking of Calton's letter.

"I can do no more," he said bitterly, leaning his head against the wall of the house. "There is only one way of stopping Calton, and that is by telling him all. My poor Madgel My poor-Madge!"

A soft wind arose, and rustled among the trees, and there appeared great shafts of crimson light in the east; then, with a sudden biase, the sun peered over the brim of the wide plain. The warm yellow rays touched lightly the comely head of the weary man, and, turning round, he held up his arms to the great luminary, as though he were a fire worshiper.

"I accept the omen of the dawn," he cried,

"I accept the omen of the dawn," he cried,

CHAPTER XXV.

WHAT DR. CHINSTON SAID.

His resolution taken, Brian did not let the grass grow under his feet, but rode over his the afternoon to tell Madge of his intended the afternoon to tell Madge of his intended departure.

The servant told him she was in the garden, so he went there, and, guided by the sound of merry voices, and the silvery laughter of pretty women, soon found his way ta the lawn tennis ground. Madge and her guests were all there, seated under the shade of a great witch elm, and watching, with great interest, a single banded match being played between Rolleston and Paterson, both of whom were capital players. Mr. Frettiby was not present, as he was inside writing letters, and talking with old Mr. Valpy, and Brian gave a sign of relief as he noted his absonce. Madge caught sight of him as he came down the garden path, and flew quickly toward him with outstretched hands, as he took his hat off.

"How good of you to come," she said, in a took his hat off.

"How good of you to come," she said, in a delighted tone, as she took his arm, and they sauntered slowly toward the house. Brian told her of his approaching departure, but not his reasons for going.

"I got a letter last night," he said, turning his face away from her; "and, as it's about some important business, I must start at once."

"I don't think the ""."

once."
"I don't think it will be long before we follow," answered Madge, thoughtfully.
"Papa leaves here at the end of the week."
"Why?"

"Why?"
"Tm sure I don't know," said Madge, petu-lantly, "he is so restless, and nover seems to settle down to anything. He says for the rest of his life he is going to do nothing but wander all over the world."
There suddenly flashed across—Fitzgerald's girld a line from Genesis, which seemed singularly applicable to Mr. Frettlby—"A fu-gitive and a vagabond thou shalt be in the earth."

earth."

"Everyone gets these restless fits sooner or later," he said, idly. "In fact," with an uneasy laugh, "I believe I'm in one myself."

"That puts me in mind of what I heard Dr. Chinston say yesterday," she said. "This is the age of unrest, as electricity and steam have turned us all into Bohemians."

"Ahl Bohemia is a pleasant place," said Brian absently, unconsciously quoting Thäckerray, "but we all lose our way to it late in life."

ifie."
"At that rate we won't lose our way to it for some time," she said laughing, as they stepped into the drawing room, so cool and shady, after the heat and glare outside.

As they entered Mr. Frettiby arose out of a chair near the window, and appeared to have been reading, as he held a book in his hand.

"What! Fitzgerald," he exclaimed in a hearty tone, as he held out his hand; "I am glad to see you."

Mrs. Virginia Minor of Missouri'defended the Catholic Church from the charge of being opposed to woman suffrage.

Mrs. May Wright Sewell of Indianapolis spoke upon the subject of woman in the recent campaign. During the last few months there had been formed 213 clubs of women for the study of political economy. Youth, Beauty and Wealth Got Left.
OMAHA, Jan. 23.—Miss Louise Zimmerman, the 18-year-old daughter of Gottlieb Zimmerman, a liquor dealer, has eloped with one of her father's drivers, an elderly, bald-headed man named Dernick. She was soon to have been married to another man who has youth, good looks and wealth in his favor. Investigation showed that the girl accompanied Dernick to Couscil Bluffs, where they applied for a marriage license, which was refused. They next visited Plattamouth and Greenwood with no better success and at the latter place the girl begod to be allowed to return to her home. Dernick refused, and when last heard from the couple were on their way to Burlington.

Libel Case Before the Supreme Court-Seeking to Repeal the Scott Act. Secking to Repeat the Scott Act.

Ottawa, Jan. 23.—In the Supreme Court to-day the case of The Mail Printing Company v. Luflamme, the last case on the Quebeo list, was taken up and not concluded when the court rose. This is an old case arising out of strictures passed by The Mail on Mr. Laflamme in connection with the Jacques Cartier election in 1878, when one of the ballot boxes was stuffed. Judgment was given against The Mail for $10,000. Appellants claim a new trial on the grounds of excessive damages and of improper omission and rejection of evidence, as well as the absence of an important with the supremental court intimated that although it might be good ground for postponing the trial, it was not good ground for upsetting the verdict.

Quite a social sensation has been caused by the blackballing yesterday by the newly organized Ottawa Club of Mayor Erratt and his late opponent, Dr. Valade. Two friends, both members of the club, made a bet of a champagne lunch on the late mayoralty election and the loser proposed as a good idea that both the successful and the defeated candidate should be inviced to the lunch, which was done. The lunch was at the club and in the course of conversation it was suggested that they should allow themselves to be put up for membership.
They consented, were duly nominated and no opposition was anticipated until a day or two ago, when it began to be whispered that some of the high-toned members objected to the two gentlemen proposed because they were both "in trade," Mr. Erratt keeping a furniture store and Dr. Valade being interested in a chemist shop. The rule of the club is that if one-seventh of the both candidates were therefore defeated. There is very strong feeling in the club overthe matter, it being claimed that the rejection is due to a small clique of civil servants who set up as "exclusives" and hold that in "tradesmen" should be admitted to the club. A large number of civil servants are members of the club, but in the present temper of those members who do not belong to the service it is extremely doubtful whether any more civil servants will be admitted.

The Department of Justice is advised that Godin, the halfbreed wanted in Montana for murder, has left Regina for Helena in charge of Sheriff Jefferies. The impression prevails that Godin will escape the gallows, as a new trial has been granted and evidence has been secured showing that the circumstantial evidence, upon which he was convicted can be overruled.

Late London Gossip.

Late London Gossip.

New York, Jan. 23.—Mr. Smalley cables from London: Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji, whom Lord Salisbury indiscreetly called a black man, is now being completely whitewashed. A dinner given him at the National Liberal Club brought together a number of persons of distinction. Lord Ripon, who did something (unwittingly) to unsettle the foundations of the British empire in India, presided and spoke. Mr. Naoroji spoke, Frederic Harrison and others spoke, all in one tone. All these gentlemen seem disposed to apply the principles of the English—parliamentary system to India with its 200,000,000 of orientals, who differ in race, traditions, sympathies and many otherthings from each other as much as from the English in Edward Pierrepont's interesting account—The North American Review of his interview with Lord Beaconsfield on the Irish question has been reprinted here. Some of Lord Beaconsfield's friends thought at first Mr. Pierrepont must have misunderstood what was said, but it has now been pointed out that these declarations, with all their home rule flavor, are in the same tone with what Mr. Disraeli said in the early part of

The Mail apparently knows nothing of, or shuts its eyes to the progress Peterborough has made, and to the new industries that have been established here and the enlargehave been established here and the enlargements made in old factories. Within the past few years several new and important industries have been established—including the Lock Works and Bridge Works—and there is searcely a factory or mill in the town that has not been enlarged in size and had new machinery added and its output increased. The population has grown, new streets have been built up and the town has steadily progressed. List year the expenditure in building operations ran up to the tidy sum of over $300,000. Neither a tariff nor free trade, nor the free admission of United States products and the exclusion of British goods, would change the weather or give snow so that amployment would not be interfered with. "Insufficient factories," the Mall says. When should a town be satisfied with its progress, and its public spirited citizens cease their efforts to advance its interests? Because progress has been made is not understood here to be a reason why the town should rest contented, but is rather taken as encouragement to renewed efforts. Peterborough has more room, more water power, more excellent sites for manufacturing industries, and its advantages of situation as well as its continued growth incite the Mayor and other enterprising citizens to continue their efforts to bring new industries to the town. In these efforts they have, unfortunately, the influence of the anti-Canadian newspapers against them, but they have, fortunately the advantage of the National Policy.

ST. PAUL'S CONGREGATION Holds its Annual Meeting-Reports Re

The annual congregational meeting of St.
Paul's church was held last evening, when the congregation turned out in large numbers, the commodious Sunday school room being filled to its greatest capacity. The ladies of the church had been busy all afternoon preparing a tea, and from six 'clock until seven a large number of the nembers of the congregation partook of the excellent and sumptuous refreshments that had been prepared.

THE BUSINESS MEETING. At eight o'clock the business meeting was opened with an anthem by the choir, Mr. Peter Hamilton having been elected to perform the duties of chairman. The report of session for the year was presented by Rev. E. F. Torrance, the pastor, and the secretary read the report of the Managing Board. From these reports the affairs of the congregation were shown to be in a very fair condition. The amount collect-ed for all purposes was $5,612 and the float-ing debt of the church had been reduced during the past year from $2,104 to $290. The treasurer's statement was printed and copies of the same were given to al! mem-

Balloting then was proceeded with to elect four members to sit on the Board of Management for the ensuing year, as four of the board drop out every year. The ballot resulted in Messrs, W. G. Ferguson, A. Hall, T. A. Hay (all re-elected) and D. H. Moore being elected. Messrs. Richard Hall and H. S. Macdonald were chosen as representatives of the church on the Nicholls Hospital Board. A motion was submitted giving the managers power to assess pew holders who did not contribute to the finances of the church through the envelope system. Considerable discussion took place but the motion finally carried.

ANNUAL REPORTS.

The sixth annual report of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society prepared by the secretary, Mrs. Haultain, which was published in full at the time of the society's meeting not long since, was read by Mr. J. W. Bennett. This gentleman also read the reports of the Mission Band, which showed the work that was being done by this band and spoke encouragingly of the future. It also stated that a children's Mission Band had been organized with a membership of forty-four.

Sheriff Hall read a most encouraging report of the Sunday school for the past year. The school staff was composed of the super-intendent, three libarians, twenty-five eachers in the main Sunday school, three teachers in the infant class and the Rible

He had not visited Peterborough for some years and the insprovement and progress that was everywhere apparent caused him to remark that our town was ahead, in his opinion, of most, of the smaller cities of the Province. In reference to a new custom house he inspected the site and said that the new building was a necessity and that he would insist upon the grant for its erection being placed in this year's estimates. A deputation from Norwood in reference to the High School, composed of Messrs.W.

They should look upon both, high schools in the same way. He approved of Mr. Mc-Williams' suggestion.

Mr. Dumble said the fairest way he could conceive of was to decide the pro-

The average attendance had been 102, with 132 on the roll. The average six or seven years ago was 45 or 50, so that the attendance had doubled. The receipts from all sources amounted to $1,100, and the amount which had to be provided was $1,300. Their school rate in the village was 31,300. Their school rate in the village was high, and the burden was considerable. The county had made a special grant of $250, which left $1.000 for the village to provide. They had proposed collecting a fee from the nupils, but would rather not if the county would act fairly with them. Peterborough was

The tax would scarcely be felt with Asphodel, Belmont and Dummer included in the Norwood district, although they thought it should go further west, the rate would by 65 cents on the $1,000 of assessment. Mr. Stephenson corroborated Mr. Rox-Class lead by Rev. Mr. Torrance. The average attendance was 265.

Mr. G. M. Rogers read an interesting and pleasing report of the meetings of the Ladies' Aid Society during the year and a report of the Missionary Association was presented by Mr. J. D. Collins.

The meeting was closed with the doxology.

Mr. STEPHENSON corroborated Mr. Roxburgh's statements. Their public schools in Norwood cost them $2,000 without the July School since 1854, and now that the Jurden was a heavy one they asked assistance. Mr. Roxburgh had placed the matter clearly before them.

"Wants to see me about business,"

"Connected with the sale of your station, I enough alone."

"Apropos of what?"

"Oh, nothing," answered Fitzgerald, hastily, and just then his eyes met those of Frettily. The two men looked at one another steadily for a moment, but in that short space of time a single name flashed through their brains; that name was Rosanna Moore. Mr. Frettily was the first to lower his eyes and break the magnetism.

"Ah, well," he said lightly, as he rose from his chair and held out his hand, "if you are two weeks in town call at St. Kilda, and it's more than likely you will find us there."

Brian shook hands in silence and watched him pick up his hat and move on to the veranda, and then out into the hot sunshine.

"He knows," he muttered involuntarily, "Knows what, sir!" said Madge, who came silently behind him, and slipped her arm through his. "That you are hungry, and want something to eat before you leave us?"

"I don't feel hungry," said Brian, as they walked toward the door.

"Nonsonse," answered Madge, merrily, who, like Eve, was on hospitable thoughts intent. "I'm not going to have you appear in Melbourne a pale, fond lover, as though I were treating you hadly. Come, sir—no," she continued, putting up her hand as he tried to kiss her, "business first, pleasure afterward," and they went into the dining room laughing.

"Bahl how superstitious I am, and yet—he knows!"

"What?" he said with a forced laugh, "do you really expect me to play lawn tennis on such a day? You are mad."

"I am hot, you mean," retorted the imperturbable Rolleston, blowing a wreath of smoke.

"That's a foregone conclusion," said Dr. Chinston, who came up at that moment.
"Such a charming novel," cried Julia, who had just caught the last remark.
"What is!" asked Paterson, rather puzzled.
"Howells' book, 'A Foregone Conclusion,'" said Julia, also looking puzzled. "Weren't you talking about it?"

"I'm afraid this talk is getting slightly incoherent," said Felix, with a sigh. "We all seem madder than usual today."

"Speak for yourself," said Chinston, Indignantly; "I'm as sane as any man in the world."

"Exactly," retorted the other, coolly,

"My facts are all visible ones," said Felix, gravely pointing to the company. "They're all crooked on some point or another."

There was a chorus of indignant denial at this, and then every one burst out laughing at the extraordinary way in which Mr. Rolleston was arguing.

"If you go on like that in the house," said Frettiby, amused, "you will, at all events, have an entertaining purillament."

A VILLAINOUS DRIVER.

Judson Morton's Flight After Committing Many Crimes.

Philadelihia, Jan. 25.—People living down town are excited over the misconduct of a man named Judson Morton. His depravity is said to have surpassed that of Bradley, who was sentenced yesterday to 29 years' imprisonment for assaulting young girls. The drivers and conductors of the Traction's depot at Twentieth and Whartonstreets, among whom Morton worked, have been talking of nothing less for the past day or two. Morton will be roughly handled if he has the hardihood to reappear among those with whom he worked.
Morton until last week drova a bob-tail car on the Christian-street branch of the Traction line. Early last week he obtained a leave of absence on account of sickness.
The story of his misdeeds then leaked, out.
Morton received warning from one of his friends among the drivers. He escaped from the city before a warrant which had been issued for his arrest could be served.
The Traction employes say that for some time past Morton made a practice of entic-

friends among the drivers. He escaped from the city before a warrant which had been issued for his arrest could be' served. The Traction employes say that for some time past Morton made a practice of enticing young girls whom he encountered in his neighborhood. He lived at the mortheast corner of Nineteenth and Wilder-streets. On Nineteenth-street, below Wilder, is a vacant house, to which Morton possessed a key. His method was to entice girls into the house by giving them candy and money. His victims ranged in age from 9 to 14 years. Among them were the two little daughters of H. Howard, a business man, and an engineer named Preston, who lived in adjoining houses on Nineteenth-street, above Dickinson all was through these victims that Morton's conduct was brought to light. As soon as Mr. Howard was told of the matter he rushed to the man's house. Morton was not in. The father excitedly told Morton's aged parents that he would give him twelve hours to leave the city. They responded by declaring that their son was incapable of the crime charged against him. They said the accusation was a black-mailing scheme. Then Howard hastened to the Traction depot. He was frenzied. He wanted to kill Morton. Unable to find him he hurried to the District Attorney's office. There he was told to place his case in the hands of 'the detectives. He spent some time in consulting a lawyer. After a while he was persuaded to swear out a warrant, When the detectives were put in possession of the case it was too late. Morton could not be found.

The brother of a woman who had overheard the story of the man's victims told it to a driver on a Traction car. The driver went to Morton's house. He asked him if the story was true. Morton said it was the first time he had heard of it. Morton was preparing to return to work. Shortly before Mr. Howard's visit to the house Morton left it. The last time he was seen in the city was on the following day. Then he rode up town with a Traction driver.

The men at the Traction depot say that Morton went e

MR. O'BRIEN CLEARS OUT.

The Court Orders the Crowd Out of the Galleries and the Defendant Makes Break for Liberty.

DUBLIN, Jan. 24.—The trial of Mr.
O'Brien on the charge of conspiracy began to-day at Carrick-on-Suir, County Tipperary. The Government had issued a proclamation forbidding any-demonstration welcoming Mr. O'Brien, but 20,000 persons gathered around the court house. Six hundred policemen charged the crowd, using their batons freely, but were unable to disperse the gathering. The excitement in the town was feverish. As Mr.—O'Brien entered the court house he was greeted with vockgrous cheers. His defence will be conducted by Timothy Healy. While Mr. O'Brien was striving to pass through the crowd to enter the court house he was seized by a police inspector and dragged for 30 yards. The people were maddened by this treatment of Mr. O'Brien and pressed forward to rescue him from the hands of the inspector. The police, however, repulsed the crowd. Timothy Healy, who had stepped forward to aid Mr. O'Brien was met by a bayonet levelled at his breast, but he was not injured. A number of reporters were maltreated. Mr. C'Brien complained to the magistrate that the police were attempting to incite a bloody riot.

A dozen persons were injured by the charge of the police.

When the case for the Crown had been presented Mr. Healy, for defendant, applied for subpenas for Lord Salisbury and Mr. Balfour, both of whom he asserted had made speeches similar to those of Mr. O'Brien. The court refused to issue the subpenas. The spectators received this decision with murmurs and the magistrates ordered the galleries cleared. While this was being done Mr. O'Brien exclaimed, "I'll clear out also," and started for the poor. The magistrates shouted Stophim and a constable grabbed Mr. O'Brien. After a sharp struggle Mr. O'Brien, with the aid of some of the spectators, reached the street with no worse damage than a torn coat. An immense crowd escorted Mr. O'Brien and then adjourned.

Police with fixed bayonets are patrolling the streets of the town.

Injured by Batons and Bayonets.

24.—Father McCarthy, harged with inciting boycotting, was araigned for trial to-day at Clonskitty. The hearing was adjourned. A large crowd about the court house was charged by 200 policemen and many persons were njured by batons and bayonets.

The crowd used stones and bottles against the police, thirteen of whom were njured. One of the wounded policeman will probably die and three others are in a dangerous condition.

Berlin, Jan. 24.—Gen. von Schellendorf, Prussian Minister of War, and Dr. von Schelling, Imperial Minister of Justice, have resigned.

PARIS, Jan 24.—Lord Lytton, the Brit-ish Ambassador, has informed M. Goblet, the French Foreign Minister, that Great Britain has not annexed two of the Tong-

Anna Parnell regarding the formation of a ladies' branch for the relief of evicted tenants. Miss O'Connor's accounts disclosed expenditures for the defence of prisoners charged with outrages.

Sir Charles Russell wanted all of Mr. Parnell's speeches read, not extracts.

Justice Hannen, seaing that Sir Henry had a pile of speeches a foot high, entreated counsel to consider how to shorten the reading.

Sudden Death at Hamilton.

O Klahoma Settlers Evicted.
GAINESVILLE, Tex., Jan. 24.—The United States troops drove 600 families out of O'Klahoma yesterday. They are now enamped around Purcell, I. T. Some of the people resisted and had to be sied to wagons and pulled out. Rumor has it it the real purchaser and the real owner of talors, the crack English race horse, is Mr. Astor of New York.

Excitement on the Paris Bourse.

Paris, Jan. 24.—There was considerable excitement on the Bourse to-day owing mainly to the fluctuations in the Metal Company's shares, which declined from 665f. to 647, closing after many fluctuations at 655. Rio Tintôs, which were heavily sold, closed at a decline of 4f. 37c. Panama Canal shares dropped 32f.

Assistant Secretary Rives read the despatches and remarked with a smile, "They seem to be hurling defiance in our teeth, don't they?" He intimated that there were important differences in the statements made by The North German Gazette and the President's message to Congress regarding the treaty rights of Germany, Great Britain and the United States in the Samoa matter.

Secretary Whitney declined to be interviewed regarding the publication in The North German Gazette. No new orders, the Secretary said, had been issued by his department regarding Samoan affairs. Senator Edmunds said: "Hismarck's repression of opinion will not deter the American people from carrying out any policy they may adopt as desirable or necessary. The Samoan Islands are of great importance with relation to the development of trade via the projected canals across the Islamus of Panama and across Nicaragua to a power whose ships are sent on long cruises. The establishment of coaling stations is a necessity, and the location of one on the central island of the Samoan group is looked upon as of great importance to us."

OUR NATIONAL POLICY. OUR NATIONAL POLICY.

THE fact that a new cotton factory is to be started in Beauharnois to supply the growing trade with China, says the Empire, is a gratifying evidence of the progress of our country. In a wider view than the mere establishment of a new factory, now happily no uncommon occurrence, the special circumstances in this case make it a recet settle factory proof of the beneficial ruptey, and that in the improbable event of its ever being completed it would not obtain either sufficient local custom or through traffic to pay for greening the through traffic to pay for greasing the wheels. The road having been completed long within the time declared by the growlers to be impossible, we are so far from lers to be impossible, we are so in From bankrupt that the added burden is not perceived in the greater ability to bear it, the local traffic is enormous and the through business is augmenting with unexpected rapidity and with promise of an extraordinary development. Now, we have another instance of the benefit of this great railway and of the estemphil lines that naturally and or the eteamship lines that naturally followed, in a factory being built in the Province of Quebec, that its output may thus be carried to the far away myrlads of China. Even the most sanguine and of the steamship lines that naturally could hardly have expected such a signal realization of their hopes.

WHILE the agricultural population of the Canadian Provinces is increasing, that of the New England States, which have the benefit of the "market of 60,000,000 people," is decreasing. In the last twenty-five years the farming population of Massachusetts decreased to the extent of 37,005.

THE Halifax Herald publishes a table of since 1875. It shows that during the five years of Reform rule, 1875 to 1879, the aggregate liabilities of those who falled averaged $26,600,000 a year. In the nine years following, 1880 to 1888, the annual average of liabilities was $11,800,000, notwithstanding that the number of traders in the Dominion had increased from 55,000 in 1876 to 75,339 in 1888. That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger airpassages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.
When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there your tungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.
Call it cold, cough, pusumonis, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has falled you you may depend upon this for certain.

to Escape from the Central.

Toronyro, Jan. 25.—Two convicts from the Central Prison, J. H. Henderson, alias Graham, and Frank Smith, were charged by Warden Massie before the Police Magistrate yesterday with attempting to escape by cutting the bars of the cell in which they were confined. Three bars had been cut with a file and saw and one fell out, which led to an investigation. On searching the cells several dumnies in the shape of short wooden dowels, blackened so as to represent iron bars, were found concealed in the cell. These the men undoubtedly intended to substitute in the apertures after removing the bars; a crow-bar was also unearthed concealed in the mattress. The Warden described Henderson and Smith as desperate men, who would not stop at murder to accomplish their designs. There had been three such attempts made in 22 months. The accused were very substive in court. They were committed for trial.

Joseph Bourgurnon, a French convict who was employed as a cook at the Central Prison, was more lucky than Graham and Smith, and escaped yesterday by scaling the prison wall.

At the assizes yesterday John, Frederick and Henry Bredin of King, charged with unlawfully wounding Wibert S. Card, were convicted of common assault. Their recognizances in $2000 each were accepted to appear for sentence if called on within five years. Roland Gideon Israel Barnett pleaded not guilty to a charge of having on Nov. 6, 1885, at the City of Toronto, then being a trustee of two negotiable securities of $2520 each, appropriated them to his own use, these securities being the property of the Central Bank. An indictment was also returned against. Jarnett for appropriating a promissory note for $285 made by Charles F. Bunbury. A true bill was brought in against W. F. Maclean, editor of The World, charged with criminally libelling H. A. Massey.

"Before proceeding with the general business of the day I have a pleasing duty to perform. There is a gentleman amongst us who has spent some of the best years of his life in our deliberations, both as Warden and Councillor, and indeed I may say as en and Councillor, and indeed I may say as a general adviser in all cases of doubt and difficulty, and that not alone in his municipal capacity, but in addition as a friend to almost all of us. Gentlemen, I need scarcely say that I speak of Mr. John Burnham. With a view to mark their appreciation of that gentleman's services as thrice Warden and for fifteen years a representative in this Council, you with the County officials decided to present him with an address and accompanying memento of his life amongst us, I therefore have much pleasure in asking Mr. Michael Sanderson, the oldest Councillor here, to read the address and present

Mr. Sanderson then read the following address:—

To John Burnham, Esquire, Barrister at Law and Member of the County Council of the County of Peterborough:

We the members and officers of the County Council of the County Council of the County of Peterborough. The County Council of the County Council of the County Council of the County Council of the County of Peterborough. As we for a long time appreciated the many kindnesses which we have on very many ceasions derived from your advice in the many years during which you have been County Councillor and Warden of Peterborough. We are very deeply impressed with the debt of gratitude which we owe to your sound judgment and administrative skill.

In the last fifteen years difficulties have arisen which would tax the energy and acumen of the most expert municipal offlicer, yet you have not hesitated to yield your mature expetience and much more than your share of time to the service and very great advantage of this County.

Mr. Burnham said that this was a great surprise to him, as he had had no idea that such a thing was in contemplation. He could not say that he was altogether worthy of the highly eulogistic remarks contained in the address. All he had done while a member of the Council it had been his duty to do; but what he had done had been to the best of his ability and judg-ment. As the, address reminded him, he had been a member of the Council for fifteen years. There were only two mem-bers here now who were members then Mr. Sanderson and Mr. Moloney. Edward F. Honeywood, the British swell who cut such a dash in Newark society, has been sentenced to a two-years term in the New Jersey penitentiary. His mother, Lady Honeywood of Belgravia square, has made no effort to get her son out of his last scrape.

The Russian Empress thinks little of Court etiquette. Recently at some function at the Danish Court, where properly she had precedence of the Princess of Wales, she laughingly invited the Princess to go ahead of her, saying: "When I am here I am only my mother's second daughter.

Michael Angelo (poet, painter, sculptor—three men in one—a trinity of genius) stood one day with folded arms, in wrapt contemplation of a block of marble. Presently a pupil stepped to his side and said softily; "Master, what seest thou?" "Hush." replied Angelo, I see an angel in the stone and I mean to chisel it out." The Republic writer comments, still sermonizing: There is an angel in human nature—in every jail-bird, in youder shape of painted shame, fitly attended by shadows of fallen womanhood; in that cut-throat, rawling under the gaslight; in this little girl, adrift with bare feet on the tey pavement; in the womahood; in that cut-throat, crawling entertainment at Lakefield to-night.

Says this same writer: An empty stomach is not a means of grace. Indeed, it is not a means of anything but deviltry. Full-fed people are mostily stout conservatives. It is your lean and hungry kind that cut throats and topple over the existing order. When some one in the House of Commons proposed a certain measure involving large expense on the ground that it would benefit posterily. Shardian rose and objected: "What has posterify eyer done for us that we should tax ourselves for her?" In the same spirit the empty stomachs regard civilization as a bad step-mother. Sidney Shith fell ill, and the physician advised him to take a walk every morning on an empty stomach. "Upon whose?" asked the wit. The bravest soldiers are cowards when hungry. Good Generals always send their regiments into battle well fed. It Try this. Cobbett, the English solitical economist, asserts that the stomach is the seat of civilization.

reated much enthusiasm. The Swiss goodnight refers to the custom of the Swiss mountaineers of calling through their speaking trumpets at dusk, "Praise the Lord God." One herdsman starts the call and his neighbora from every peak echo it. The sounds are prolonged by reverberation from one mountain to another. After a short period, which is supposed to have been devoted to prayer, a herdsmae calls "Good night." This, too, is repeated, and as darkness falls each retires to his hut. These calls may be heard for miles, and are re-choed from the rocks for some minutes after the riginal call has died away.

While every one was laughing at this remark, Frettlby took the doctor's arm and walked away with him. "I want you to come up to my study, doctor," he said, as they strolled toward the house, "and examine me."
"Why, don't you feel well?" said Chinston, as they entered the house.

"Not lately," replied Frettliby. "I'm afraid I've got heart disease."
The doctor looked sharply at him, and then shook his head. "Nonsense," common delusion with people that they have heart disease, and in fine cases out of ten it's all imagination; unless, indeed," he added, waggishly, "the patient happens to be a young man."

waggasily, the patent implements of a far as that goes," said Frettlby, as they entered the study, "and what did you think of Rolleston's argument about people being mad?" "It was amusing," replied Chinston, taking a seat, Frettlby doing the same. "That's all I say can about it, though, mind you, I think there are more mad people at large than the world is aware of."
"Indeed!"

world is aware of."

"Indeed!"

"Yes; do you remember that horrible story of Dickens', in the "Pickwick Papera," abouthe man who was mad, and knew it, yet successfully concealed it for years! Well, I believe there are many people like that in the world, people whose lives are one long struggie against insanity, and yet who eat, drink, talk and walk with the rest of their fellow men, evidently as gay and light hearted as they are."

"How extraordinary."

"Half the murders and suicides are done in they are."

"How extraordinary."
"Half the murders and suicides are done in temporary fits of insanity," went on Chinston, "and if a person broods over anything, his incipient madness is sure to break out sooner or later; but, of course, there are cases where a perfectly same person may commit a murder on the impulse of the moment, but I regard such persons as mad for the time being; but, again, a murder may be planned and executed in the most cold blooded manner."

ner."

"And in the latter case," said Frettlby, without looking at the doctor, and playing with the paper knife, "do you regard the murderer as mad?"

"Yes, I do," answered the doctor, bluntly. "He is as mad as a person who kills another because he supposes he has been told by God to do so—only there is method in his madness. For instance, I believe that hansom cab murder, in which you were mixed un"— cab marder, in waren you were mixed up?—

"D— it, sir! I wasn't mixed up in it," interrupted Frettlby, pale with anger.
"Beg pardon," said Chinston, coolly, "a slip of the tongue; I was thinking of Fitzgeraid. Well, I believe that crime to have been premeditated, and that the man who committed it was mad. He is, no doubt, at large now, walking about and conducting himself as sanely as you or I, yet the germ of insanity is there, and sooner or later he will commit another crime."

samity is there, and sooner or later be will commit another crime."

"How do you know it was premeditated?" asked Frettlby, abruptly.

"Any one can see that, "answered the other. "Whyte was watched on that night, and when Fitzgerald went away the other was ready to take his place, dressed the same."

"That's nothing," re orted. Frettlby, looking at his companion sharply. "There are dozens of men in Melbourne who wear evening dress, light coats and soft hats—in fact, I generally wear them myself."

"Well, that might have been a coincidence," said the doctor, rather disconcerted; "but the use of chloroform puts the question beyond a doubt; people don't usually carry chloroform about with them."

"I suppose not," answered the other, and then the matter dropped. Chinston made an examination of Mark Frettlby, and when he had finished his face was very grave, though he laughed at the millioniare's fears.

"You're all right," he said, gayly. "Action of the heart a little weak, that's all—only," impressively, "avoid excitement—avoid excitement."

Just as Frettlby was putting on his coat a knock came to the door and Madge entered.

"Not a bit of it," answered Chinston, reasuring. "All right, only avoid excitement."

But when Frettlby_turned to go to the door Madge, who had her eyes fixed on the doctor's face, saw how grave it was.

"There is danger?" she said, touching his arm as they paused for a moment at the door.

"No, not" he answered hastily.
"Yes, there is," she persisted. "Tell me the worst; it is best for me to know."

The doctor looked at her in some doubt for a few moments and then placed his hands on her shoulder.

"My dear young lady," he said gravely, "I will tell you what I have not dared to tell your father."

"What?" she asked in a low voice, her face "What?" she asked in a low growing pale.

"His heart is affected."

"And there is great danger?"

"Yes, great danger. In the event of any sudder stock."

He besitated.

"He would probably drop down dead."
"My God!"

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 21.—The American Iron and Steel Association's statement shows that the total production of pig iron in the United States in 1888 was 6,490,739 gross tons, against 6,417,148 gross tons in 1887. The production in 1888 was the largest in our history. The extraordinary activity of the furnaces in the last few months of the year brought the total production far above the figures indicated by the statistical results of the first half of the year. The production in the first half of 1888 was 3,020,092 gross tons, second half 3,470,647. The increased production of pig iron in the Southern States in 1889 over 1887 was over 203,000 net tons. As late as 1865 the whole country made less pig iron than the south made in 1888. Pennsylvania made less pig iron in 1888 than in 1887. So did New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Wisconsin and Missouri. Ohio jumped from 973,539 net tons in 1887 to 1,103,818 in 1888. The stock of pig iron unsold, in the hands of manufacturers or their agents at the close of 1888 and not intended for the consump. CANADA'S BIG RAILWAYS AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM PRE-to the Grand Trunk Dented.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—The following letter

London, Jan. 25.—The following letter appears in to-day's papers:

MONTREAL, Jan. 14, 1889.

SIR: In accordance with the wishes of the directors of this company at their meeting to-day I beg leave to make the following reply to your favor of Dec. 19, covering a memorial signed by a large number of the shareholders of the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, drawing attention to the hostility apparently existing between these companies, and urging the importance of more harmonious working.

At the outset the directors desire to disclaim any feeling of hostility on their own part, or on the part of the officers of the company, towards the Grand Trunk Railway. They fully concur in all that is set forth in the memorial of the shareholders as to the dexirability and importance of the most harmonious relations, and it has been their wish all along to cultivate such relations.

The policy of the Canadian Pacific Com-most ha monious relations, and it has been their wish all along to cultivate such relations.

The policy of the Canadian Pacific Company as regards the extension of its lines to various parts of the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec has been made use of to create the impression that a feeling of hostility exists. There can be nothing else to indicate anything of the kind, because the Canadian Pacific Company has carefully refrained from any opposition to any of the projects of the Grand Trunk Company or interference with its legislation or its financial operations, and it cannot be charged that it has, where competing with the Grand Trunk for traffic, acted in any but the most neighborly and honorable manner, or that it has not at all times shown a strong desire to co-operate in the maintenance of proper rates, and to guard against the abuses which have elsewhere resulted from competition. Indeed, since the beginning of the competition between the two companies, disturbances in their rates other than those resulting from outside causes, beyond their control, have been exceedingly race. The wholesale cutting of rates and the other evils growing out of fierce competition, which have brought many of the neighboring American lines to the verge of bankruptcy, have been almost unknown between these two companies, and it is safe to say that nowhere else in America are rates more uniformly maintained and nowhere is the public better satisfied.

It can only be, therefore, the territorial policy of the Canadian Pacific Company that can be pointed to as indicating a feeling of hostility on its part, and in order that its policy in that respect may be better understood, I am desired by the directors to say that from the inception of their enterprise it was apparent that the main lines of their rallway must depend largely upon the traffic between the great Province of Ontario being, in point of traffic, equal to all the rest of the Dominion; that in fact line of their rallway must depend largely upon the traffic between the great Province of Ontario and the Canadian Northwest and the Pacific coast for its support, Ontario being, in point of traffic, equal to all the rest of the Dominion; that in fact this traffic was absolutely necessary to the success of the enterprise; that the Grand Trunk Rallway could not be depended upon to bring this traffic to the Canadian Pacific, because its interests would bear heavily in the direction of its much longer haul to Chicago; that nothing short of an exclusive arrangement with the Grand Trunk were to ignore its many important connections at Chicago, and enter into an exclusive arrangement with the Canadian Pacific, the power of these connections to divert from the Grand Trunk a vastly greater traffic would not admit of the hope of the long continuance of such an arrangement; that at best, as experience everywhere has proved, mutual interest only could be depended upon for the satisfactory working and permanency of such traffic arrangements, and the mutual interest did not and could not exist in this case; that even with the atrongest agreement that could be made, the vast capital to be invested in the min line of the Canadian Pacific must remain at the mercy of the Grand Trunk Company, for without the Ontario traffic, the Canadian Pacific could not have existed during its earlier years; that the most carefully drawn agreement could not afford adequate protection, because in case of the wilful diversion of this traffic from the Canadian Pacific, it might be seriously crippled before it could secure its rights through the slow processes of law.

It would have been unwise in the extreme to have left the enormous interest of its shareholders in such a perilous position, and therefore, impelled by the force of circumstances and not in the slightest degree by hostility towards the Grand Trunk Company, the Canadian Pacific turned its attention to the provision of such lines and connections in Ontario as would effectually make the main transcentions pletted.

The unfriendly and even hostile spirit displayed by the Grand Trunk Company from the beginning gave additional force to the reasons which actuated the Canadian Pacific Company in deciding upon this course.

A connection with the Great Western Railway of Canada, whose ligas reached nearly every important place in the Ontario peninsula, naturally became the first object of the Company, but the first step in that direction was met by the absorption of the Great Western by the Grand Trunk. The Midland system and other independent railways were absorbed as quickly as possible. Whether any of these lines were absorbed for the profit of the Grand Trunk or only for the purpose of heading off the Canadian Pacific at any cost may possibly be deterrecord recraim lines south of the St. Lawrence River and east of Montreal. This involved the construction of a bridge across the St. Lawrence—the Grand Trunk bridge being difficult of access and insufficient for the additional traffic. In establishing its connections with the seaboard, connections were incidentally made with the great manufacturing clitics of northern and central New England.

Recently, but pursuant to a long matured plan, the Canadian Pacific has been extended across the State of Maine to 5 connection with the railway system of the Maritime Provinces of Canadana extension demanded in the public interest as well as in the interest of this company. There is a large traffic between these provinces and Western Ontario, making local connections in Ontario doubly important.

local connections in Ontario doubly important.

The traffic between the New England States and Chicago and farther west is very large and profitable, but while reaching it most advantageously at the east the Canadian Pacific has been unable to carry it for want of independent connections at the west. The only break in connections is between London, Ontario, and the Detroit River—110 miles—and on the closing of this gap the full use of no less than 1800 miles of the company's lines east of—it depends. Whether or not the comparatively short line necessary to the closing of this gap must be made in the vicinity of two existing lines the gap must be closed. Its importance can hardly be over estimated. It will enable the Canadian Pacific at once to share in a traffic almost as im-importance can hardly be over estimated. It will enable the Canadian Pacific at once to share in a traffic almost as important as any in America and from which it is now effectually debarred.

In the hope of avoiding the construction of a new line, attempts were made to secure rights of user or equivalent rights over that of the Grand Teunk; but these efforts were unsuccessful, conditions in nowies relating to the question having been named by the Grank Trunk at a time when the Canadian Pacific had already delayed its work to the unmost limit of prudence and could delay it no longer without the loss of another season. It is difficult, if not impossible, for anyone at a distance and not familiar with all the conditions surrounding such a complicated question as that of the joint use of a section of 110 miles of railway, by two companies in active competition for the same traffic, to judge of the reasonable effort was made on its part; and, in their opinion, a careful reading of the recently published correspondence between the officers of the two companies, clearly proves that only the question of rental stood in the way of an agreement up to the time the negotiations were brought to an end by the introduction of the foreign conditions before mentioned.

Defore mentioned.

One of these conditions was that the Canadian Pacific should discontinue the carriage by its own line of its through freight traffic between Toronto and other Western Ontario points and all the territory reached by its main line west of North Bay, and yield all of this traffic to the Grand Trunk for carriage over its shorter line the tween Toronto and North Bay, on terms to be settled by arbitration. The Canadian Pacific had offered independently of any other question and in a neighborly spirit, to permit the Grand Trunk to carry this traffic over its short line at the estimate cost of its carriage over its own longer line. Whether or not this offer was based on a correct estimate of the cost it should be remembered that the Grand Trunk has no claim whatever upon the traffic and that the Canadian Pacific was satisfied to continue its carriage at the rates proposed. A proposal to submit a question to arbitration usually carries with it an impression of fairness; but there are questions which are not proper questions for arbitration. One party in the legitimate enjoyment of a business cannot reasonably be asked to submit to arbitration the terms upon which it shall be surrendered to a competitor.

This company has not been unwilling at any time to arrange this traffic matter with the Grand Trunk, independently of other questions—indeed, it has been so arranged quite recently.

The other condition was that the Grand Trunk should have the right of user over the Sault Ste Marie branch of the Canadian Pacific but while without a knowledge of all the circumstances, a proposal to exchange rights of user seems fair and proper, there is a wide difference between the question of the joint use of the Grand Trunk, line between London and Detroit and the Canadian Pacific was in a position to make immediately all the traffic it can conveniently carry.

The Canadian Pacific was in a position to make immediately all the traffic it can conveniently carry.

The Canadian Pacific was in a position to make immedia or not as it might see fit in the indefinite future.

The action of the Canadian Pacific Company in extending its line to Detroit has been pointed to as indicating a hostile and aggressive policy; but it should not be overlooked that the extension of the Canadian Pacific to the Detroit River is a direct consequence of the absorption so industriously pursued by the Grand Trunk for the past seven years; to refer to the purchase by that company of the North Shore Railway between Montreal and Quebec for no other possible purpose than to keep the Canadian Pacific out of Quebec, the Grand Trunk Company having already a line of its own between the two cities,—a purchase which was only relinquished after provision had been mad of the public for the construction of a third line.

Whether on not the recent absorption of mined by an examination of the subsequent results of their working, and the result of such examination will probably be found to apply equally well to the more recent absorption of the Northern and Northwestern Railway.

the Grand Trunk Compasy have been made use of without great disadvantage. The only case in which the joint use of a section of the Grand Trunk Railway seemed either expedient or practicable was that of the line between London and Detroit.

The company has in no important particular deviated from the policy and plans decided upon in 1882. These plans lack but little of completion. How soon they shall be completed and whether they shall be completed in full must depend upon circumstances; but in carrying them out the directors will be happy, as they would have

be completed and whether they shall be completed in full must depend upon circumstances; but in carrying them out the directors will be happy, as they would have, been in the past, to utilize as far as possible the lines or other facilities of existing railways, if that can be done without the sacrifice of efficiency or independence. They have no desire to injure the property of their neighbors or to incur any avoidable capital expenditure.

The directors beg leave to point out that so much as may have been unsatisfactory in the experience of the Grand Trunk Company in the past three or four years must be attributed to other causes than Canadian Pacific competition; for they have reason to believe that at nearly all competing points the earnings of the Grand Trunk have been larger than before this competition began, excluding, of course, the accident of bad crops. The impetus given to trade and manufactures by the advent of the Canadian Pacific has resulted in a profitable traffic for itself and an increased traffic for its neighbor.

The directors wish further to say that next to the prosperity of their own railway, there is nothing that intelligent self-interest would lead them so earnestly to desire as the prosperity of the Grand Trunk.

HAMILTON, Jan. 25.—Eddie Orr, formerly a bookkeeper for Frank Squibb, plumber, is in Chicago, whither he went to get out of solving a financial problem. Orr was in receipt of a small salary, yet he lived well, dressed elegantly, sported a gold watch and a diamond ring, and spent money freely. Many of his friends wondered how he could afford to go the clip he did unless he received money beyond his salary. Several months ago his employer remarked to him that he was living beyond his means, and Orr explained that he got money from other sources. Mr. Squibb did not suspect that he was paying for his bookkeeper's extravagance until about Christmas, when he accidentally discovered that there was a deficit of $149 in his cash book. Orr promised to make good the shortage, and tried to explain how it occurred, but his explantations and the state of the scale.

Orr promised to make good the shortage, and tried to explain how it occurred, but his explanations were not satisfactory to Mr. Squibb, who discharged him at the first of the year. Orr did not pay the shortage, but he made good promises, and Mr. Squibb did not prosecute him.

Last Saturday Orr departed very suddenly for Chicago. He coolly wrote a letter from there to his former employer, asking him to send a recommendation to assist him in getting a situation. Since his departure it has been discovered that he headers. ployer, asking him to send a recommendation to assist him in getting a situation.

and covered up his tracks very well. In one instance an apprentice was to get a granted, but the boy did not reap the benefit, as the book-keeper pocketed the amount

Although this is called the second annual report, the company has really been in existance about sixteen months, yet it has as much insurance in force as the oldest company in this country had at the end of its twenty-second year. The two rinks that went from here yesterday to curl a match with Millbrook returnable of the field with the determination to do a large business, and it has succeeded in that, while at the same time a comparison of the cost of its operations with those of American companies is satisfactory. The cost of business taken by 28 of the chief American companies, as published by the Spectator, was an average of $37.81 paid for every $1,000 of insurance, while the $4,801.000 taken by the Manufacturers' Life is only $18 on each $1,000, even taking all the expenses of the year as applying to new business. The death rate has been low, $14,000 penses of the year as applying to new business. The death rate has been low, $14,000 falling in as claims. With the organization of the agencies established, and the cost of establishing the concern over, there is no doubt a grand future in store for this corporation, which has at its angle of the second stable of the seco poration, which has at its head such men as Sir John A. Not long after midnight last night Alexander Ross, one of the Nile voysgeurs, accompanied by a companion, went into A. H. Sutton's restaur. ant and called for beer. Both men were pretty well on the way towards that condition of weak knees which is inevitably followed by a big head and bleary optics the next morning. Mr. Sutton informed the two beer hunters that they could not get any of the beverage there, but they ineisted and finally they had to be forcibly ejacted. As soon as they were out on the side-walk, Rossgavs rent to his indignation by put: ing his fist through one of the large panes of glass in the restaurant window. Constable Mc-Ginty arrived about this time and took Ross to the cells. At the Police Court this morning the prisoner was find $2 and costs and ordered to pay $2 50 for the damages.

CHAPTER XXVI.

KILSIP HAS A THEORY OF HIS OWN.

Mr. Calton sat in his office reading a letter he had just received from Fitsgerald, and it seemed to give him great satisfaction, judging from the complacent smile on his face. "I know," wrote Brian, "that now you have taken up the affair, you will not stop until you find everything out, so, as I want the matter to rest as at present, I will anticipate you, and reveal all. You were right in your conjecture that I knew something likely to lead to the detection of Whyte's murderer; but when I tell you my reasons for keeping such a thing secret, I am sure you will not blame me. Mind you, I do not say that I know who committed the murder; but I have suspicions—very strong suspicions—and I wish to God Rosanna Moore had died before she told me what she did. However, I will tell you all, and leave you to judge as to whether I was justified in concealing what I was told. I will call at your office some time next week, and then you will know every-was told. I will call at your office some time next week, and then you will know every-thing that Rosanna Moore told me; but once that you are possessed of the knowledge you will pity me."

"Most extraordinary," mused Calton, lean-ing back in his chair, as he laid down the letter. "I wonder if he's going to tell me that he killed Whyte after all, and that Sal Paratiss required herself to save him! No. that he killed Whyte after all, and that Sai Rawlins perjured herself to save him! No, that's nonsense or she'd have turned up in better time, and wouldn't have risked his neck up to the last moment. Though I make it a rule never to be surprised at anything, I expect what Brian Fitzgerald tells me will startle me considerably. I've never met with such an extraordinary case, and from all ap-pearances the end isn't reached yet. After pearances the end isn't teaching the line all," said Mr. Calton, thoughtfully, "truth is tranger than fiction."

Here a knock came to the door, and in answer to an invitation to enter, it opened, and Kilsip glided into the room. "You're not engaged, sir," he said, in a

"Oh, dear, no," answered Calton, carelessly, "come in, come in."

Kilsip closed the door softly, and gliding along in his usual velvet footed manner, sat down in a chair near Calton's, and placing his hat on the ground, looked keenly at the barrister.

"Well, Kilsip," said Calton, with a yawn, playing with his watch chain, "any good news to tell me?"

"Well, nothing particularly new," purred the detective, rubbing his hands together.

"Nothing new, and nothing true, and no matter," said Calton, quoting Emerson.

"And what have you come to see me about?"

"The hansom cab murder," replied the other quietly.

"The hansom cab murder," replied the other quietly.

"The devil!" cried Calton, startled out of his professional dignity. "And have you found out who did it?"

"No!" answered Kilsip, rather dismally; "but. I've got an idea."

"So had Gorby," retorted Calton, dryly, "an idea that ended in smoke. Have you any practical proofs?"

"Not yet."

"That means you are going to get some?"

"That means you are going to get some?"
"Well, if possible."

"Mach virtue in "if," "quoted Calton, picking up a pencil and scribbling idly on his blotting paper. "And to whom does your suspicion point?"

"Ana resaid Mr. Kilsip, cautiously.
"Don't know him," answered the other coolly: "family name Humbug, I presuma. Bosh! Whom do you suspect?"

Kilsip looked around cautiously, as if to make sure they were alone, and then said, in a stage whisper:

"Roger Moreland!"

a stage whisper:

"Roger Moreland!"

"That was the young man that gave evidence as to how Whyte got drunk?"

Kilsip nodded.

"Well, and how do you connect him with the mudder!

"Well, and how do you connect him with the murder?"

"Do you remember in the evidence given by the cabmen, Royston and Rankin, they both swore that the man who was with Whyte on that night wore a diamond ring on the foredinger of the right hand?"

"What of that! Nearly every second man in Melbourne wears a diamond ring."
"But not on the foredinger of the hand."

"Oh! And Moreland wears a ring in that way?"

"Yes!"
"Merely a coincidence. Is that all your

"Merely a coincidence. Is that all your proof?"

"All I can obtain at present."

"It's very weak," said Calton, scornfully.

"The weakest proofs may form a chain to hang a man," observed Kilsip, sententiously.

"Moreland gave his evidence clearly enough," said Calton, rising and walking up and down. "He met Whyte; they got drunk together. Whyte went out of the hotel, and shortly afterward Moreland followed with the coat, which was left behind by Whyte, and then somebody snatched it from him."

"Ah, did they?" interrupted Kilsip, quickly.

"So Moreland says," said Calton, stopping short. "I understand; you think Moreland was not so drunk as he says, and after following Whyte outside, put on his coat, and got into the cab with him." That is my theory."

"That is my theory."
"It's ingenious enough," said the barrister;
"but why should Moreland murder Whyte!
What motive had he?"
"Those papers"
"Pshaw! another idea of, Gorby's," said Calton, angrily. "How do you know there were any papers?"
The fact is, Calton did not intend Klisip to know that Whyte really had papers until he heard what Extremelal had a tell utm.

An Afigraces of Speech-Making of the Oniario Legislature.

Tobonyo, Jan. 26.—Before the House proceeded to the orders of the day yesterday Mr. Mowat referred in moving terms to the illness of his former colleague, Mr. Pardee. Before another session that able Minister and loved friend would have passed away. His death might occur even inc. Pardee. Before another session that able Minister and loved friend would have passed away. His death might occur even interfew days. Mr. Mowat was confident that he voiced the opinion of the members in an expression of the deepest and most respectful regret for the illness which was so soon te end in the death of their former esteemed colleague. As to the three appointments which had been made since the last session of the House, Mr. Mowat said that men might have been found who could fill the positions as well, but none who could fill them better. Mr. Meredith said a few graceful words of regret for the illness of Mr. Pardee. He hoped never to see the day when party feeling in Ontario should run so high that politicians would not pay tribute to the high qualities of such men as the former Minister of Crown Lands.

Mr. G. B. Smith (East York), in rising to open the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne, referred first to that portion of it touching upon the development of the agricultural industry. That, he said, was the subject given the greatest length in the speech. "I believe it has always been the policy of the Government to give that important industry the prominence it is entitled to." He spoke of the affiliation of the Agricultural College and the Provincial University and the degree of "Bachelor of Agriculture" which had been created and which would encourage the young Canadian to follow the farming profession. The value of the farmers' institute could hardly be over estimated.

Mr. E. J. Davis (North York) in rising value of the farmers' institute could hardly be over estimated.

Mr. E. J. Davis (North York) in rising to second the address made a long speech on the resources of Canadas, in connection with which he gave some statistics of Canadian minerals. He referred to the Mining Commission and the newspaper reports of its labors, and also to the project of providing better means for a practical, scientific 'education for mechanics and others. He spoke in culogistic terms of the Agricultural College and alro of the rich agricultural resources of Ontario, proving that young Canadians, need not go to the States to pursue with profit the farming industry.

States to pursue with profit the farming andustry.

The leader of the Opposition spoke at length. He referred to the question of annexation and said he hoped that the members on the other side would be found as patriotic and as fond of their country as are the gentlemen on his side of the House. He made a humorous allusion to the inter-provincial conference. Mr. Meredith charged that the Government made use of the Crooks Act for partisan purposes and said that it was not desirable that this state of things should continue.

of the Crooks Act for partisan purposes and said that it was not desirable that this state of things should continue.

Mr. Mowat in reply after referring to the interprovincial conference and the appointment of a new minister, said with regard to the licensing system that it is infinitely supperior in the public interest, to any other enforced in this or any other country. It is far superior to any project that has been proposed. If there are defects in it I am not surprised that there are so many, but that there are so few. The Premier denied that the government derived any political advantage from the system.

The address in reply was passed before the House rose. Several stereotyped notices of motion were sent-up to the clerk's table, among them being Mr. Waters' bill for woman suffrage. The House will sit again Monday afternoon at 3.

Berlin, Jan. 25.—The National Zeitung, referring to the action of the senatorial committee at Washington on the Samoa affair, says measures for the protection of the autonomy of the Samoa Islands are superfluous because it is not threatened by anyone. The sole interest of America consists in not allowing good relations with Germany to be jeopardized by a few intriguing adventurers.

The Vossische Zeitung holds that it would be a mistake to attach no importance to measures taken by President Cleveland merely because he is shortly to be succeeded by Mr. Harrison. It shows that authority for dealing with foreign affairs rests with the senate committee and warns the semi-official press that it would be unwise to try to appease the German sublice with the Cleveng subject to the committee of the cleveng subject to the cleveng subject to the committee of the cleveng subject to the committee of the cleveng subject to the cleveng subject to the cleveng subject to the committee of the cleveng subject to the cleveng s that it would be unwise to try to appeas the German public with "fallacious illu

A NEW MOVE BY THE C.P.R.

THE MANITOBA CROSSING TO BE FOUGHT IN THE COURTS.

dictor Clark Says a Bill Will be File at Once to Stop all Proceedings by the Red River Valley Rallway,

Red River Valley Ealiway,

Ottawa, Jan. 27.—There was a meeting of the Railway Committee of the Privy Council yesterday, Hou. J. H. Pope, Sir John Thomps—is Heetor Langevin and Hon. John Cat...; being present. In the cases of crossing the Canadian Pacific Railway in Manitoba the Portage la Prairie erossing was postponed and the crossing of the C. P. R. at Morris by the Northern Paoffic and Manitoba ethel as far as the committee is concerned.

In the course of argument Mr. G. M. Clark, solicitor for the Canadian Pacific, announced that the Canadian Pacific was not satisfied with the decision of the committee allowing the Red River Valley Railway to cross the Canadian Pacific Railway, and that the whole matter would be fought out in the courts. In conversation after the adjournment of the conmittee Mr. Clark said:

the adjournment of the consistee air. Clark said:

"We are about to file a bill stopping the whole of the prosectings and works by the Red River Valley Railway on the ground that their charter was only granted by the Provincial Legislature and does not give them authority to cross our lines. If the courts decide in our favor the result will be that the Red River road will have to come to the Dominion Parliament for a charter."

Mr. Gormully, when asked for an explanation of the Canadian Pacific Railway's move, said: "They have been over-ruled by the Railway Committee and now intendito apply to the courts. It won't deter us from going on with our road however. We have got the committee's sanction and theroad's action cannot have any effect upon us."

The Short Line deputation had an interview with the Privy Council yesterday, and urged that the Atlantic and Northwestern, which is virtually the Canadian Pacific Railway, should be made to carry out the agreement under which the subsidy to build the road was granted in 1885, namely, that it should connect with St. John, St. Andrew and Halifax. They pointed out that although the time for completing the road would expire on July 1, no commencement had yet been made on the branch from Harvey to Moneton, which was nocessary to give Halifax the desired commencium, and that it appeared as if the Canadian Pacific intended to content itself with reaching St. John.

John.

Sir John said that the intention undoubtedly was that Hallfax should reap the advantage of the short line as well as St. John, and he had no doubt that the Canadian Pacific Railway would endeavort ocarry out its agreement, but it would no doubt take a little more time than had been expected to do so. He promised that the representations of deputation should receive consideration.

Sir William Richards av Chief Institute.

ir William Richards, ex-Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, died at his residence here yesterday morning. He had been failing for a year past and had been confined to his bed for the last few weeks. The re-mains will be taken to Brockville, his birth-mans will be taken to Brockville, his birthplace, for interment.

The rumor that Mr. W. D. Harrington would be appointed collector of customs at Halifax in the place of Hon. Wm. Ross is confirmed. The appointment, it is understood, was made yesterday. Mr. Harrington, who was one of the Short Line deputation, is a member of the strensive wholesale grocery firm of Lawson & Harrington and represented the city of Halifax for several years in the Local Legislature.

The Labor Commission has very nearly completed its report, which will be ready for presentation to the House early in the session.

A Squaw killed and Horribiy Mutilated by Branken Companions.

LITTLE CURRENT, Jan. 23.—A terrible murderwas committed here last night. Two squaws named Christina Peshagonaqua and Shabotta Bearfoot left for the Sucker Creek Reserve about 10 o'clock, accompanied by four Indians named Brandy Mukadavin, Moses Esquimagh, Bob Black and Jack Douglass, in a leigh. About 11 another Indian awoke the chief, George Obotosoway, saying that he had found Christina Peshagonaqua dead on the road. The chief hurried to the spot and found the unfortunate creature quite dead and completely disembwelled.

After removing the body to the house of his sister, he promptly set to work and arrested the abovement and handed them over to Constable Mackenzie. The constable brought them, before Reeve Gibbon of Howland, who remanded them to the lock-up to await the result of an inquest. District Coroner Tucker of Manitowaning will hold the inquest to-morrow morning.

The body presented a shocking sight, and pieces of the intestines were strewed along the road on the snow. When last seen previous to the murder, the party were all under the influence of liquor.

Am Allenford Mestler Shet.

OWEN SOUND, Jan. 26.—This afternoon a serious shooting affair took place in Allenford in the County of Bruce, which in all probability will prove fatal. Three Indians of the Saugean Reserve came to Allenford from Wiarton under the influence of liquor and stopped at Warrilow's Hotel, where they were refused liquor. One of the number, Moses Moon, followed the hostler, Joseph Harkness, to the stable and without any provocation drew a revolver and fired. The ball entered Harkness' breast, piercing the right lung, and lodged in the back. The Indian made his escape, but was finally expurred and put under arrest this morning. Harkness is very low, inflammation having set in.

Perfect quiet prevails. Few police are seen on the streets, nearly all'being held in reserve. The Cabinet is summoned to meet at the Ministry of the Interior to-morrow.

Every quarter of Paris was enlivened last evening by frequent street brawls between supporters and opponents of General Boulanger. The most violent encounter took place in Montmartre, where a number of persons were wounded. The police interfered and arrested several of the ringleaders.
Another serious collision occurred in the Faubourg du Temple, where several persons were injured.

At several electoral meetings these were acenes of great disorder. Bands of men and lads singing the Marsellaise and Boulangist songs paraded the boulevards until a late hour. In the Place de la Republique, and the Place de l'Opora open-air meetings were held. Great masses of people were present, but the proceedings were on the whole fairly orderly, although a few individual brawls occurred and a number of persons were arrested.

To-day opened fine, and at an early hour the streets began to fill with people, the general stir and bustle increasing as the morning wore on. At noon the electors were thronging toward the 266 balloting stations. The vote was the heaviest ever polled in the district. The Boulangists were everywhere first at the voting places and displayed the greatest applicance in their success. The voters of the Faubourg
St. Germain and Champs Elysees districts were nearly all Boulangist, but the issue really depended upon the vote in the workmen's quarters, especially in the Belleville, Chalronne, St. Denis and Courbevoid districts.

ville, Chaironne, St. Denis and Courbevoie districts.

One morning paper engaged 250 special reporters, each of whom was provided with a cab, and 30 bigyclists, to bring the results in each section with the greatest possible speed.

The Boulangists counted upon a majority of 30,000 for their candidate. Among other things the Boulangists predict the immediate fall of the Floquet ministry, the dissolution of Parliament and a general election in March. They also forcests a rupture in the Radical party and express belief, that forty Radical members will join the Boulangist ranks and thus give the General a following of sixty members in the present chambers.

will join the Boulangist ranks and thus give the General a following of sixty mem bers in the present chambers.

The Prefect of Police to-day enlisted the services of a large number of householders to aid the police in maintaining order. Troops were held in readiness at various points and cavalry were ordered to patrol the streets and disperse all gatherings. Municipal guards lined the boulevard.

General Boulanger this afternoon said he felt sure then that his majority would be 60,000. The General's electoral organization was perfect. His followers everywhere were instructed to maintain order. The excitement grew at 8 o'clock when the return showed Boulanger's majority to be 5000 in the St. Denis district and that he polled three times more votes than his opponent in the Sth arrondissement.

The members of the Government are astounded at the result. Bets were freely offered that the ministry would resign tomorrow. Boulanger will resign the Seine seat, retaining that for the Nord. It is rumored that Maquin, the governor of the bank, will be asked to form a cabinet.

THERE MAY BE TROUBLE. Apprehension Caused by Last Week's Wild

Apprehension Caused by Last Week's Wild Scenes in Ireland.
London, Jan. 27.—The wild scenes witnessed on Thursday at Carrick-on-Suir and Skibbereen have caused apprehension as possibly putting an end to the long period of comparative tranquility in Ireland. Any repetition of these scenes may bring grievous trouble. The Chief Secretary is a resolute man, and his famous order to shoot if necessary, which was repeated during the Falcarragh evictions recently with even more emphasis, will surely be put into execution if he finds the attentions of the people too embarrassing, and especially if the cution if he finds the attentions of the people too embarrassing, and especially if the police are recklessly dealt with. To touch his executive officers is to touch Mr. Balfour himself, and bloody work may be witnessed if the scenes of Thursday bring others in their train. Authority will be supported at all costs. The belief in Government circles is that the Carrick incident and the dramatic withdrawal of Mr. Healy and Mr. O'Brien were all prearranged.

Mr. Chamberlain's speech at Birmingham on Wechnesday continues to be discussed. He publicly abandoned his friendship for Mr. Morley, which was patched up after a long coolness some little time back, and everybody is asking, "What are the obligations which he throws in the teeth of the member for Newcastle?"

The remarks of the orator on the Fisheries question are generally praised, and the love is wide that General Harrison will see

The King will make the society a present of a vast sanitarium for this purpose. The scheme is considered as important as the Congo enterprise.

The head was then sent to the chiefs on the Coal Operatives Out of Work.

SHENANDOAH, Pa., Jan. 27.—Nearly 3000 men were thrown out of work in this part of the coal regions by the suspension of all the Lehigh Coal Company and individual collieries. The "strippings" at this place and Mahanoy City also suspended, adding several hundred men for whom there is no work to the list. Crowds of idle men stand about the street corners discussing the situation. All the Philadelphis and Reading collieries are in operation.

The Bradly Smoked Sausage.

Lacusse, Wis., Jan. 27.—Vesterday morning Robert Schen, a shoemaker, bought soute smoked sausage and the whole family, consisting of himself, wife and five children, ate heartily of it. They soon became deathly sick. Physicians were called and by hard work the older-niembers of the family were got out of danger. It is doubtful first the sounger ones will recover. Schen had been in jail for abusing his wife and the family were half starved. The matter will be investigated.

Wholesale Peculation at the Central Perison

Toronto, Jan. 28.—Guard John Spence of the Central Prison and Edward R. Cates, foreman in the Brandon factory, were arrested on Saturday charged with wholesale peculation from the Central Prison. Stolen property was found in the house of both and also in that of John R. Hocking, also a foreman for the Brandon Company. A recently discharged convict gave the snap away. The scheme, according to him, was a very -simple one. The convicts, would steal the goods, tools, etc., and pass them to the accused, who, having the right of ingress and egress without being searched, could easily carry off the booty. Outside it would be disposed of for the mutual benefit of the convict and his accomplice. The former received as his share a supply of tobacco, while the accomplice kept the balance of the profits. It is estimated that the peculation which has just been discovered has been going on for years, and that thousands of dollars have been lost either to the Government or the Brandon Company.

Mary Ann Albert, a domestic in the employ of J. V. Adams, 84 Degrassi-street, met with a peculiar death on Saturday morning. She attended to the morning duties of the household, but was not seen around the house after 8 o'clock. As soon as she was missed Mr. and Mrs. Adams searched for her, with the result that the body of the unfortunate girl was found in the feeding box in the atable. It is thought that Miss Albert had gone into the hayloft to feed the pony, as she sometimes did in the absence of Mr. Adams, and while in the act of forcing the hay down the feeding-box had fallen over and had suffocated before assistance came. Coroner Johnson, as soon as informed of her death issued a warrant for an inquest to be held to-day, but withdrew it later in the day. Miss Albert was the daughter of the unfortunate County Constable Albert, who was sent enced to life in Kingston Penitentiary for shooting a lad named Young at Grenadier Pon d.

Bowmanville, Jan. 26.—Another large fire occurred here this morning about 3 o'clock. The wagon shop was maured for $250 in the British American. The blacksmith shop was owned by Mrs. M. Reed of Toronto, and occupied by D. O'Connor, who had $100 insurance in the Citizens'. GERMANY AND ENGLAND.

THE REICHSTAG DEBATE: ON THE

and Germany are in Perfect Accord on

BERLIN, Jan. 26.—The East Alrican Bill came up in the Reichstag to-day. The Chamber was crowded. At 11 o'clock Count Herbert Bismarck arose and explained the reasons which had prompted the Government to introduce the measure. He said the stunction demanded heavy sacrifices. He reviewed the position of affairs at each German station and emphasized the danger in which they were placed. The navy, he said, had done its duty beyond all expectations, but without aid it could not accomplish much. A police force was necessary. The demands of the bill were reasonable. The efforts of the Commercial Company alone could not suffice to protect the interests of Germany in East Africa. Hence the Empire was compelled to intervene. The Govern-All Points, Herr Bamberger followed Captain Wissman, strongly opposing the measure.

Prince Bismarck asserted that the best relations existed between Germany and England and Germany and Zanzibar. "If," he said, "Germany wants tropical countries she must keep East Africa. I was not originally a colonial man, but now I follow the will of the majority of the German nation.

After the discussion the bill was referred to a committee of twenty-one members, under urgency. The measure will be reported and read a second time on Tuesday.

The interest in the debate centered in the speech of Prince Bismarck, which was delivered with unusual animation, an easy flow of words, fewer pauses than usual and unmistakeable earnestness.

Prince Bismarck opened with a reference to the allusions of Herr Bamberger and Dr. Windthorst making him responsible for everything happening in East Africa. He said he could not undertake to be responsible for everything and that something must be left to the officials sent there to settle shairs. He then continued:

colonial questions.

The Chancellor next adverted to the criticisms of Herr Bamberger, taunting him with his change of colonial policy. He read passages from speeches made in 1895 and admitted he had departed from the opinions therein expressed, but his present action was dictated solely by immediate circumstances.

The Daily Review.

MONDAY, JANUARY 28, 1889.

THE debate on the address in the Ontario Legislature was not long drawn out, as the House has adopted the sensible custom of not wasting time upon it. Mr. Meredith was the only member of the Opposition who spoke, and he delivered a brilliant address. spoke, and he delivered a brilliant address. The flat failure of the great interprovincial conference which met at Quebec, where money was lavishly spent and long resolutions adopted, afforded a good opening and the opportunity was not lost. After all the add that was made about the conference, the resolutions were presented to the Legislatures and then dropped and during the past year nothing, has been done about them. ar nothing has been done about them. year nothing has been done about them.
Mr. Meredith had facts on his side when he pointed out that the recent decision of the Privy Council was a vindication of the policy of the Conservatives regarding the disputed terrifory. They had urged that the question should be settled by the Privy Council, and when the Government thally consented to a reference to that Privy Council, and when the Government thaily consented to a reference to that tribunal a favorable decision was obtained. In the recent case the question was carried to that court with a similar result. All the trouble about the territory could have been settled as easily if the Government had not determined on making party capital even if the country did suffer by it. Mr. Meretith's approval of the establishment of a dith's approval of the establishment of a department of agriculture will be generally endorsed, as will also his disapproval of the addition of another member to the Cab-inet. While the Ministers have time to devote to cases of private litigants and to ap-pear in the courts for clients the country should not be called upon to pay the ex-penses of an additional Minister. The leadpenses of an additional alinister. The lead-er of the Opposition acted wisely when he drew the attention of the Government to the fact that expenditure in the direction of higher education had been defective. While higher education should be nurtured and no retrograde movement allowed, im-provements are desirable. That the assess-ment law needs amending is generally acment law needs amending is generally ac-khowledged. The County Council of Pet-erborough at its recent session unanimous-ly adopted a petition to the Legislature regarding it. The Government is either lacking in knowledge, ability or courage when it does not deal with the question. Mr. Meredith made home trusts when he charged the Government with operating the liquor laws for partisan purposes. Not only has the Government appropriated a large portion of the license revenue, but they have also made use of the laws as machines for influencing votes. Mr. Mowat attempted to break the force of this attack by stating that licenses were doubt, from facts published, that Liberals have been favored in this particular, but

Origin of a Popular Soug.

The popular ballad, "Listen to the Mocking Bird," was written and first published in 1855, by Septiamus Winner, of Philadelphia, under the nom de plume of "Alice Hawthorne," his mother's maiden name. It was suggested incidentally by listening to a colored man, Dick Milburn, known as "Whistling Dick," who wandered about the city whistling in initation of mocking bird, at the same time strumming an accompaniment upon the guitar. Struck by his remarkable performance as a warbler Mr. W. said to him one day, half in jest, "Dick, I'll white you a song for your mocking bird." The compass of the colored man's voice was hardly an octave, and, as will be observed, the melody was made very simple, so as not to be beyond his reach. The words, "Listen to the Mocking Bird," which ran higher, were to be spoken by him, not sung, except where they came within his compass, followed by the whistler's marvelous imitation of the bird. that they have.

when Conservatives have received licenses have they been left free to exercise the right to vote without pressure from those who held the power to withhold the license?

If Mr. Mowat does not know that the liquor laws have been used for partisan purposes—and it is scarcely possible that he does not—there are other members of the Government and Liberal and Conservative members of the Legislature who know well were to be spoken by him, not sung, except where they came within his compass, followed by the whistler's marvelous imitation of the bird.

The man was a very good natured fellow, but of so little intellectual capacity that though he came to Mr. Winner's music store night after night to learn the words of the song, he was never able to master more than one verse of it. Such, however, was his sense of the comic and such his facility in improvising lines to the music, suggesting ridiculous fancies to attract the crowd, that his "Mocking Bird" soon added greatly to Dick's local reputation. The song was published in ballad form, and at once became very popular, and such is its hold upon the public fancy that although it has been sung and whistled and played the country over for an average lifetime, it still retains its place as a song of national reputation.—Philadelphia Record.

A LIMIT TO COMPLACENCY

New York, Jan. 27.—The Edbune's fondous special says. English reachs with Germany are much like flower's five United States. The English have not yet talked of voling money statefend British inferests in Affica or elsewhere, but have allowed it to be known that there is, as The Standard puts it, a limit to complacency, and this is drawn at any overt or covertattack upon the independence of the Sultan of Zanzibar. Public, feeling here is calm, but none the less very strong and deep on this point, and it is clearly time for the Government to speak even more plainly. The Arabs are beating the Germans at all points, and unless Prince Bismarck is ready to allow his navy to cut a very ridiculous figure, some strong measures must soon be taken to give check to the Arabs. This cannot, however, be effective, unless it involves landing a party and something more—a force which is prepared to march into the country and bring the enemy to a battle which shall be decisive. This issue has been foreseen from the first, and has caused continuous uneasiness about British co-operation in the so-called blockade. The question now is, how far can the Germans act without involving England?

So far, Lord Salisbury has faithully observed his promise not to go an Lach beyond a naval promenade in company with Germany. Prince Bismarck's persuasions have been of no avall, and public opinion will prevent them succeeding now, the more that the English are already suffering prejudicates from the German attack upon the Arabs. The nurder of an English missionary on the coast and the seizure of the stores of the Universities Missions by Bushiri, look as if discrimination between Englishmen and Germans were at an end. If it should set turn out, the lives of many missionaries and traders would be endangered; and the first step taken by the Germans above will produce an outcry which must have effects highly displeasing to Prince Bismarck.

Altogether the situation is critical in more ways than one. If Prince Bismarck is content to mark time pending

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 27.—Many people in Seward County, Kan, are reported to be on the verge of atarvation. Appeals have been sent to various places and yesterday a letter was received by the postmaster here from Mrs. James K. Richardson, who lives 11 miles from West Plains, in which she says.

"Many of us have not sufficient food and only a few have enough clothes to hide our nakedness. There is no opportunity for the people to earn anything by labor, as there is nothing to do and no money to recompense them if such were the case. Children are without proper nourishment and the mild winter alone has been their salvation."

A Horse Killed. A Horse Killed.

On Saturday evening shortly before eight o'clock as Mr. Robt. Redman was returning from Lakefield with one of his livery rige drawn by a team of horses and just as he came around the turn in the road at Aubarn he met with an aecident which resulted in the death of one of the horses. When Redman turned the corner a farmer in a one-horse cutter was coming up on his wrong side of the road and when, turning out to avoid a collision the back of Redman's buggy slewed round and struck the farmers cutter. The shock of the collision broke the neck yoke of the livery man's team, thus causing the pole to drop onto the road and the horses becoming frightened started off at a run. Seeing the danger of driving with the pol sliding along the frozen ground Redman pulled the team into the ditch and in doing so one of the horses struck his shoulder against a telegraph pole. The horses and rig were brought to town, but just after arriving at the stables the horse that collided with the pole On Saturday evening shortly before eight anything but pleasant. The rev. gentle-man took for the basis of his discourse the

"God was manifest to the flesh, justified in the spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory,"—I Timothy, 316. He said he need hardly remind them that of all passages in Scripture this had been one of the most critizised and even the microscope had been brought to bear upon the manuscript to find the proper inter-pretation of one of the words. He was not going into the question of exigesis, over which had been fought so many battles, but would try and extract some practical knowledge from it. He spoke of the minis-try of the Apoetle Paul who he said had try of the Apostle Paul who he said had more to establish Christianity than any other man, and from one of whose two letters to Timothy the words were taken. He said if he was not a firm believer in the Lord Jesus Christ he would not be there to-night and he could not understand how any person with heart feelings and a

YEARNING DESIRE FOR ETERNAL ife, could believe and attempt to practice a doctrine from which the Lord Jesus Christ was eliminated. This was to him the very key stone of his religion. The text stood out in the Scriptures as one of the grandest and most majestic of its truths. In beautiful language the rev. gentleman pictured and told the story of gentleman pictured and told the story of the birth of our Saviour and said that the star that pointed to the place of the Saviour's birth pointed to the solution of life—the great problem of how the world of sin was to be pardoned. "Justified in the Spirit." The meaning attached to the term justify or justification as used in the text was, he said, vindication, and h there was just as much need of the vindi-cation of the Holy Spirit to-day as in the early days of the Saviour. They should have all the culture schools could give hem, all the classical and scientific teaching that was possible, but beyond everything else that was necessary to have to cope with the wickedness of our time and bring about those revolutions which were needed in society was the justification o the Holy Spirit. He had noticed that all the men who had ACCOMPLISHED A GREAT work towards lifting the world up higher had relied upon the justification of the Holy Spirit, and how much better in the homes and society and how much better fitted to do good in this world they were if they had this justification. "Preached to the Gentiles." What had this to do with it? This told them how wide God's forgiveness was; it took in the whole world. He blessed God for this spirit of blessing running through the Gospel, which was for all mankind, every class of man, for the cultured and the ignorant. There was no other plan of salvation and no other means by which men could be saved, and they might just as well go back and preach the Gospel pure and simple. The world would never be right until its commercial, its social and its spiritual life was permeated by the gospel of the dispised Nazarine. Were they to ask him for a grand and potent argument for Christianity he would go right round the world, to the Orientals, to the Indians, to the Antipodes, and to all who had believed in the Christian faith and gather them in one great throng and say here is my argument. He heard men say that the funeral procession of Christianity would be along in a few years, but it did not look like it when they knew that ten Protestant churches were being erected every day. In glowing, language he de-picted the glory of the hour of climax in the Saviour's life and in conclusion said

ng the Proposed Road from Co bourg to the C. P. R.

The court room of the Cobourg Town Hall was crowded to the doors Wednesday night, says the Port Hope Times, with an enthusiastic audience from the town, with large deputations from the townships of Hamil ton, Peroy, Haldimand, and other localities through which the proposed line to connect the C.P.R. with the town, will be located. The chair was occupied by Mr. Mulholland-ex-M.P.P., and speeches delivered by Wm Kerr, W. E. Riddell, Mr. Guillet, M. P., Edward Cochrane, M.P., Mayor Clark and others. The proposed line, which is 37½ miles in length, is estimated to cost $375,000 or at the rate of $10,000 per mile. It was clearly demonstrated that traffic enough could be secured to make the road a paying investment. Previous to holding the evening meeting, there was an informal gather than of december from the townships to dis-County Council Chamber,

ROBBIE BURNS' BIRTHDAY.

Friday, 25th instant, was the 130 birth-day of Scotland's great poet, and the fol-lowing tribute is paid him by "a plougman.":-

Over one hundred years have fled Since light its dawning beams first shed, When life and muse were truly wed, On the first of Robble's birthdaya.

When drifting snows, like spray-dashed wave, While wind and storm held high conclave, A hand supreme to Scotla gave Her dear immortal Robbie, A child of nature stored with lays, Her true born bard—to sing her praise, To sketch her burns and paint her braes; Poet-artist grand was Robbie.

A gem of wit, a world-wide ray, A soul of genius cased in clay, A star to shine, then pass away— Short was the life of Robble.

Honest sons of toll seemed in his mind, Above crowned heads or lords refined; Vain hypocrites were well defined By the sharp lash of our Robbie.
